REED LOSES SEAT; JOINS BRYAN TO KILL WILSON LEAGUE

1 DIES, 12 HURT, AS INTERURBAN RAMS FREIGHT

Motorman Pays for Error with Life.

One man was killed and twelve persons were injured yesterday afternoon when an interurban train on the Aurora, Elgin and Chicago third rail system, traveling at express speed, crashed into a freight train at Bellwood. Scores of others received minor injuries.

Failure of the motorman, M. J. Smith of West Chicago, to heed a semaphore signal was given by officials of the road as the cause of the accident. Smith paid for his mistake with his life. He stuck to his post as the front car of the four coach limited struck the freight train broadside, plowed through a box cars, leaped the track, and turned over on its side. Then, pinned in the wreckage of the motorman's compartment, while Marshal William A. Geary of Bellwood and others fought vainly to extricate him, he directed the rescue of a number of passengers before he lapsed into unconsciousness. He was dead when the debris finally was chopped away and his body removed.

List of the Injured.

The more seriously injured are:

Louis Wetteland, 1106 South Austin avenue, Oak Park; skull fracture; not expected to live.

L. I. Pelton, Wheaton, an Aurora, Elgin and Chicago motorman traveling as passenger; internal injuries; condition serious.

Andrew Brunzell, 213 Main street, Wheaton.

Joseph L. Francis, 726 Waveland avenue, Chicago.

Malkins Hopper, Glen Ellyn.

Lawrence J. Sullivan, Wheaton.

Nicholas Surjes, Lombard.

George A. Smith, Elgin.

Curtis A. Molter, Lombard.

Charles Rahn, Dundee.

M. J. Steffens, Glen Ellyn.

The interurban train had been made up at Wheaton and consisted of two two-coach trains from Aurora and Elgin. It left Wheaton at 3:30 o'clock in charge of Conductor C. E. Berry and was due in Chicago at 4:30.

Trapped at Intersection.

The accident occurred shortly before 4 o'clock. An Indiana Harbor Belt line switch engine was taking a string of three cars over a spur to O'Laughlin's stone quarry in South Bellwood.

Smith evidently thought the freight train would continue along the Chicago Great Western tracks, which parallel those of the interurban at that point, but instead the engine suddenly swerved over the switch directly across the path of the oncoming interurban train. Passengers say they felt the shock as Smith threw on the emergency brakes and then released them, as though attempting to get the electric train across the spur ahead of the freight.

Instead the limited struck the first freight car behind the engine. The second coach partly telescoped the first and was dragged over half way on its side. The third coach also left the rails.

Crash Heard for Mile.

The crash was heard for a radius of a mile. Residents of Bellwood and Maywood hurried to the scene in their automobiles and assisted in carrying the wounded to the Oak Park hospital.

Many of those only slightly injured aided in the rescue work and then were brought to Chicago on the fourth train, which backed up and was brought in over the westbound track by the train following.

Blames Motorman's Error.

"It was an individual error," said C. J. Jones, superintendent of transportation of the interurban line. "There are three reasons why Smith should have stopped or at least slowed down his train. First, a wagon road crosses the track; he should have slowed down for that. Second, there is the Bellwood station. Third, there is an electrically operated semaphore on the spot which gives the danger signal when a freight passes over the spur. The danger signal was up and the semaphore was in perfect working condition after the wreck; therefore there is no reason to believe it failed to work when the train approached."

Blame for the accident probably will be fixed at the inquest into Smith's death, which Coroner Hoffman has set for tomorrow.

ADMIRAL DECKER SCORES DANIELS IN SIMS ATTACK

Says Naval Secretary Is Playing Politics.

Washington, June 26.—Attacks on Secretary Daniels and Assistant Secretary Roosevelt are made by Rear Admiral Benton C. Decker, commandant of the seventh naval district, Florida, in letters to Chairman Hale of the senate naval investigating committee, which were published today in the Army and Navy Register, a service journal.

REAR ADMIRAL B. C. DECKER.

The officer charges the naval secretary in his recent testimony before the committee "intentionally and deliberately" misrepresented certain acts of Rear Admirals Sims, Fullam and Fiske, and that he had determined to "break" these officers because they "would not follow him to the limit of demoralizing and degrading the navy."

Likened to Prussianism.

Admiral Decker asserts in this effort, Mr. Daniels had used "all the power of his high office, the power of ridicule, sarcasm and half truths, the strength of publicity secured through his newspaper connections—all the weapons which Prussianism used to destroy its enemies and autocracy has used through the ages to maintain its power."

The admiral declared that to him, as to other high officers of the navy, "it has come that if we would bow down and do the wishes of Mr. Daniels we would receive the rewards therefor—intimations that come by circuitous routes and underhand, sneaking ways, so that no one can take hold of them."

In any reorganization of the navy, the admiral continued, the best interests of the country demanded there should be placed in the department an officer "big enough and broad enough and of sufficient ability to maintain the standards of the navy against the encroachments of civilian secretaries who seek to make of the navy a political organization."

Roosevelt Is Assailed.

Admiral Decker assailed Assistant Secretary Roosevelt for his references in a recent communication to a member of congress to a "holier-than-thou" group of officers at the Navy War college at Newport. He declared Mr. Roosevelt did not scorn these officers when he met them in "rich clubs in New York and Washington."

Both Secretary Daniels and Assistant Secretary Roosevelt are at San Francisco to attend the Democratic national convention.

At the senate investigation it developed that Admiral Decker had been removed as naval attaché at Madrid following representations to the state department by Ambassador Willard that the admiral in his work there was encroaching on diplomatic functions.

FAINTS AT DEATH VERDICT ON MAN; "HE IS INNOCENT"

Memphis, Tenn., June 26.—[Special.]—Mary D. Thompson-McNamara, 17 years old, for an assault on whom Allen J. McNamara must die in the electric chair, fainted today when she heard the news of the state Supreme court's decision sentencing him to die on Aug. 20.

"He is innocent," she muttered as she sank to the floor.

At a late hour this afternoon the girl was still in a state of collapse. Occasionally regaining consciousness, momentarily she would cry out: "He is innocent! He didn't do it! They made me testify against him!"

Soon after Mary Thompson testified against Allen McNamara she married Allen's brother, August McNamara. Later she signed an affidavit saying her testimony was false.

Women's Hats Necessities; What Is Profiteering Price?

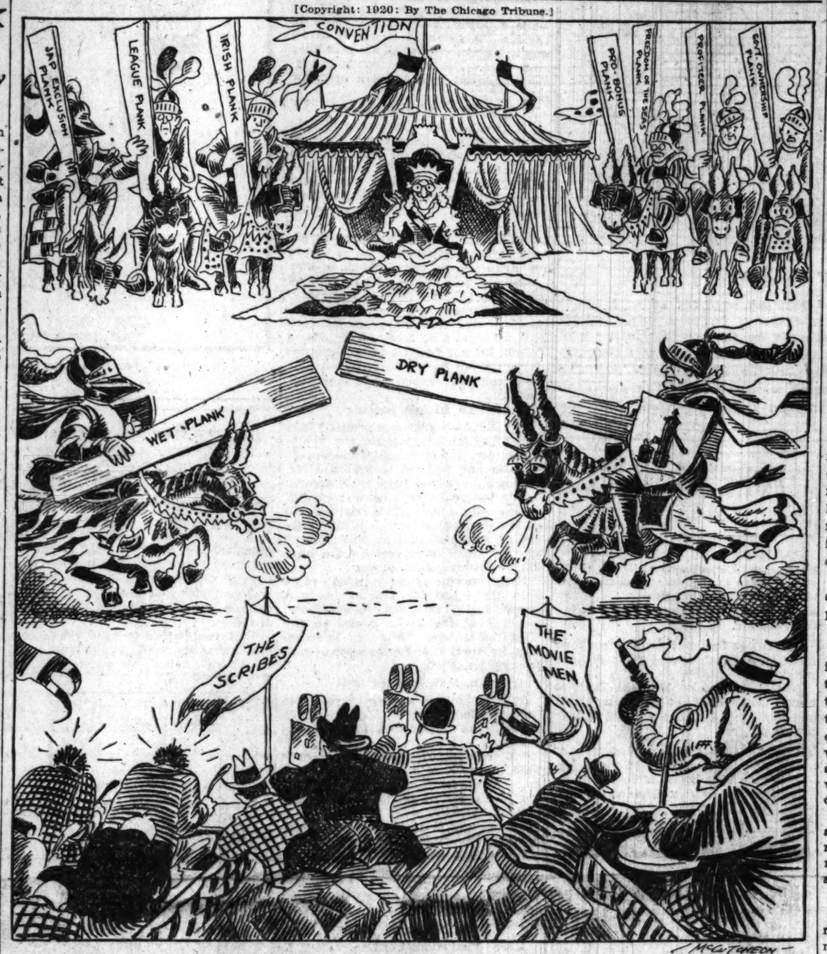
Washington, D. C., June 26.—Women's hats, plain or adorned, are necessities of life under the Lever act, Howard Figg, special assistant to the attorney general, ruled today, in reply to the National Retail Milliners' association. That association asked as to prosecution for "profiteering in necessities."

Rockefeller's Estate Is Searched for Convict

Tarrytown, N. Y., June 26.—The estate of John D. Rockefeller at Pocantico Hills, was surrounded by armed guards tonight while state troopers and attendants from the Westchester County penitentiary with two bloodhounds vainly searched the grounds for Frank McCord, a prisoner who escaped last night.

AT THE GREAT FRISCO TOURNAMENT

[Copyright: 1920: By The Chicago Tribune.]



And when all the Sir Knights and their esquires did gather at the jousting place there was a great ado, for there was overmuch on hand. Sir Bryan de Bone Dry did address Sir Cox de Wet, saying, "I shall never be at ease till that I have had ado with you." So the two gallant knights rode forth onto the field, for Sir Bryan had in mind to smote Sir Cox grievously and Sir Cox had in mind to smote Sir Bryan in like wise. Therewith they mounted upon their chargers and each took a great spear in his hand ready for to joust. At a signal from the trumpeter the two knights charged with a roar like thunder—

Stenographer Stole $1,200 from Rex Beach, Charge

New York, June 26.—[Special.]—In January, 1919, Rex Beach employed Paul Dair as stenographer. In November Beach went to Mexico, leaving a book of signed checks for the use of Mrs. Beach. Dair, Beach alleges, used the checks himself and collected at least $1,200. A month later, Beach charges, Dair, posing as Beach's confidential friend, borrowed $1,500 from a "pal" of the author in Chicago. Dair has been arrested.

Buys Whisky, Gets Wood Alcohol—$25,000 Verdict

Trenton, N. J., June 26.—[Special.]—Judgment has been entered in Supreme court here for a verdict of $25,000 recently awarded in Hudson Circuit court to Michael Kulik of Bayonne against Samuel Greenberg, a saloonkeeper at Bayonne, who, it was alleged, sold Kulik a quantity of "whisky" containing wood alcohol.

WRECK OF WINE CARS GIVES JOY TO IOWA TOWN

Defiance, Ia., June 26.—[Special.]—Citizens of this city are not worrying today whether the Democrats at San Francisco put a wet plank in their platform or not, because every man, woman or child who had an empty pail, and was not too ill to go to the railroad station, had an opportunity of laying in a supply of the finest California port wine.

Early yesterday morning there was a freight wreck on the road running through Defiance, and two of the damaged cars contained the wine. They were tank cars of 90,000 gallons capacity, and were consigned to the United States government at New York. When they began leaking idlers at the station discovered they contained something more palatable than petroleum, and it wasn't long before there was a line of men and women with buckets, tin pails, pans, and even wash boilers, on the way to the station.

The Volstead act will not bother Defiance for some months, according to reports, unless Uncle Sam makes the citizens give up the liquor.

U. S. Warship Beaver Aground at Kingston

Kingston, Jamaica, June 26.—The United States warship Beaver is ashore in Kingston harbor and efforts to float it have thus far been unavailing.

The vessel, which is the "mother ship" of submarine division No. 2, was on the way to Guantanamo last evening when it struck a mud bank.

A tug is assisting the Beaver, but it is believed likely that the British warship Cambrian will be called upon to help. The position of the Beaver is not dangerous.

At the same time his father and mother celebrated their silver wedding anniversary, and his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Swanson, 3733 North Paulina street, celebrated their golden wedding day. The Swansons were married in Sweden. Their daughter was married to Hunt in Chicago.

CONVENTION NEWS —IN BRIEF—

San Francisco, Cal., June 26.—(Special.)—Latest developments in the pre-convention struggles among the Democrats are:

McAdoo re-enters race for Democratic nomination for presidency under leadership of Burleson and other members of administration. He looms as strongest of the three major candidates. Marshall being groomed as best dark horse.

Senator Reed joins Bryan and Senator Walsh in finish fight against Wilson league plank. All factions dodge wet issue as a part of platform.

National committee recognizes Palmer group of Georgia delegates and refuses to give Senator Reed of Missouri a seat in the convention.

Bryan predicts utter rout for wet forces; will fight for a dry plank, and welcomes fight on issue on floor of convention.

Platform builders facing many troubles in selecting planks that will please all factions. Friends of Ireland and W. J. Bryan would choose own lumber.

Women working hard for favorite candidates; Antoinette Funk, booming McAdoo, says at least 75 per cent of the women delegates are for him. Women of New York say: "Smith on the first ballot, only as compliment; then Cox."

Accident During Operation Proves Fatal to Doctor

Dr. J. P. Lynch of 5352 Magnolia avenue, with an office for thirty years at 3035 Indiana avenue, injected serum in a patient recently. The point of the needle broke and the physician's finger was scratched. Blood poisoning developed.

Dr. Charles M. Matter of 4030 Prairie avenue attended Dr. Lynch, but could not check the poison. Dr. Lynch died yesterday. He is survived by a widow. The funeral will be held Tuesday afternoon. Burial at Rosehill.

Two Bubonic Plague Cases Fatal at Catania, Italy

Washington, D. C., June 26.—Bubonic plague has appeared at Catania, Italy. Several cases, two of them fatal, were reported to the state department today by the American consul there.

RUM OUTCAST; ALL FACTIONS DODGE ISSUE

Plan to Let Ticket Tell the Story.

BY ARTHUR M. EVANS.

San Francisco, Cal., June 26.—[Special.]—He's here again with bells on; same old voice, same old smile, same old Bryan.

This morning he had the Demon Rum, now defunct, by the tail, swinging it around his head, and threatening it with a second death in the form of a dry plank in the Democratic platform. That prospect was weakened, however, when the Gov. Cox management announced that the liquor issue is settled—that the matter is now one of law enforcement simply, and that:

"Prohibition is a fact, and there should be no reference to it in the platform."

Goes After Mr. Wilson's League.

Then Mr. Bryan—though still holding that the platform must have a distinct dry plank—turned his attention to Mr. Wilson and his league of nations. The Commoner held a hour's conference on this subject tonight with Senator Walsh of Massachusetts and Senator Reed of Missouri (who was deprived of his delegate's seat today).

This three handed conference, Senator Walsh said later, determined to make a first anti-Wilson effort in the resolutions committee by offering substitutes for the administration plank.

Ready to Fight on the Floor.

If defeated in the resolutions committee Senator Walsh said, it is planned to present a minority report to the convention itself. The major concern of those in the movement, the Massachusetts man added, is to prevent commitment of the party to unreserved ratification of the present league covenant.

The three leaders who met in Mr. Bryan's rooms have been regarded as the principal opponents of President Wilson's course in the senate and also as forecasted before the convention. Senator Walsh voted for ratification with the Lodge reservations. Mr. Bryan spoke for ratification with the majority reservations to avoid the treaty's becoming a campaign issue. Reed joined with the Republican irreconcilables.

Cox Against Wet Plank.

The surprising development in the wet-dry fight came early in the day when James E. Campbell, former governor of Ohio and spokesman for the Ohioans, announced that Gov. Cox is against a wet plank, against a moist plank, and thinks the platform should be neither damp nor dry.

During the afternoon the Pennsylvania delegation tackled the liquor issue in caucus, and the drys voted down, 60 to 13, the proposition to instruct for a wet plank.

The Kentucky delegates, instructed for Cox, also held a caucus, in which they expressed themselves for a silent plank on rum. Senator J. C. W. Beckham will represent them on the resolutions committee.

The Campbell statement, the result of the Pennsylvania caucus, and the avowal of the Kentuckians did clear the atmosphere somewhat.

This status leaves Gov. Edward I. Edwards of New Jersey, the banker-vestryman, who has not crooked his elbow in thirty years, as the only candidate now on the boards who wants an explicit platform declaration on "liberalized likker."

Tends to Help Cox.

Also it tended to strengthen Cox, especially among country delegates, who, listening to the lobby talk of the wets, were begining to fancy that Cox never heard of a mackintosh nor carried an umbrella.

"Gov. Cox does not consider the Democratic platform the proper place for the wet or dry issue," former Gov. Campbell said. "We don't look on prohibition as an issue one way or the other. Gov. Cox has refused to be used by either element. His record is one of law enforcement."

All of which seems to coincide with the views of all other candidates in the field, with the exception of Gov. Edwards.

Booze Main Issue—Bryan.

Bryan was in a barber chair at the St. Francis getting a fresh haircut when the news of Ohio's stand percolated the lobbies. But it did not change the Nebraskan's views, apparently, for soon afterward, at a luncheon at the Commonwealth club, he reiterated that booze is the main issue and cannot be kept out of the platform.

SENATOR TO TAKE DELEGATE FIGHT TO CONVENTION

Georgia Contest Won by Palmer.

(By a Staff Correspondent.)

San Francisco, Cal., June 26.—[Special.]—Senator James A. Reed of Missouri, bitter opponent of the league of nations, in and out of the senate, today was refused a seat in the Democratic convention by the national committee. The vote was 34 to 12.

SENATOR J. A. REED

At the same time the committee recognized the Palmer group of delegates in the Georgia contest by unanimous vote.

Thus the administration forces won two sweeping victories in the pre-convention strength tests.

How Reed was Ousted.

The vote by states to keep Reed out of the convention follows:

FOR REED.
California,	Nebraska,
Delaware,	Nevada,
Illinois,	New Jersey,

Arkansas, Louisiana, Oklahoma, West Virginia, Wisconsin, and District of Columbia were not recorded as voting.

Will Appeal His Case.

Immediately after the poll, Senator Reed charged steam roller tactics, and declared he would carry his fight to the credentials committee, and, if necessary, to the floor of the convention. The beaten Georgia delegation served notice it would take the same steps.

E. H. Moore of Ohio, head of the Cox campaign organization, led the fight for Reed in the executive session of the committee, after two hours of fiery argument in which the lie was passed, the German "goosestep" cry was raised, and President Wilson and the league of nations were lauded to the skies.

Glass Opposes Reed.

Senator Carter Glass of Virginia, for the administration, was the floor leader against the Missourian, and is held largely responsible for the large sized vote by which the Kansas City district is left with only one delegate on the temporary roll.

Senator Reed did not ask for the floor during the presentation of the case. He sat tight while men and women from his home state larruped him as an enemy of Democracy and particularly of President Wilson.

The senator's case was presented as a technical and legal proposition. Evidence was presented to show that the district caucus had named him properly and legally; that the state convention had refused to ratify that selection and referred the case back to the district delegates without prejudice; and that the district delegates a second time unanimously had reelected him.

Hard Blows from Woman.

Mrs. W. W. Martin, a Missouri delegate from Cape Girardeau, landed perhaps the hardest blow upon her senator.

"Senator Reed, as a loyal and true Democrat and as a United States senator from Missouri, should have been at the head of the delegates at large," she is reported to have said. "He didn't have the nerve to even run for that place. He was content to come here as a district delegate just the same as I am. He has been in the party for years and I have been a legal voter for one year.

"He is a disgrace to Missouri Democrats and we won't have him as one of our representatives. Hundreds of Missouri women are on their knees at this moment praying that this committee be fearless in preserving us against such a disgrace."

Statement by Reed.

Senator Reed tonight gave out a statement asserting that the action of the committee can be aken as nothing more or less than an effort to "exclude from he councils of the party a man whose Democracy is unchallenged and

WHITE HOUSE BACKS M'ADOO AGAINST FIELD

Marshall Looms as Dark Horse.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

San Francisco, June 26.—[Special.]—Reëntered in the race as an open contestant under the resourceful leadership of Postmaster General Burleson and other members of the Wilson administration, former Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo, son-in-law of the president, looms tonight as the most formidable of the three major candidates for the Democratic nomination for the presidency.

It looks like a fight to a finish between McAdoo and the field, and if McAdoo fails to win, a dark horse will be selected.

Marshall "Dark Horse" Favorite.

With every conservative view of the situation including the strong possibility that neither Gov. Cox of Ohio nor McAdoo can be nominated, Vice President Thomas Riley Marshall forged to the front today as the dark horse favorite. Under the direction of Tom Taggart of Indiana and with the assistance of Charles F. Murphy and other eastern leaders, powerful influences are being exerted to make Marshall the logical compromise.

Mr. Marshall himself has given his assent to the arrangements being made in his behalf between the eastern and western leaders who are fighting McAdoo and who see little prospect of nominating Cox.

Conference of Hoosiers.

There was a conference this morning between Mr. Marshall and Mr. Taggart and former Gov. Ralston of Indiana, at which the plans for the Marshall campaign were formulated. The program is to withhold the name of the vice president from presentation to the convention when the nominating speeches are made, but to vote Indiana for Marshall from the start, with a view to swinging Illinois, Michigan, New York, and New Jersey to the vice president when the time to launch a compromise candidacy shall be deemed propitious.

One of the big cards to be played for Marshall is the presentation of a league of nations plank framed by the vice president which rejects the president's uncompromising attitude against reservations to the league of nations covenant and conforms essentially to the position adopted on the league issue by William Jennings Bryan.

Marshall and Bryan Confer.

In this connection it was noted as significant that Marshall and Bryan were in conference for more than an hour today. Altogether an alliance between the Bryan and anti-administration forces to nominate Marshall is viewed as more than likely to materialize at the crucial stage of the balloting.

It was not long before it was known generally that plans to put Marshall over were afoot, and favorable comment on the vice president as a possible nominee was heard in many of the delegations tonight.

"Keep your eye on Marshall," said former Gov. Dunne of Illinois. "I do not believe that either Cox or McAdoo can win, and you will find this view of the situation rather prevalent. You also will find that there is a strong trend toward Marshall as a compromise. One of the most significant facts is that you hear much praise and absolutely no criticism of Marshall wherever the delegates gather. He seems acceptable to almost everybody."

Davis Boom Moves Along.

Second only in importance to the Marshall move was the development of maneuvering in favor of John W. Davis of West Virginia, American ambassador to Great Britain. Davis appeared to be a favorite dark horse in and about the precincts of the national committee whenever a deadlock between Cox and McAdoo was mentioned. Although Davis has been regarded as a candidate the McAdoo and other supporters might fall back on in the hour of defeat in the first line trenches, the Davis talk today was confined by no means to administration quarters.

The chief objection to Davis is that he is virtually unknown not only to the country but to his own party. It was also urged against him that he opposed woman suffrage while a member of the house.

Meredith Out of Race.

Secretary of Agriculture Meredith, for whom the Iowa delegation will vote at the beginning of the balloting, took himself out of the field of candidates today in a formal statement in which he said in part:

"I am attending the convention merely as a delegate at large from Iowa. I appreciate more than I can say the friendship and confidence expressed by Iowa friends in their suggestion of my name to the San Francisco convention, but I am not in any sense a candidate for the nomination.

"I am perfectly happy as secretary of agriculture, and if I may continue until March 4 next to serve the entire people of the nation by encouraging and again by urging proper support of it through adequate appropriations to the department of agriculture I will feel that I am working in a field in which I can be most effective."

Early Skid for Palmer.

Attorney General Palmer apparently is slated for early elimination. Palmer's principal handicap is his unpopularity with organized labor arising from the injunction of the striking coal miners, for which he is blamed, although the move was authorized by the president.

Gov. Cox is destined to roll up a big vote for the prize and make by far the strongest bid for the nomination in the early balloting.

It will take a prodigious effort, however, on the part of his adherents to put him over, and privately they are admitting they are up against a formidable undertaking.

Balance of Power with Bryan.

William Jennings Bryan and his "dry" forces, together with the McAdoo and other administration elements, appear to have safe control of more than one-third of the convention in opposition to Cox, representing as he does the "wets" and the anti-administration folks.

With more than one-third of the delegates, the anti-Cox contingent can veto the selection of the Ohio governor under the rule requiring a two-thirds majority for the nomination.

So bitter has the fight on Cox become that the Cox divorce case is beginning to be a factor. Although the divorce, which he allowed his wife to obtain without contest, involved nothing discreditable, to the Ohio governor, delegates are being warned by his enemies in the convention that it would be unsafe to put up a candidate who had been in the divorce courts, in view of the prejudices which might be aroused against him in the campaign.

Stone Wall for McAdoo.

McAdoo is up against a combination of the Bryan strength and anti-administration forces, the leaders of which are confident they possess the veto power of more than one-third of the convention.

Postmaster General Burleson and Senator Glass of Virginia, unlimbered today in a big effort to break this combination. Mr. Burleson decided that it was time to come out openly and make an aggressive fight for McAdoo. Calling the newspaper correspondents, he dictated his views on the platform, and when asked about conditions, he promptly said:

"Colossal issues must be solved in the next four years. The American people will need in that period a leader who is not only a man of vision, but a man of heart and of great constructive ability."

"Do you know any one who fits that measure?" he was asked.

"I do," replied Mr. Burleson emphatically. "William G. McAdoo fills the bill. I believe he will be nominated."

DANIELS COMES ON A WARSHIP; GIVES DRY VIEWS

San Francisco, Cal., June 26.—Secretary Daniels arrived today aboard the battleship New Mexico, flagship of th ePacific fleet, where he will retain quarters during the convention.

He called on Chairman Cummins of the national committee and at headquarters of the North Carolina delegation, and his only public statement was a plea for affirmative declarations in the party platform and big men to hear the ticket.

Mr. Daniels was accompanied from the south by George Creel.

"I would like to see a short platform, so clear and ringing that no casuist would place two interpretations upon any deliverance," Mr. Daniels said, "and I believe the convention will give us such a platform and name candidates whose records will be guarantees of performance."

Regarding the prohibition enforcement discussion, Mr. Daniels said that "Order 99," the navy order which carried prohibition into the wardrooms and shore stations of the service, still expressed his views.

IF LIGHTNING STRIKES COLBY MUST NOT DODGE

San Francisco, Cal., June 26.—[Special.]—Secretary of State Colby, who is regarded by some as the spokesman of the president in the convention, reached San Francisco tonight.

"It is not true that I am bringing any instructions from the president," he said shortly after his arrival. "Of course I know his views on a variety of questions, but then so do many others who are in attendance on the convention."

Mr. Colby also denied that there is any movement afoot on the part of the administration to make him the permanent chairman of the convention.

"I should rather not be the chairman," he said, "but if the convention should desire me to serve in that capacity, of course, I could not decline."

Howat Appeals Cases Under Charge of Contempt

Topeka, Kas., June 26.—Alexander Howat, president of the Kansas mine workers' union, has made application to the Supreme court for a continuance of the cases against him in which he is charged with contempt of court for opposition to the Kansas industrial court law, it became known tonight.

BRYAN PREDICTS COMPLETE ROUT FOR WET FORCES

Invites Fight on Floor of Convention.

San Francisco, Cal., June 26.—[By the Associated Press.]—William J. Bryan, following his election by the Nebraska delegation to the resolutions committee, made a long and vigorous address at a luncheon of the Commonwealth club on prohibition and other platform questions. He predicteed utter rout for the "wets."

Mr. Bryan told his audience that he sought his place on the resolutions committee especially to fight for a "dry" plank.

"I'm not sure that we're going to have any fight," Mr. Bryan continued, "but on the wet question, which probably will come before the convention, every man will have the chance to go on record. We're going to have a roll call, and I want every delegation polled, so if any Democrat wants to turn the party over to the liquor interests his folks at home will know it."

Welcomes Fight on Floor.

Mr. Bryan said he would welcome a minority report from the resolutions committee if necessary, to bring the issue squarely before the convention.

"When we're through," he continued, "the country will know whether the Democratic party will be the chattel property of the brewers, or whether the brewers will be out of business never to raise their black flag again. There will be no dodging the issue, no skulking around as there was at Chicago. If the Democratic party isn't willing to speak out after the Supreme court has withered every argument of the wets, it ought to dissolve."

Bait for Women's Vote.

Assailing the Republican convention for its silence on prohibition Mr. Bryan said that if the Democrats wished to secure support from 26,000,000 women voters they must declare for continued prohibition. Any break in the prohibition wall, he said, would result eventually in re-establishment of saloons, gambling halls and dives.

Individual candidates were not discussed by Mr. Bryan.

"There will be more tickets put up and put down in the next few days than ever before," said the Nebraskan.

Other Planks Sought.

Other platform planks that Mr. Bryan told his audience he would urge relate to labor and profiteering. He advocated a declaration for compulsory investigation of all industrial disputes to avert strikes and protect the public.

"I want a labor plank," he said, "that puts the employé and the employer on exactly the same footing.

"I want the Democratic party to protect the third party in industrial disputes—the public. I don't want any court to decide these questions. I am in favor of compulsory arbitration. I want something that will meet all our needs and be consistent with American institutions.

Strong for Arbitration.

"I hope for a labor plank similar to the plan used in thirty of our treaties (the Bryan treaties) providing for investigation of every dispute before a resort to violence."

Mr. Bryan said a waiting period during investigation of industrial disputes, before strikes or lockouts occur, would protect the public, comprising the larger majority of those interested.

A plank denouncing profiteers and profiteering also was urged by Mr. Bryan, who criticized the Republican platform, which, he said, failed to deal with this subject. Jail terms for profiteers were advocated by the Nebraskan.

Just What Bryan Wants.

On the league of nations and the treaty of Versailles Mr. Bryan deplored their injection into partisan politics.

"I want no sham battle in this country this fall," he said. "I want this country to let the world know that we'll do everything to make this last war the last. I don't want the treaty made a campaign issue. It's a crime to drag it down in the mire of partisan politics.

"If the treaty is not the paramount issue of the campaign I see no reason to drag it in at all."

Military force to maintain world peace he declared a futile anomaly.

ENGLEWOOD ALL "HET UP" ABOUT BOYS' CLUBHOUSE

The boy question has driven two aldermen, Scott M. Hogan and Terrance Moran, to distraction. The boys in their ward want to erect a news boys' club house at Sixty-fourth street and Hermitage avenue. War is being waged on the question of a permit. Business men and welfare organizations have tried to settle the conflict. The city council gave it a hearing and then passed it back to the aldermen. It is now up to these gentlemen to settle the difficulty. Ald. Max Adamowski, in whose ward there is an organization similar to the one the boys propose, came out strong for them. The whole Englewood district is aroused. The opposing faction got Attorney L. Richter to see to it that an indictment charging the boys with the characteristics of undersirables and nuisances was upheld in the city council.

The aldermen have finally shouldered the burden onto a subcommittee, who will settle the controversy to the best of their ability. Ald. Hogan and Moran refuse to take sides. They want it made clear that they are neutral.

Neighbor Nurses Baby as Mother Is Held as Thief

A neighbor nursed the twenty months old baby of Mr. and Mrs. C. Brenon Miller, 4631 Malden avenue, last night. They had been detained in the afternoon by detectives for questioning concerning articles found in their possession in a State street department store.

He spent the night at the bureau she at the Hudson avenue detention home. They insisted they had paid for the articles.

Four women, two of them colored, were arrested at shoplifters yesterday.

unquestioned, solely upon the ground that in the United States senate, acting under his oath of office, he opposed the league of nations."

The senator said he did not seek the seat in the convention.

"I was elected in the first instance during my absence in Washington," he said, "and felt that I could do nothing less than respond to the request of the largest Democratic district in the United States. The objection to my credentials was purely technical. No one was here claiming the seat; indeed, the alternate refused to take the seat to which I had been elected and sent me a proxy authorizing me to act in his stead."

Continuing, Senator Reed said: "The unfortunate part of it is that if the impression goes abroad that men ought to be excluded from participation in the Democratic councils because they are not for the league of nations as Mr. Wilson delivered it, then a large percentage of the Democratic party throughout the nation may feel that they are in like manner to be excluded.

"If a similar policy is to be pursued of excluding those who do not agree with everything the machine of the party desires, it might result in the exclusion of a man because he was a wet, or because he was a dry, or because he was in favor of woman suffrage, or against it. The result would be a minority party."

Alternate's Proxy to Reed.

Kansas City, Mo., June 26.—James T. Bradshaw, alternate to Senator James A. Reed as delegate from the Fifth Missouri district to the Democratic national convention, announced tonight he had voluntarily turned over his proxy to Senator Reed just before he left for San Francisco and that the senator was empowered to act for him in all matters pertaining to the business of the convention.

Clinton Girl Quits Home with $1,200 of Dad's Cash

Seventeen-year-old Grace Johnson disappeared from her home at Clinton, Ill., yesterday with $1,200 belonging to her father, according to a report made by her mother last night to the detective bureau. Mrs. Johnson accompanied Detective Sergeant Patrick Roche on a tour of the Hyde Park residential district, where friends of the family live. But no trace of Grace was obtained.

MAKE 3 HANDBOOK RAIDS.

Chief Garrity's men raided Adam J. Amberg's place at 205 North Clark street yesterday, charging Amberg with running a handbook. Later men from the detective bureau raided it. Thomas Haywood, 123 West Madison street, and John Smith, 13 South Clark street, were also charged with running handbooks.

'PUSSYFOOT' TIPS HIS MITT; HE LIVED IN SAHARA

Genial Foe of Liquor, Smokes, Cusses.

A personage—his bland smile and portly rotundity strongly reminiscent of the white aproned gentry that used to stand behind bars and wield the ivory scraper—entered Chicago yesterday and called for a tankard of Lake Michigan water. His head bore very little hair—about one-half of 1 per cent. His eyes—one of them glass—were shielded by spectacles. He wore a graying mustache. His name was William E. Johnson. He is better known as "Pussyfoot."

Last fall Pussyfoot attained international fame when he lost his right eye while fighting the bourbon hosts in London. A brickbat struck it as he was being hazed by students who liked their beer. During the battle Pussyfoot employed both incisors and cuspids.

Bites at Thumb.

"A good looking hand was suddenly thrust through the crowd," he narrated. "It grabbed me firmly by the coat. I sank my teeth into it and nearly bit off a thumb. Its owner roared. He turned out to be the Rev. Wilson Stuart, an ardent leader of the dryst!"

"Pussyfoot" sat on the edge of his bed at the Hotel La Salle as he told of his ambition to bring about a non-alcoholic millennium. He is stepping about the country now to observe if any bungholes have worn their way through the eighteenth amendment. This afternoon at Medinah temple, 3 o'clock, he will declaim of the beauties of prohibition to the multitude which the Anti-Saloon league hopes to muster there.

To Invade India.

Next November, after a properly arid tenant has been picked for the White House, Mr. Johnson will wander over to India and proceed to separate Mr. Kipling's playmates from their arrack. Within ten years, says he, one-third of Europe will be dry. This century will see the blotting out of liquor, under the lead of America, just as last century saw the death of slavery. Cuba libre will be fettered once again.

"Any one who's thirsty enough to go down there just for a drink needs it pretty bad," remarks "Pussyfoot," speaking of the great hegira to the West Indian isle. "His case is so severe he merits a doctor's care—and prescriptions!"

Ah, He's Smoked Out.

At this juncture a cigar jarred loose from its lodgment in Mr. Johnson's pocket. He tendered it to the interviewer.

"A campaign against tobacco?" This in reply to a question. "Why, no. I never heard of any one smoking too much and then going home and beating his wife.

"However, if there were an anti-nicotine amendment, I wouldn't break the law just for the sake of a cigar. I'd get out and go to another country first. If I couldn't find a nation whose laws I wanted to obey, I'd go to hell, where they haven't any laws."

Likes Taste of Liquor.

Here Pussyfoot admitted that he likes the taste of liquor. His teetotaling career began when, as a student in the University of Nebraska, he attended meetings held by "Bishop" Skinner, a reformed drunkard who had abjured all vices except cussing. As Pussyfoot led a deputation of scholars up to sign the pledge, the old maid was so inspired by the spectacle that she played an olden hymn in ecstatic fervor.

The words ran: "See the mighty hosts advancing, Satan leading on."

It was while chief officer of the federal service in Indian territory that he acquired his nickname. Certain cattle thieves and whisky smugglers, annoyed by his activities, had placed a reward of $3,000 on his head. A pot shot, meant for him, killed a friend. Meanwhile Johnson was pussyfooting about his duties. Now he rather likes the name.

As Pussyfoot finished his story he picked up a cigar butt from the table and lit it. An anecdote then flowed from under that graying moustache to show that he had enforced prohibition laws long before Dalrymple ever invaded Iron River.

It seems that a citizen had approached him and requested immunity for some liquor entering the redskins' domain on the grounds that his wife was very sick and needed it. The train arrived. Pussyfoot found five gallons of redeye.

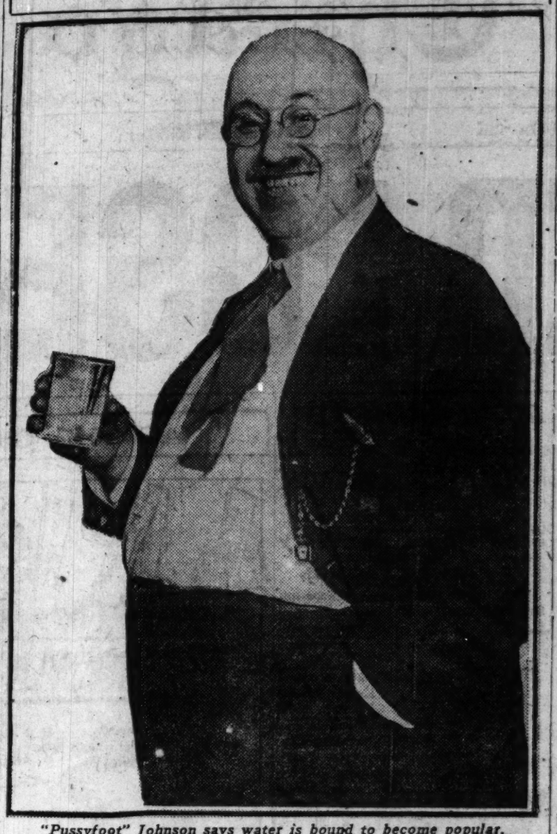
"'If your wife's in such tough condition that she needs five gallons of it,' I told him, 'she'll die anyway,'" said Johnson. "And so I smashed the bottles."

Sojourned in Sahara.

Then Pussyfoot gave a chronicle of his sojourn in the Sahara desert. While there he played checkers with the natives and interrogated them, between moves, on their reason for drinking. He was informed that, while the Koran forbids partaking of the kickful m'bit, it says nothing about not imbibing Manhattan cocktails and vermouth.

"However," informs the narrator, playing with his lodge charm, "a Moslem who gets drunk is ostracized socially. They say he's become a Christian."

DRAW ONE!



"Pussyfoot" Johnson says water is bound to become popular.

WET OR DRY, AS LAW, MAJORITY ARE, SO IS COX

Favors "Vital Principles" of League of Nations.

Columbus, O., June 26.—[Special.]—Prohibition, as a political issue, now is solely a question of law enforcement, according to Gov. James M. Cox. On that issue he is willing to stand by his record in Ohio.

"Any provision, constitutional or statutory, must be accepted as the expressed mandate of the people, and representing the wish of the majority. Unless we hold to that principle in government then we will be chargeable with the very things we hold against the bolsheviki," he declared in an interview given to the Ohio State Journal just before leaving Columbus for Trail's End, his Dayton home, from where he will keep in touch by long distance phone with his campaign managers at San Francisco during the convention.

Will "Enforce the Law."

"Whatever the law is, it should be enforced. That process will demonstrate its wisdom or its weakness, and if change is necessary, we have the governmental facility to transform. That is why evolution makes revolution both unnecessary and impossible in America."

"It is for the people," he added "to say what they want and to prescribe the time and method of saying it.

"For a Majority Rule."

"I am for the rule of the majority because I want to see the institutions of this republic live. Unless we are careful, fanaticism over a relatively trivial thing may carry us into an error in fundamentals. Nothing on earth could be more harmful."

The excess profits, the governor holds, is one of the biggest factors contributing to high living costs. Lack of adequate government regulations of the cold storage business he declares another.

Declaring the vital principles of the league of nations must be maintained Gov. Cox added:

"We should not close our minds to reservations that might be a means of reconciling differences." He believes the league should aid the Irish people in presenting their demands to the world. Its guarantee against war he holds of most vital importance to the people of America.

Why We Can Offer This High Grade Player Piano For Only $585

There are three very definite reasons why we can offer this high grade player piano at the remarkably low price of $585.

First, the factory which builds this player piano makes but one model, one style and one size. This policy simplifies the making, reduces the cost of production, and, as a result, gives you a bigger piano value for each dollar you spend.

Second, we own and operate a chain of piano stores over the country. We buy these instruments in large lots, for all of our stores, thereby securing the benefit of rock-bottom, quantity prices.

Third, the particular group of instruments we are now offering at this low price were contracted for when the cost of material was considerably lower than it is now. The difference between the price of this instrument then and its present price is your saving.

If you are looking for a genuine value in a substantial, honestly built player piano, we know you will look no farther after you have inspected this $585 instrument.

FRIENDS OF ERIN WANT ALL CARDS LAID ON TABLE

"Yes" or "No" Demand on Platform Builders.

BY GRAFTON WILCOX.

San Francisco, Cal., June 26.—[Special.]—Troubles began to boil today for administration platform builders of the Democratic party.

Administration forces soon found that the spirit of American-Irish rebellion had broken over night against their plan to offer the friends of Irish freedom the open door of the league of nations for settlement of their grievances.

Never Do, Says Dunne.

"That will never do," said Edward F. Dunne of Illinois, former governor and one of the leaders in Ireland's fight for independence. "To do that would submit the case to a packed jury. It would be much better for the party if the platform said nothing about the subject than to inject such a proposal as this."

Senator David I. Walsh of Massachusetts also was much wrought up over this thing that the administration forces are trying to hand the friends of Ireland.

"The friends of Ireland will take nothing at all from the Democratic party if that is all they can get," he said.

The platform builders also found drawn up in battle array William Jennings Bryan with two loaded guns—one aimed at the wet issue and the other drawing a bead on the league covenant breastworks.

Palmer Enters with H. C. L.

Attorney General Palmer got into the platform building with a series of planks on the high cost of living issue. They are largely the measures recommended by the president to curb profiteering, and probably will be accepted by the resolutions committee, in substance at least.

They include provisions for marking the producer's and manufacturer's cost price on commodities, a blue sky prevention law, cold storage regulation, and federal licensing of corporations dealing in food and necessities of life in interstate commerce.

Postmaster General Burleson circulated about the hotel corridors, scattering his platform ideas, which, when gathered up in one place, assembled about like this:

No pussyfooting on any vital issues.

A plain and simple declaration on the league of nations and peace covenant.

A plank declaring opposition to the soldiers' cash bonus.

A plank declaring strikes unlawful in cases where the life and health of the whole people are involved, such as coal mining and transportation, but no other limitation of the right to strike; establishment of tribunals facilitating adjustments of industrial disputes.

A straightforward declaration of purposes on the prohibition issue.

Urges Wilson League Plank.

Mr. Burleson had a few words to say about the league covenant, declaring that the Republicans had "straddled, dodged, and ducked" in a cowardly manner and that the Democrats must come out with unreserved indorsement of the president's attitude.

A soldier's cash bonus, he said, was an insult to the soldiers and should not be recommended by the Democratic party.

Mr. Bryan came forth with a labor plank. He will urge the resolutions committee to accept a proposal for the creation of a great industrial court for the settlement of labor disputes with a provision that there should be no strikes for a period of six months after grievances of the workers have been taken up by the court for adjudication.

MOVES TO LIFT COURT BARRIER TO SHIPS' SALE

Washingtno, D. C., June 26.—[Special.]—Determined not to allow the president established whereby a court injunction can interfere with the conduct of the government's business by a regularly constituted department, the United States moved here today to have vacated the order prohibiting the shipping board from selling the German seized ships. The order had been granted upon the application of William Randolph Hearst.

Attorney General Palmer had the record and transcript of the proceedings in the District Supreme court sent to the Court of Appeals. This step was taken, it was explained at the office of the district attorney here, "to show that the government does not acquiesce in the jurisdiction of the court to restrain a regularly established government department from carrying out its proper functions."

When the shipping board case comes before the Court of Appeals in the near future the government hopes to have the order against the board vacated.

Garrity Files Charges Against Police Operator

Annie E. Joyce, a police operator assigned to the Maxwell street station, "just can't "go straight," according to Chief of Police Garrity, who yesterday ordered him to appear before the trial board next Wednesday on charges of insubordination.

Joyce has a record a yard long," the chief said. "I have given him several chances. I have lost all patience with him and he'll have to take his chances with the trial board."

ILLINOIS' STAND TO BE DECIDED AT CAUCUS TODAY

Dove of Peace Hovers Over Delegation.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

San Francisco, Cal., June 26.—[Special.]—The Illinois delegation meets in official caucus at 3 o'clock tomorrow at the state headquarters at the Cliff hotel. No statement has been made yet beyond the definite announcement that Frank J. Quinn, of Peoria, will sit in the credentials committee. He participated in the national committee session today as proxy for Fred B. Lynch of Minnesota, and listened to all of the arguments in the Georgia and Missouri cases. He did not vote on the Reed case.

Harmony in Evidence.

A remarkable degree of personal harmony exists within the ranks of the Illinoisans. Carter H. Harrison, Edward F. Dunne, William L. O'Connell, and their cohorts arrived last night and at once joined with the Sullivan forces and the downstaters at the Illinois headquarters. There is no disposition to revive any of the old factional troubles. For that reason some of the old timers are not having their unusually enjoyable convention experiences necessitated by all day and all night maneuvers, made necessary by the Sullivan and anti-Sullivan battles that were staged regularly every four years.

Convention Appointments.

The following appointments for the convention were announced today of Illinois men:

Doorkeepers—Timothy Crowe, Chicago; John O'Halloran, Chicago; Michael Fahey, Toluca.

Assistant sergeant at arms—Michael H. Rogers, Chicago; Peter F. Smith, Chicago; Michael K. Sheridan, Chicago; Michael Welsh, Chicago; C. H. Fitzpatrick, Rockford.

Assistant secretary — Martin J. O'Brien, Chicago.

It is probable that Eward N. Hurley will be made an honorary vice president of the convention from Illinois.

K. OF C. REBUKES USE OF NAME IN POLITICS

James A. Flaherty of Philadelphia, supreme knight of the Knights of Columbus, declared yesterday at a meeting of the supreme board of directors of the K. of C. at the Congress hotel that the Knights of Columbus, as an organization, were rigidly abstaining from any action in the political campaign.

"A report from San Francisco states that the head of the Knights of Columbus, a Mr. P. H. Callahan, participated in a conference there in the interest of a certain candidate. I am the chief officer of the Knights of Columbus. We have no officer by the name of P. H. Callahan. If any Knight of Columbus of that name is attending the San Francisco convention it is purely in his capacity as a private citizen."

The board discussed final arrangements for the knights' pilgrimage to Europe, which sails Aug. 7 from New York to present the K. of C. statue of Lafayette to Metz. The statue will be unveiled on Aug. 21 by Marshal Foch, after which the knights will go to Rome as the guests of Pope Benedict and follow that with a visit to the shrine of Our Lady of Lourdes.

BAKER MOVE FOR DEFENSE OF U. S. ROILS PACIFISTS

Washington, D. C., June 26.—[Special.]—Plans of Secretary of War Baker to have the war plans division of the general staff undertake a special survey to determine what changes would be required to adapt the existing army posts and cantonments to peace time universal training have caused distress among officers of the American Union Against Militarism.

"On the very eve of the San Francisco convention, at which it is expected resolutions will be adopted repudiating compulsory military training, the administration in Washington seems cheerfully to be pursuing a policy diametrically opposed to that of the party," says an announcement of the organization.

The survey is supposed to be completed by July 20. A secondary inquiry will determine what expansion in the cantonments should take place in order to provide for 7,000,000 men under arms.

THE SENATOR SAYS

San Francisco, Cal., June 26.—[Special.]—The Senator says:

"I ran into a nest of old timers at the St. Francis an hour after I got off the train and at once pulled the old corkscrew—the mental one.

"'What's stirring?'" says I.

"'Do you want an earful of fluff or the real lowdown?'" asks a California bird.

"'The real stuff,'" says I. "No 2.75 per cent dope.'

"'All right,' said the Golden Gate guy. 'Ive been sticking around the lobbies six days sopping up information. The trend seems to be against a wet plank. Cold-feet-o.

"'Burleson says he wants a plank taking a soak at the Volstead act. Well, let Burleson ruin the postoffice department. That's enough for one guy. We won't let him ruin Democratic chances in November. Back to Texas for Albert. We'll have a hellva time in the platform committee, but if possible it will be settled there. Nobody wants to give Bryan too much of a chance to pull a pipe organ recital on "Shall We Gather at the River."'

"'Speaking of the "beerless one,"' says I, 'did you see the advertisement billing a lecture at the Y. M. C. A. Sunday by Bryan free of charge? Isn't it a wonderful climate—nature is sure expansive out here. And after helping to wallop the famous fourteen points, he announces as his subject, "The Ten Lepers."'

"'Grapejuice Bill lecture for nothing?' says a Kentucky lad. 'Preposterous. They have go to show me.'

"'What's the dope on the league of nations?' says I.

"'Haven't heard it mentioned in four days,' says a Wisconsin lad. 'All they talk about in the lobbies is the likker question. More interested in that han in the candidates even. Talking loud in the lobbies, most of them, but when it comes to voting—well, her's the Kentucky outfit; you know what they used to make in old Kentucky; the delegates are strong for liberalism, but when they were polled in Louisville eighteeen out of twenty said they were against a wet plank. Many birds running around with their tongues out a foot looking for a slug of hootch wear ice packs for spats. Here Wilson vetoes the Volstead act, but congress, scared stiff, passes it anyhow. The Anti-Saloon league has got them jumping through the hoops.'

"'Yes,' says Kentucky, 'they've got no more kick nowadays than a mug of one-half of 1 per cent. Here I just had a fine snort of the old fashioned stuff with a delegate. He carries it on the hip, in his grip, and on his breath, and uses it for perfume on his hanky, yet this guy is yelling against even a moist plank. He says it'd hurt his county ticket next fall among the country vote. He's a dry, an irrigated dry. Lots more here like him.'

"'Well, says a Chicago delegate, 'I tell the boys it's like this: If we had a wet platform and put up a dry candidate, the ticket and the plank would kill each other off. If we had a dry plank and a wet candidate they'd go blooey, too. So I say, give us a liberal ticket and let that do the talking.'

"'Bunk,' says an Edwards bird from New Jersey; 'let's take a chance and hop to it. Up or down, that's the idea. Dry or foggy. Puritanical or tolerant. But nothing to violate the constitution in one jot or tittle. Get me?'

"'It is a strange age,' says I. 'The three miracles of 1920 are: Bryan giving a lecture without a fee; Carter H. Harrison, five times mayor of Chicago, sitting in a national convention on the floor as a delegate without a contest, symbol that Chicago's old embattled factions have dipped into the honey jar instead of the old pickle vat. The Democratic party being bossed, in a way, by the Anti-Saloon league. And they call it the Bourbon party. What would Andy Jackson say?'"

Precinct Committeemen Elected in 1918 Holdover

Springfield, Ill., June 26.—Precinct committeemen elected in 1918 will hold over until September, 1922, Attorney General Brundage ruled today. The ruling applies to areas outside Chicago, where precinct committeemen instead of ward committeemen are elected every two years.

U. S. COAL GOING ABROAD WHILE PRODUCT FALLS

Washington, D. C., June 26.—[Special.]—Exports of coal during May reached one of the largest totals on record, the geological survey announced today in its weekly report on production. Bituminous coal shipped to tidewater for export totaled 1,942,000 tons, an increase of 39,000 tons over April, when the exports of coal also were unusually heavy.

In addition to this coal, which was consigned to foreign countries, 776,000 tons of bituminous coal were shipped to ocean ports for transshipment by coastwise vessels to New England.

This was an increase of 59,000 tons over New England shipments of the previous month. Total shipments of bituminous coal to Atlantic ports for all purposes, including domestic use, amounted to 4,436,000 tons, the largest amount since October and one of the largest on record.

After gradually increasing for a few weeks, following the worst period of the traffic tieup, production of bituminous coal again fell off during the week ended June 19. The total output for the week is estimated at 9,956,000 tons, a decrease compared with the preceding week or 313,000, or 3.1 per cent. The average production per working day was 1,659,000 tons, or at a rate of 10 per cent below that prevailing just before the switchmen's strike and 20 per cent below October, 1919.

WASHINGTON NEWS —IN BRIEF—

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]
[Washington Bureau of The Tribune.]

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 26.

SENATOR HARDING, Republican presidential nominee, left Washington to rest up during the next forty-eight hours. He requested that his destination be kept secret. He will return to his desk Tuesday and confer with Gov. Coolidge, his running mate, on Wednesday.

EXPORTS of coal during May were larger than in April, when the total was unusually heavy, according to estimates of the geological survey. Production of bituminous coal, which had shown a gradual increase following the worst period of the traffic tieup, again dropped off during the week ended June 19.

RATHER than acquiesce in a decision of a court restraining a government department from performing what it considers its proper function the department of justice has taken steps for an appeal from the order of the District court preventing the shipping board from selling ex-German ships.

Miss Gladys Eugenia Besserer, youngest daughter of Otto Besserer, chief clerk in the office of the clerk of the Circuit court, was married yesterday to Edward H. Hildebrandt, an official of the Sinclair Oil company, at the home of her father, 1950 South St. Louis avenue. Gladys Eugenia is the third of Mr. Besserer's daughters to be married within the last year. The couple will go to a lake in Wisconsin for their honeymoon, and will then be at home at 2531 South St. Louis avenue.

LOWDEN GETS BACK $5,000 FROM MISSOURI MEN

Mount Vernon, Ill., June 26.—Nat Goldstein and Robert E. Moore, who were delegates from St. Louis to the Republican national convention, have returned the $2,500 which each was given to work in Missouri in behalf of the candidacy of Gov. Frank O. Lowdent of Illinois for the Republican presidential nomination, according to the statement here of L. L. Emmerson, who managed the governor's campaign.

The money was given to a man "close" to Emmerson for delivery before the Chicago convention ended. Goldstein and Moore stated.

Mr. Emmerson said that he had received the checks of both "two or three days ago." He refused to discuss the matter.

HARDING GOES TO COUNTRY FOR TWO DAY REST

Visits Frelinghuysen in New Jersey.

Raritan, N. J., June 26.—Senator Warren G. Harding, Republican presidential nominee, is spending the week-end at the country home here of United States Senator Joseph R. Frelinghuysen.

When the senator left Washington today he was disinclined to make public his destination. Tonight, however, he consented to permit his whereabouts to be made known, with an earnest stipulation that he be not disturbed, as he is seeking a much needed rest.

Seeks Two Days of Rest.

Washington, D. C., June 26.—[Special.]—Tired by his exertions of the last two weeks, Senator Harding, Republican presidential nominee, left Washington at noon today to be absent for the next forty-eight hours. He expects to play some golf with senators who accompanied him on the trip, and will be back on the job Tuesday.

Before leaving the senator requested the newspaper men to make no mention of his destination. He was anxious to get a complete rest. Mrs. Harding accompanied him.

Gov. Coolidge of Massachusetts, nominee for vice president, will come to Washington for a conference with Senator Harding, next Wednesday, it was announced today. It will be their first meeting since they were nominated. They are not entire strangers, however, Senator Harding having called on Gov. Coolidge during a recent trip to Massachusetts.

Will Hays, chairman of the Republican national committee, arranged the meeting.

Monopoly on Campaign Buttons.

Senator Harding's office today received the first batch of the 15,000,000 campaign buttons bearing the nominee's portrait. Friends of the senator remarked on the fact that following a national convention street salesmen usually appear immediately with buttons bearing the likeness of the nominee. This year, however, the street fakers have been conspicuous by their absence. This was explained by the fact that the Republican national committee several months ago bought up virtually the entire supply of celluloid.

The first Harding and Coolidge campaign posters made their appearance today. The Republican national committee will distribute 5,000,000 of them. Because of the print paper shortage they are considerably smaller than usual.

Conference with Mrs. McCormick.

Today Senator Harding conferred with Mrs. Medill McCormick, wife of Senator McCormick of Illinois, about the part women are to take in the campaign. Mrs. McCormick has been chairman of the women's executive committee of the Republican national committee. After the conference Mrs. McCormick expressed confidence that sufficient states will have ratified the suffrage amendment in time to permit women to vote in the November election.

COMES TO ATTEND BURIAL; IS KILLED IN TRAIN SHED

Mrs. Laura B. Davies of Mankato, Minn., left Florida Thursday for Chicago to attend the funeral of her cousin, Mrs. Aaron Mead, 1903 Washington boulevard.

But yesterday an inquest was held at the Central undertaking establishment into the death of Mrs. Davies, who was 68 years old. She had been accidentally killed in the Polk street station. Miss May Davies, 24 years old, her daughter, was with her mother when she was killed.

The women alighted from a Chicago and Eastern Illinois train, and were standing on the station platform. The handle of a baggage truck, heavily laden, was resting against the side of a baggage car which, with the engine, had been disengaged from the main body of the train.

When the car was backed up the truck was forced against Mrs. Davies, throwing her to the platform. It is believed she suffered a fracture of the skull. Death was instantaneous.

SHIPPING BOARD VESSEL SPRINGS A LEAK AT SEA

Boston, Mass., June 26.—The United States shipping board's wooden steamer Lewiston, bound from Baltimore for Cherbourg, in wireless messages intercepted here today was reported leaking badly and in need of assistance about 350 miles east of New York. Later, in reply to inquiries from the steamers Tuckanuck and Etna, the vessel was reported no longer in danger. The earlier messages reported that the emergency pumps were broken. The Lewiston registers 1,520 tons.

Borden Sr. Opens Purse and Son Gets Out of Cell

Gideon S. Borden arrived yesterday, to be welcomed lovingly by his 22 year old son, Lynn C. Borden. Mr. Borden is a millionaire coal operator of West Virginia. Lynn is in quod for hotel bills at the Edgewater Beach and the Sherman for himself and bride. Also there is a charge of cashing fictitious checks and stealing an automobile.

Mr. Borden paid up all the bills, went surety for Lynn's bonds, and told him he would give him another chance. The case was called in the South Clark street court, but was continued until Aug. 6.

WOMEN WOULD SHOO WOLF FROM M'ADOO'S DOOR

Fund to Cure His "Poverty" Urged.

BY LEOLA ALLARD.

San Francisco, Cal., June 26.—[Special.]—Telling how poor Mr. McAdoo hasn't been out of debt for six years until last Tuesday, Mrs. Antoinette Funk of Chicago began an almost violent campaign today to bring about the demand of the people at this convention for "the poorest yet most capable man the Democrats can select."

MRS. ANTOINETTE FUNK.

"He will not allow us to have headquarters," said Mrs. Funk, "so we compromised on reception rooms, and everybody is invited to tea from 4 to 6 every afternoon."

What the others do with headquarters the McAdoo forces will do with tea.

According to Mrs. Funk, fifteen hundred letters have arrived from school teachers throughout the country asking permission to start funds to help "poor Mr. McAdoo."

The Wolf Chased at Last.

"And I stopped off on the way and asked Mr. Burres Jenkins to be ready to make the nominating speech should Mr. McAdoo be demanded by the people," Mrs. Funk told a friend.

"I was at his home not long ago," said Mrs. Funk, "and Mr. McAdoo said that the following Tuesday he would be out of debt, for the first time in six years. His son is in Princeton. He has so many other children, and expenses are terrible. If he had money he would not hesitate, but the president doesn't get any, too much."

MRS. HARRIETT MAY MILLS.

"His wife doesn't want him to take it," said Mrs. Harriett May Mills, delegate at large from New York state, instructed for Smith, determined to stick to organization leaders in their unit vote, but praying for McAdoo when she goes to bed each night. "Mrs. McAdoo sees what her father has suffered, and of course she dreads the possibility of seeing her husband go through the same ordeal."

"The Workingman's Beer."

Mary M. Lilly, the first Democratic assemblywoman in New York state, declared today that the women will not stay out of the wet and dry debate. She was backed by M. O. Smedley, chairman of the borough of Queens, who said New York "wouldn't stand for the old time lord of the manor idea, held by the people who could fill their own cellars and refuse the laboring classes their keg of beer."

Mrs. Elizabeth D. Colbert of New York is being groomed for the next chairman of the New York women, to succeed Mrs. John S. Crosby. Elizabeth Marbury told Mrs. Colbert she "would stump the state for her."

Palmer's Fashion Plate P. A.

Mrs. Ida McGolhe Gibson, head of the Palmer publicity department, has injected a bit of Paris into the convention headquarters by thousands of dollars' worth of French finery that has staggered her beholders. Swathed in delicate tulle over gold and rose, with a jeweled comb in her hair and an air that comes from staggered her onlookers. Swathed taken many minds off of tedious politics.

MRS. IDA McGLONE GIBSON. [Photo Copyright: Moffett.]

"Every day a new hat," said a national Republican woman. "And no wonder; she gets $1,000 a week. I'd work for any candidate for that, wouldn't you?"

One Illinois male delegate wanted to know if the Palace hotel didn't look more like a fashion show than a business meeting.

WOMEN'S PARTY MAY FUSS UP G. O. P. CEREMONY

Plan Demonstration at Notifications.

Washington, D. C., June 26.—[Special.]—Unless Tennessee, or North Carolina, or Vermont, or Connecticut ratifies the national suffrage amendment before Senator Harding and Gov. Coolidge are notified formally that they have been nominated for the presidency and vice presidency, the notification ceremonies in Marion, O., July 22, and in Boston, Mass., July 27, will be attended by demonstrations of the National Woman's party, the avowed purpose of which is to make woman suffrage the most conspicuous issue in the coming campaign.

ALICE PAUL.

Exact Plan Not Yet Decided.

"The form which our suffrage demonstration will take is not yet decided," said Miss Alice Paul, chairman of the Woman's party, tonight. "We shall use every possible means and the most effective method to secure action from the Republican candidates to hasten suffrage ratification by Connecticut or Vermont, and, if such action is evaded or refused, to advertise to the country the failure of these candidates to use their influence in completing the suffrage struggle.

Point to Democratic Action.

"Efforts made yesterday by the president and the Democratic national committee to hasten ratification in Tennessee and North Carolina," Miss Paul added, "may spur the Republican leaders to similar action in Vermont and Connecticut. Should this action result in winning the thirty-sixth state the demonstration would, of course, be unnecessary."

Leaders in the delegations to the notification ceremonies include Miss Paul, Mrs. Abby Scott Baker of Washington, D. C., party political chairman, and Mrs. Lawrence Lewis, of Philadelphia, Pa., national treasurer.

Until the thirty-sixth state is won for suffrage the candidates are to be picked at home and attended abroad by members of the Woman's party, it is announced.

REFUSE THIRD TERM, GEORGIAN BEGS OF WILSON

Washington, D. C., June 26.—Representative Upshaw, Democrat, of Georgia, in a letter to President Wilson today, told the executive "that it would have a wholesome and composing effect if you would declare before the gavel falls at the opening hour that you would not accept a third term."

"Permit me to say," the Georgia representative's letter added, "that I am reinforced in this conviction by comments that I have heard from your strong supporters in every section of the country.

"A third term for any president is counted by them a dangerous tendency in any republic. The feeling seems pregnant everywhere that Washington was right and wise when he refused a third term, thereby establishing a precedent for our republic that has been mandatory through all these years."

Tennessee Governor Ready to Call Suffrage Session

Washington, D. C., June 26.—Gov. Roberts of Tennessee, in a telegram today to President Wilson, said he heartily favored ratification of the suffrage amendment and would include this subject in a call for a special session of the legislature if his legal department advised him that ratification could be made.

Dispatches from Nashville have stated that the attorney general of that state agreed with the view of Assistant Attorney General Frierson that the legislature could vote on ratification, although the amendment had been submitted since this legislature was elected.

ELWELL SUSPECT DISAPPEARS AS ARREST NEARS

Financial Dispute May Have Caused Slaying.

New York, June 26.—[Special.]—The arrest of a suspect in the Elwell case was reported tonight to be imminent. The man now sought was out of the city today, but may not be in flight, although Assistant District Attorney John T. Dooling was puzzled at his disappearance.

The authorities refused to disclosed the nature of their evidence against the man. After several conferences between detectives and members of the district attorney's staff it was learned there was a difference of opinion as to the strength of the evidence, and that some of the investigators wanted to make an immediate arrest, while others were in favor of questioning other witnesses and attempting to strengthen the case.

Decide on Arrest.

Assistant District Attorney Alfred J. Talley said he did not expect an arrest today or tomorrow, but late in the afternoon it was reported further developments resulted in a decision in favor of an arrest and that the man was likely to be taken into custody as soon as he was found.

A new and important witness has been found, it was announced at the Criminal Courts building today, who had a conversation with Elwell at some time between 2 o'clock and 2:30 a. m. on June 11, six hours before the murder. This witness is said to have told his story to District Attorney Swann, who was away in the country today and could not be reached. Mr. Dooling would say nothing concerning the new witness except that the witness had "come forward in aid of the administration of justice."

Won't Explain Delay.

He refused to say why the person had delayed for fifteen or sixteen days after the crime before telling the story. He refused to say whether the new witness was a man or a woman, or whether the recital of the conversation with Elwell furnished evidence of a motive for murder.

The man under suspicion is one of a large number of witnesses who have been repeatedly questioned and kept under observation most of the time since the murder. The principal evidence against him is said to have been furnished by one or more voluntary witnesses who have given information to members of Capt. Carey's homicide squad. Capt. Carey and his detectives, who have been trying to solve the Elwell mystery, were all at work on the case away from police headquarters, and members of the staff of District Attorney Swann were at work in the field today.

Talked Before Shooting.

Although the suspect is said to have had business tranactions with Elwell, Mr. Dooling refused to say today whether the present theory of the crime is that it was an unwritten law case or a financial quarrel. The detectives have believed from the beginning the murderer spent several minutes at least in conversation with Elwell before the shot was fired, and they have guessed that he might have been denouncing Elwell; that he might have been demanding that he sign the release of a debt or make some promise to gain financial assistance.

The authorities were endeavoring today to reach a young woman in order to question her further, but it could not be learned whether she was thought to be merely a witness to some fact connecting Elwell and the suspect or the cause of a quarrel between them. Members of the district attorney's staff refused to say whether or not they had reached her.

New Witness Appears.

According to one report, the new witness was a man who had been anxious to avoid mention in connection with the case and had finally called on District Attorney Swann in order to tell his story under guarantees that his name would be suppressed, unless it became necessary at a trial. The witness was said to have met Elwell shortly after the latter left his friends at the New Amsterdam theater at about 1:45, and to have spent some time in conversation with him. Whether Elwell discussed threats against himself or indicated that he knew of any danger to himself was not made known.

Jail Judge Page's Son for Peoria Auto Thriller

Peoria, Ill., June 26.—[Special.]—Gerald T. Page, son of Judge George T. Page of the Circuit Court of Appeals at Chicago, was jailed here yesterday on a charge of operating an automobile while intoxicated following an early morning thriller which nearly cost the lives of himself, Mrs. Page, and H. L. Johnson of Chicago.

The party was returning from a country club. When Page encountered an automobile wreck on Galena road he was ordered to stop by deputy sheriffs, but tried to drive around and his car went over an embankment and skidded along a railroad track for several hundred feet. Several onlookers leaped aboard and prevented it from tipping.

A score of prominent Peorians appeared in police court against Page later, but the case was continued until afternoon. Then there were no witnesses and the charge was dismissed.

North Shore District Made "Residential Zone"

Residents of the district bounded by Bryn Mawr, Devon, and Winthrop avenues and Lake Michigan appeared before the city council building committee yesterday requesting that that territory be zoned immediately as a residential district. Ald. Frank J. Link led their fight. The committee ordered that no building permits except for residence buildings shall be issued pending the appointment of the city zoning commission, which Mayor Thompson is expected to name this week.

How Electric Train Ran Into Trap at Bellwood

The photo-diagram shows the manner in which an Aurora, Elgin and Chicago interurban train, traveling at express speed, smashed head-on into a freight train on a track intersection near Bellwood yesterday, killing the motorman and seriously injuring twelve persons. Electric road officials blame the motorman for not heeding the signal and stopping his train before attempting the crossing. The splintered and overturned third rail coaches and freight cars are in the foreground. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

WALTON, BANKER AND ACCOUNTANT PASSES AWAY

Seymour Walton, accountant, died last night at his residence, 550 Surf street. He was born at New Orleans, La., Feb. 15, 1846, the son of John Stevenson Walton; educated at Williams college, Phi Beta Kappa, the first cashier of the Fort Dearborn National bank, which he helped to organize. Later he became a certified public accountant and was president of the Certified Public Accountants' association of Illinois. He was vice president of the Marquette club, dean of the Walton School of Commerce, professor at Northwestern university six years ago, and later at Marquette university in Milwaukee. He was editor of the students' department of the Journal of Accountancy, and wrote for other magazines. He was a member of the Press club of Chicago, Sons of the American Revolution, and the Founders and Patriots' society. He was also a member of the Lake View Presbyterian church. He is survived by a widow and four children, one of them Col. Edward Seymour Walton of the regular army. Funeral services will be tomorrow at Bentley's undertaking rooms. Burial will be in New Orleans.

SEEK ARREST OF JONAS AS CHIEF OF ABYSSINIANS

An appeal for the arrest and indictment of "the Rev." R. D. Jonas, a white man, on charges of being an accessory to murder will be presented tomorrow to State's Attorney Maclay Hoyne by a group of colored business men of the south side, it was announced last night.

The charges are based on Jonas' reputed leadership of the "Back to Abyssinia" movement, which is held responsible for the violence during a parade last Sunday night, when two white men were killed and several hurt.

Jonas was questioned following the affair Sunday night, but was released by the police, to whom it was said he had presented a satisfactory alibi.

According to Sheridan Brusseaux of the Keystone National Detective agency, Jonas has been telling his south side adherents he was freed because he is an agent of "the British secret service." Conservative colored leaders are fearful, they say, that through his propaganda further violence may occur.

GIRL'S DEFENDER SOUGHT AS PADDY THE BEAR SLAYER

The Maxwell street police admitted yesterday they are looking for Walter Quinlan, a member of the "Valley" gang, as the slayer of Patrick Ryan, better known as "Paddy the Bear." Capt. William Russell said he would have Quinlan under arrest by tomorrow.

Quinlan, the police say, killed Ryan because the latter had beaten him and had made remarks about a woman friend.

The slayer, it is said, is small. He objected when Ryan, over a whisky glass, made the remarks about the woman. Ryan became abusive, it is said, and the little man stepped forward. Ryan knocked him down, then blackened one eye. The little man ran, but said he would come back "with something on him."

Ryan was shot the next day, June 7, in his saloon at Fourteenth street and Blue Island avenue. It was a little man who shot him, the police were informed, and the slayer left his cap.

Capt. Russell's message, sent out to all stations, but kept from publication until yesterday, was: "Arrest Walter Quinlan, 22 years old, 5 feet 1 inch tall; medium build, blond curly hair, rosy complexion, blue suit, blue soft shirt and collar; cap."

JINKO TREE AT EVANSTON SAVED; SLICE UP HOUSE

To save a jinko tree that may blossom in nine hundred and some years, Victor C. Carlson of Evanston is cutting his house in two lengthwise. Marchs De Coudres brought the tree to America and planted it in front of his home, at 1708 Orrington avenue, Evanston, in the early 50's. The house changed hands many times, was remodeled, rebuilt, and came into Carlson's ownership. But the tree remained, giving new evidence yearly that it would bloom when 1,000 years old, as the Japanese merchant claimed it would when he sold it.

It became necessary some time ago to move the Carlson residence to 2211 Orrington avenue. It is a two-story frame building. Engineers said it could not be moved without hurting some of the roots of the tree. The only thing that could be done, he said, was to cut the house in two and move the pieces around the tree.

Workmen began yesterday to cut the house in half; and when the two parts are joined together again the tree will be dug up, roots and all, and plainted in front of the house.

DOHANY TO FACE MURDER CHARGE IN DWYER CASE

Detroit, Mich., June 26.—[Special.]—Frank H. Dohany is sane, according to an alienist's report made today. He will be arraigned Monday for first degree murder on the charge of having killed August Dwyer. This was announced by Robert T. Speed, assistant prosecutor.

"Frank H. Dohany," Speed said, "will receive no more consideration than any other man accused of murder. I have ordered that no one, but his immediate family and the doctors be allowed to see him.

"A similar order would have been issued in any case. Until he is in a condition to make a rational statement we could not allow any attorney to speak to him. We could not prevent his wife, daughter, and brother from seeing him, however."

"Dohany spoke very sensibly to me last night," Dr. William Bailey of the receiving hospital staff said today.

Hunt Slayer of 3 Babies; All Strangled During Week

St. Louis, Mo., June 26.—Search for the murderers of three babies, each only a few hours old, within the last week, was begun today by county officials. The third body was found yesterday. In all cases the babies had been strangled.

LOWDEN TO SEE STATE CHIEFS OF G. O. P. TOMORROW

Caucus Called for Springfield Office.

Republican leaders who have attended the conference at which Gov. Lowden has been urged to declare himself a candidate for reelection yesterday were notified to attend another conference tomorrow morning. This caucus is to be held in the governor's office at Springfield and the call for it was issued by the personal friends of the governor.

No announcement was made as to why the conference was called, but it is generally believed that the caucus will be an important one and that the question of whether the governor shall be a candidate will be disposed of finally at it.

Still in Doubt.

Not even the closest friends of the governor have any further line on his intentions. The situation as far as they and other Republican leaders are concerned is the same—the governor is known to be personally indisposed to become a candidate, but is still hesitating as to whether his duty to the state demands his making a campaign.

Third Party to Meet.

Illinois' delegation to the "third party" convention, called by the committee of 48, will be selected this afternoon at a meeting which is to be held in Corinthian hall of the Masonic Temple. The manner of selecting the delegates has not been definitely determined upon.

The national convention of the committee of 48 will open July 10 in the Morrison hotel and continue for three days. It was announced yesterday that the replies to the questionnaire sent out to members of the committee indicated that Senaor Robert M. La Follette of Wisconsin was the favorite candidate for the presidential nomination. Gov. Lynn J. Frazier of North Dakota, elected by the Nonpartisan league, is the second choice.

The selection of a name for the third party is still in the air. "American party" and "People's party" are the favorites.

P. O. Here Up with Mail for First Time in Months

For the first time since mail deliveries were tied up by the expressmen's strike last spring, postoffice officials were able to announce last night that every piece of first class, parcel, post, and circular mail received during the day had been handled on time. Heretofore clerks and distributors have been from a few hours to a day behind.

John T. Doyle, secretary of the United States civil service commission, announced in a letter to the Chicago postmaster that a recruiting campaign similar to the one used by the army will be inaugurated to receive civil service employes.

NURSE, ONE OF 2 IN RUSSIA WITH A. E. F., IS AWARDED MEDAL

MISS ALMA E. FOERSTER.

Miss Alma E. Foerster, one of the two American Red Cross nurses with the American expeditionary forces in northern Russia, has been awarded the Florence Nightingale medal for her services, it was announced yesterday. She lives at 5946 East Circle avenue, Norwood Park. She arrived home a year ago last May, after encounters with the hardships of the north and the dangers of capture by the bolsheviki. The king of Roumania has decorated her with a "brevet honor."

249 CRIMES IN WEEK, SO CHIEF SAYS TOOT HORN

It has been a quiet week in criminal circles, according to Chief of Police Garrity's weekly crime report. Total criminal complaints numbered 249, as compared to 329 for the same week a year ago.

In the twenty-four hours ended at 8 o'clock yesterday morning there were only twenty-one complaints—ten of burglaries, three of robberies, and eight larcenies. In the same period there were forty-six arrests for crimes.

"That's the best arrest record in a long time," Chief Garrity said. "The criminal complaints are also far below the average for the last six months."

The crime record for the week, compared to the figures for the same week of 1919, follows:

Burglaries	112	98
Robberies	46	26
Larcenies	144	100
Others	27	25
Totals	329	249

AUTOIST SLAYER OF BOY HELD ON MURDER CHARGE

Witness Cites Flight and Bribe Offer.

Ben W. Kittredge, wealthy young Evanstonian whose new $8,000 automobile crushed 18 year old Frank Kagan to death Friday night at Clark and Erie streets, was held to the grand jury yesterday on a charge of murder.

The coroner's jury made their recommendation after viewing the blood-stained car, with its fender bent when it struck Kagan, and after listening to the testimony of Arthur Klein, a cousin of the victim.

Harry Linden, automobile demonstrator, who was at Kittredge's side, was held as an accessory after the fact.

Sped Away After Accident.

Klein told how the auto sped away after the accident and of how he had pursued it by taxi until he got near enough to jump upon the running board. Police told of finding a bottle of liquor in Kittredge's possession and confirmed Klein's story of the offer of a $10 bribe.

Kittredge is 34 years old. He lives at 2528 Sheridan road, Evanston, across from the Patten gymnasium. He and his wife and son have lived there a year.

He went to Yale university for three years, taking a law course. His father died and Ben came home and became associated in the business of his father's cousin, Rufus J. Kittredge.

Rufus J. Kittredge is head of Rufus J. Kittredge & Co., color printers, which concern owns an eight story building at 812-24 West Superior street. It is said to be a $1,000,000 concern. Kittredge has a son named Ben—called after the Ben held yesterday.

Kin Amazed at Tragedy.

Newspaper accounts led many to confuse the identity of the man under arrest, and there were numerous calls of sympathy paid at the Rufus Kittredge home yesterday.

Rufus Kittredge and his family had just returned from a long motor trip in the east. Mr. Kittredge spent the day in the city trying to do something for his cousin's son and his family.

"I can't understand it," said Mrs. Rufus Kittredge. "Ben isn't the kind of a man to do a thing like this. I believe the reports have been greatly colored. I know that he doesn't drink. I know him well. He was with the Kittredge company for quite a while, but five years ago he went to Cincinnati, and it was only a year ago he came back to Evanston."

The Rufus Kittredge home is at 741 Judson avenue, Evanston.

INTERNATIONAL DRUG SMUGGLERS EXPOSED BY U. S.

Federal authorities investigating the activities of the alleged "opium ring," broken up Thursday by the police, discovered evidence yesterday that Mrs. Lucile Gray, colored, said to be the leader of the gang, had made frequent trips into the United States from Canada during the last year. Commissioner Mason held Mrs. Gray, David Logans, said to be the fence for distributing the drugs; Winston Huggins, and Claude Scott in bonds of $10,000 on charges of evading the opium act. The federal tax on the amount of opium seized would have amounted to thousands of dollars.

Although Mrs. Gray refused to talk, examination of her luggage revealed that she conducted a boarding house for Pullman porters in Montreal, Canada. Officials believe that porters smuggled the opium into the United States for her.

Inquest in Poison Case Halted to Make Analysis

To permit further analysis of liquids and powders found in his home, the inquest into the death of John Skrejnek, 2324 South Loomis street, was continued yesterday until July 1. Skrejnek died Thursday, supposedly of arsenic poisoning. Mrs. Rose Skrejnek, his widow, and Tony Belansky are in custody.

Tony Skrejnek, a son, testified his father drank some coffee and became violently ill. His stepmother, he said, warned him not to drink any of the coffee or he would become sick, too. He told of his stepmother and Belansky being "very friendly" and of their going out to theaters together.

Mrs. Beatrice Neuman and Charles Zaze, neighbors, testified to violent quarrels between Skrejnek and his wife.

Board of Trade Operator Leaves $1,000,000 Estate

The late S. Warren Lamson, head of Lamson Bros. & Co., Board of Trade operators, left an estate of more than $1,000,000, according to an inventory filed yesterday with Paul Corkell, assistant to the Probate judge. About $300,000 is scheduled as real estate, the remainder, $760,300, is in stocks, bonds, and other securities.

The inventory of the estate of the late Edwin A. Graff, also a Board of Trade man, indicates that he was worth $207,000.

Forest Preserve Awarded Tract Near Palos Park

Three hundred and ninety-three acres of land in the vicinity of Palos Park were added to the forest preserve district of Cook county yesterday by a verdict of a jury before Judge Baldwin of the Circuit court, which awards the land to the district at a cost of approximately $407 an acre. The verdict rules that the total payment to be made is $159,445.50. The defendant in the condemnation proceedings, Patrick H. Carriher, demanded an average of $800 an acre.

TWO WIVES AND FIRM WAKE AS HUSBAND FADES

Bigamy, 'Boss' $1,200, His Only Troubles.

Both of his wives attended the same dance, but that didn't worry Bert Kees, who, until last May, was the manager of the city office of the Chicago Bonding & Insurance company at 912 Rector building. He nonchalantly introduced Wife No. 1 as his sister and Wife No. 2 as a friend.

And now a search is on for Kees. The two wives are one reason, and the other is that when Kees left on May 6 $1,200 belonging to the bonding company disappeared with him. The facts became known yesterday when Mrs. Corinne Harter Kees of 214 North La Crosse avenue filed suit for divorce. She is Wife No. 2. Wife No. 1 is Mrs. Agnes Baldwin Kees of 2264 Park avenue.

Meet in Dramatic Manner.

It was in a dramatic manner that the two women learned they had the same husband. Mrs. Agnes Baldwin Kees had called at the offices of Kees' employers to tell them the man was missing, had disappeared, when Mrs. Corinne Harter Kees called up to ask where her husband was. She was told to hurry to the office. There the wives met, compared notes, and parted as friends.

"He was a rascal," said Mrs. Agnes Baldwin Kees. "Oh, how I wish I had him here for a minute—there would be murder for sure!"

"He has hurt me terribly, and I've suffered more than I can tell," said Mrs. Corinne Harter Kees.

The latter, whom Kees called his "Darling Princess," made public some of his letters.

"Those Teasing Lips."

"Darling, I could just fold you in my arms right now, and kiss you, kiss you, until nothing was left of you," read one. "But never mind, darling, soon I shall come again, and kiss those teasing lips of yours."

Kees balked at having his picture adorn the walls of either of his homes. In answer to a request from wife No. 2 for a picture he write: "I have always been superstitious about pictures, Princess Darling, believing they break friendships."

He was not so superstitious about her photo, however, as he wrote her: "A little picture of the Royal Princess would certainly find a resting place against this humble beggar's heart."

Children Frolic at Picnic

Two hundred and fifty little boys and girls from congested districts on the northwest side, centering at Milwaukee avenue and Augusta street, were the guests of the Red, White, and Blue club, of which Mrs. Joseph G. Coleman is president, at the club's annual picnic held yesterday afternoon in Lincoln park, near Fullerton avenue. The trucks in which the children were conveyed to the picnic grounds were furnished by the Boyer Chemical company, THE TRIBUNE, and the Beckley-Ralston company. A hilarious time was had by all. Brach & Sons donated the candy and the Bowman Dairy company 250 pints of milk and other refreshments. The clubrooms maintained for the children through the year are at 1001 Currier street.

ADVANCE GUARD LEAVES TODAY FOR CADET CAMP

Registration for the first period of two weeks at Camp Roosevelt, Muskegon, Mich., the R. O. T. C. camp for high school boys, which will open Independence day, closed with more than 1,100 youths on the list.

The first contingent of fifty, known as the "Grasshopper division," because they occupy pup tents while setting the big tents in order before the arrival of the main body, will leave Chicago today. The main body will leave on the steamers Carolina and Indiana July 4 at 9 a. m., reporting at the Goodrich docks at 8 a. m. with complete equipment.

Capt. F. L. Beals, commandant, predicts the camp will exceed the attendance of last year. Boys from all over the country have registered. Patriotic organizations are sending groups of boys, defraying all expenses.

The camp schedule provides for drills, maneuvers, school classes, athletics, recreation, and lectures.

SLAYER FREED; SAYS HE FIRED AT "SLUGGERS"

Isadore Ossey, 1225 South Wells street, charged with the murder of Nicholas Nadelsky, 1057 Maxwell street, was yesterday discharged by Judge John F. Haas in the Maxwell street court.

Nadelsky was killed June 8 and the police who arrested Ossey said he fired at them as they came to arrest him. They were across the street at the time.

Ossey said he had been slugged just before the shooting. He believed that agents of a business mens' association in the neighborhood were his aggressors. He shot at them as they ran and accidentally hit Nadelky. Ossey was exonerated by a coroner's jury.

Mrs. Shepley, Seized for Check, Freed on Bonds

Mrs. Laura Pearson Shepley of 4352 Lake Park avenue is at liberty. She was arrested on Friday as the person who had cashed a check signed Laura Pearson at the Congress hotel in March. It came back marked "no funds." Miss Josephine Corcoran, cashier, testified against her in court yesterday.

Mrs. Shepley, apparently alone in court, pleaded she was without legal or family aid and was granted a continuance until July 7. She departed after obtaining $1,500 bond.

Mrs. Laura Pearson Shepley was the main figure some time ago in a suit to recover $30,000, which was filed by William G. Mueller, formerly general manager of the Burley & Tyrrell company. When the judge decided the money had been presented to Mrs. Shepley her husband filed two suits asking $200,000 damages of Mueller.

ACTOR, HONORED BY KITTY'S SHOT, GRINS, FORGIVES

She Can Fire Again for All He Cares.

Joseph Hack, the vaudeville acrobat, who was shot accidentally by Kitty Gordon during her act at the Palace theater, lay on his bed in the American Theatrical hospital yesterday and philosophized. Physicians had informed him he would recover without ill effects.

"I reckon it could have been worse," he said. "Yea, bo. I might have been potted by some soft shoe dancer or a ham actor, but Kitty Gordon—Gee! I guess I ain't got much of a kick coming. She's a swell actress.

O, Boy—Get This

"I've been framing acts and studying snappy situations in the stage game for twenty years. But, boy, I'll tell the world fair not even William H. Shakespeare could figure out a climax like this. Get this:

"A man and a woman have never met before. The first time she crosses his path she bings him. Never so much as said howdy to her before. Wouldn't have known her if I met her. All I ever saw of her on the billboards was her back.

Kindly Omit Flowers.

"And, then, wowie! The first greeting we have is, 'How are you, Mr. Hack? I'm so sorry I shot you.' I forgive the lady and hold no grudge. Flowers, you say? Who, from her? Ha! Since when does potting a guy constitute an occasion for social amenities? Just say this for me, will you? Kinly omit flowers."

Chief Garrity said he was satisfied the shooting was an accident.

Judge Refuses to Let Hoyne Drop Bond Case

Harry Morris of 714 North Dearborn street, a professional bondsman who has been in the county jail for four months awaiting trial for an alleged fake bond transaction, demanded trial or freedom yesterday when his case was called before Chief Justice Crowe in the Criminal court.

An assistant state's attorney informed the court that the state was unprepared for trial and suggested that the case be stricken from the docket with leave to reinstate.

The judge refused.

"I can't allow any man charged with putting over a fake bond to go free until he is acquitted." The case was continued until a witness returns to the city.

POLICE TO GUARD BALLOT BOX AS PLUMBERS ELECT

The fight for control of the plumbers' union, which has been waged with sporadic bloodshed for years, is expected to culminate with the annual election of officers today at 500 South State street.

A heavy police guard will be sent to the union offices because of the feeling between the two factions, the "constitutionals," backed by Simon O'Donnell, head of the Building Trades council, and the "progressives," which claim a majority of the membership and ask "improved conditions."

Gun play at the election two years ago resulting in the shooting of "Mossy" Enright, since murdered, and "Paddy" Kane.

William Hart is candidate for the presidency on the progressive ticket, with James S. Cobb, P. J. Kane, and Frank W. Cole seeing positions as business agents. They are opposed by Florence McCarthy, for president, and Dan McCarthy, William Kimross, and William Curran, for business agents.

MARY BARTELME CAUGHT CHEWING GUM IN SCHOOL!

56 Tell Tales of "Cutting Up" in '80.

"Mary Bartelme, put your gum in the waste basket and stay after school. Another prank from you, Charlie Taylor, and your suspension is assured."

The entire class roared with laughter. Voices had changed, but it was the same wholesome laugh. They were in the French room of the Blackstone hotel, and it was the second time the class had laughed at the expense of Mary Bartelme and Charlie Taylor.

The first time was forty years ago in the old West Division High school, South Morgan and Monroe streets.

Fifty-six Attend Reunion.

Fifty-six members of the class of 1880, numbering 128 graduates, attended the reunion. Only eighteen of the class are dead, among them being George Perkins, who died on June 18. Others are sick or too far away, and twenty could not be located by Seymour Morris, who conceived the project.

Each of those present wore a card with his or her name printed on it. The married women used their maiden names.

Mary Bartelme is known today as Miss Mary M. Bartelme, assistant to the judge of the juvenile court. Charlie Taylor is C. C. Taylor, manager of the Central Actuarial Bureau, 175 West Jackson boulevard.

His Department, Well—

Mr. Taylor was the cutup of the class. He was suspended from high school six times, but finally reformed to graduate and become a successful business man.

Among the others who attended were Katherine Stiles Brower of Grand Rapids, Mich.; Elsie Sweet Pierce, Minneapolis, Minn.; Grace Bryan Osborn-son, 305 Oak Park avenue, Oak Park; Caroline M. Corby, 923 Windsor avenue; Otto Dreier, John Nuveen, William N. Preston; Louis W. Crow, 747 Junior terrace; Agnes Redfield Brenton, 525 Belmont avenue, and Ida Atkinson Graham, 4167 Addison street. Blanche E. MacLeish, now the wife of C. K. G. Billings of New York, sent regrets.

Nettie Dreier Heegaard, a resident of Copenhagen, Denmark, cabled regrets.

LAKE SEARCHED FOR MISSING HIGH SCHOOL TEACHER

Maj. J. H. Jones' Friends Fear Rowboat Swamped

Capt. Thomas Carland of the Evanston coast guard, the motorboats of the Sanitary district, the Kenosha coast guard, and the Evanston Yacht club searched the waters of Lake Michigan until late last night for signs of an overturned rowboat.

They are seeking Maj. Joseph H. Jones, teacher of zoology and science at the Evanston Township High school, or evidence of his fate. They are seemingly unanimous in their belief that Jones drowned early yesterday after his boat had capsized.

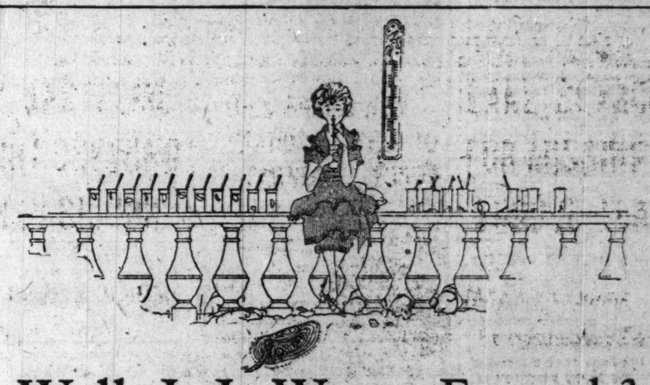
Maj. Jones left his home, 2918 Dewey avenue, Friday night in his auto. He was carrying a motor for his rowboat. It is indicated that he installed the motor in the boat and then went out into the lake. There has been no trace of him since. The search will be resumed today.

The auto was found near the beach where the rowboat had been moored. The motor for the boat, and the boat itself were missing.

It is believed by some that when the boat overturned, if it did, the weight of the motor sank it.

Mrs. Jones and her daughter, Mary, 9 years old, patrolled the beach all day looking out across the waters.

Jones was a strong swimmer, an all-around athlete. He had been chairman of the athletic committee of the high school, and track and basketball coach. In his college days at Dartmouth he was a champion long distance runner and captain of the track team.



Well, Is It Warm Enough?

By Anita Allison

Those of us who must perforce console ourselves with the familiar bromide of the stay-at-home, "Chicago, after all, is the greatest summer resort in the world," will now bring out electric fans, brew brimming pitchers of iced tea and inspect our bathing suits for signs of the depredations of the vandal moth. For Summer is upon us.

Already the beaches are swarming with intrepid bathers who prefer the chill winds and waters of the lake to the blazing rays of the late June sun. Soda fountains are going at full tilt and the hot-dog man can scarcely keep pace with his orders. Verily, Summer is upon us.

For three sultry months there will be one question uppermost in every mind: "How can I keep cool?"

Sherbets, iced drinks and washed-air movies do their bit, of course. But the most important consideration, after all, is clothes.

On the avenue an observant eye sees fluffy tub frocks of organdie and printed voile. Georgettes, taffetas, foulards, tricolettes and Shantungs abound.

All very well, all appropriate—but, what does milady wear beneath 'em?

Hundreds of smart women are wearing Futurist. Sheer, soft-fitting, these are the ideal undergarments for sultry Summer. They give to women all the coolness, freedom and comfort that men get from their "athletic underwear" and, withal, are still delightfully dainty and feminine.

And you can get them in so many different textures to suit the purse and fancy. In addition to the standard Futurist type of garment, there are also chic knickers and dainty vests, both of which now have tremendous vogue.

While you are not by any means to confuse Futurist with the ordinary "athletic underwear," so called, you will be canny if you adopt Futurist for all sport wear, golfing, tennis, et cetera. These garments are particularly delightful for dancing because they give such welcome freedom to the body.

If you do go away this Summer, be sure to include a generous supply of Futurist in your wardrobe. There is nothing more essential to comfort than a bountiful array of fresh, cool underthings.

I wonder if all mothers know they can now secure Futurist in children's sizes, just the thing for little girls to keep them cool and comfortable.

All of the better stores and shops now sell Futurist. In the Loop you can see these garments at Field's, Mandel's and Stevens', for instance.

If you have the slightest difficulty finding just what you want, don't hesitate to drop a line to me at 310 West Erie Street.

MISS DUNHAM BECOMES BRIDE OF CASSELBERRY

Notables of Lake Forest Witness Ceremony.

Quite the smartest wedding of the summer took place yesterday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock at the Church of the Holy Spirit in Lake Forest, when Miss Caryl Dunham, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert James Dunham of 1521 North State parkway and Lake Forest, became the bride of William Evans Casselberry, son of Mrs. Willam E. Other weddings last night were Miss Miriam Wagner and Merritt Bragdon, Virginia Austin and Kenneth Burns, Virginia Allen and Oliver Wilson of Boston, Ruth Crawford and Hugo F. Werner of Saginaw, Mich.

A. B. Dick's Niece Wed.

SEAMEN DEMAND LAWS PUT THEM ON AN EQUALITY

GENOA, June 26.—The international congress of seamen today adopted a resolution stating that the congress should recommend to each nation that seamen be placed on the same legal level with ship owners.

The resolution declares this could be accomplished through the repeal of all laws and the abrogation of all treaties compelling seamen to labor against their will when a vessel is in safety and those providing incarceration for seamen failing to fulfill labor contracts.

The committee on working hours adopted the principle of the eight hour day. The delegates from Japan, Spain, France, Holland and Germany voted for, while those from England, Sweden, Norway, and India voted against it.

New York, June 26.—[By the Associated Press.]—The extraordinary grand jury, convened last August by Gov. Smith's order to inquire into what was described as an "overshadowing crime," will adjourn next Wednesday for a summer vacation, it was announced today.

The jury will reconvene in October. To date no indictments have been returned in connection with the "overshadowing crime," the nature of which has not been revealed. The extraordinary jury, however, has found indictments against Charles F. Murphy, leader of Tammany Hall; James E. HOLLAND GUARDS EX-KAISER FROM ATTACKS BY AIR

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[By Special Cable.]

THE HAGUE, June 26.—The Dutch government has issued a notice that foreign aviators are prohibited from flying over Doorn or the immediate surrounding region. This announcement is made now, it is explained, because the air convention has just become effective, but an informant states it is the result of an alleged attempt made on the former kaiser's life last week and through rumors reaching the Dutch government of a plot to bomb or kidnap the former kaiser by air plane.

Airplanes would encounter difficulty in landing inside the former kaiser's estate, as the property is chiefly wooded and open spaces are traversed by ditches. Even the lawns fronting on the chateau are seamed with ditches, which are kept constantly dug deep. They would wreck any machine trying to land.

Kitchen gardens surrounding the chateau seem to be growing chiefly beans, sweet peas, and other vegetables which climb poles, only instead of light poles they are trained to climb stout posts. These posts would prevent airplanes landing there, and are believed merely camouflage to hide an anti-airplane appliance. It is reported wires are being arranged to stretch from tree to tree over the open spaces also.

MASONS TO BUILD $750,000 TEMPLE ON SOUTH SIDE

Will Be One of the Largest and Finest in World.

BY AL CHASE.

Chicago is to have what is claimed will be the largest and finest building in the United States, with perhaps one or two exceptions, devoted exclusively to Masonic affairs. It will cost $750,000 and will be called the Midway Masonic temple. It will be on the east side of Cottage Grove avenue, just south of Sixty-first street. Work will start on Aug. 15.

It will be the culmination of years of effort on the part of various south side Masonic bodies to erect a central meeting place to accommodate lodges now scattered over a vast area, many in buildings entirely unsuited for their use. The new temple will house thirty Masonic bodies to start with, with ultimate accommodations for forty-two. The territory covered will be from Twenty-second to Ninety-fifth streets and from the lake to State street.

Have Purchased a Site.

A number of Masonic bodies in this territory have incorporated as the Midway Masonic Temple association and have secured a charter. The association has purchased a site with a frontage on Cottage Grove avenue of 200 feet, with a depth of 125 feet.

Architects Robert M. Hyde and Arthur Verne Brown have drawn plans for a building in the Greek Doris style, to be of tapestry brick with Bedford stone trim. It will contain several innovations unusual in lodge halls. The entire building will be mechnnically ventilated and in summer kept at a temperature of around 70 degrees no matter how much convention weather we get. All halls will be sound proof.

Seven Lodge Halls.

There will be seven lodge halls, which means forty-two Masonic bodies can be accommodated each week. The first floor will have an auditorium seating 1,800, with stage, parlors, foyer, rest rooms, banquet hall, and kitchen. The heating, ventilating, and cooling plants will be in the basement.

On the mezzanine floor will be offices, clubrooms, billiard hall, bowling alleys, lounging rooms, locker rooms and showers for ball teams.

The second floor will contain four large lodge halls, with parlors, restrooms, etc. The main lodge hall on this floor will be 60x76, and will have a side stage, 40x50. It will accommodate 1,200. Lodge hall No. 2 on this floor will be 40x60, and accommodate 450. Halls Nos. 3 and 4 will be 36x55, and have accommodations for 350.

Kitchenette with Every Lodge.

On the second mezzanine floor there will be three additional lodge halls of the same size as halls Nos. 2, 3 and 4 on the second floor.

Every one of the seven lodge halls will be a complete and independent unit, with anterooms, coatrooms, parlors, and property rooms. Each will have a kitchenette for buffet luncheons.

It is expected to have the entire building ready for dedication on May 1, 1921.

HERRERA PICKED OUT HUT WHERE CARRANZA DIED

General Betrayed His Chief, Says Cabrera.

New York, June 26.—[Special.]—The New York Tribune prints the following dispatch, which it says was received by it today from San Antonio. Cabrera was Carranza's secretary of the treasury and was with him on the flight from Mexico City. He was sleeping in a hut near the president when the latter was killed.

BY LUIS CABRERA.

Mexico City, June 18.—The first stop after abandoning the train of the president's convoy [May 14], was made in the little town of Santa Maria, Oeatepec. Here we passed some minutes deciding the direction to take. To go in the direction of Perate in order to get into the mountains of Vera Cruz would mean falling into the hands of Beginio Aguilar. It was decided to turn towards the north into the mountains of Puebla.

We spent the night of May 14 in the hacienda called Yocatepec. Here many civilians left us and some other men who were in charge of the horses.

We arrived at noon at the San Francisco Ixtacacamaxtitlan, where I had relatives. We lunched here and went on toward Tetetla. We stopped for the night before arriving there in the little village of Zitlalcuantla.

I knew my brothers, Alfonso, the governor of Puebla, and Don Federico, were coming from there. We all hoped the caravan could rest a few days in the shelter of the Sierra under the forces of Colonial Gabriel Rarrias in Tetetla.

Gen. Herrero Appears.

On the 20th we took our luncheon in Patla, a place situated at the foot of deep ravines. Here Mariel learned we were in the region of Rodolfo Herrera.

On going out of Patla a person rode up to us and went toward the president, who, with Gens. Murguia and Mariel, always was at the head of the cavalcade. It was Herrera who presented himself to guard us. He embraced Mariel, wept, put himself at the orders of the president, swearing loyalty and offering security for the trip through the country. Mariel knew him personally and had great confidence in him.

All Herrera's directions were followed. On arriving at La Union Herrera suggested that Mariel leave for Xico to get some information.

Picks Carranza's Hut.

Herrera went on with the president and insisted that he would not stay in La Union, which is a little town with quite a few troops, but should go on to Tlaxcalantongo, a place very secure, strategic, and where we would have enough to eat and pasture for the horses. When we arrived at Tlaxcalantongo he in person designated the hut where Carranza was to sleep. He put Murguia and his men in a little house at the edge of the village, about three or four blocks away.

When he had the president placed Herrera then made the excuse that he had just heard of the wounding of his brother in a neighboring place, and he used this pretext to go away.

Death of President.

The hut of the president was attacked at 3 o'clock that night by Herrera's forces. During the attack the president died.

Now comes Herrera and says the president committed suicide when he saw he was lost. And there is much discussion and investigation, but why?

Is it believed the details of how the president fell can absolve the assassin of the premeditation shown by the cowardly preparation of the afternoon before, or the treason of the attack in the night? And even if it were possible that Carranza committed suicide when he saw himself trapped in the manner in which he was closed in and then attacked, could it free Herrera from the charge of assassination?

But, no, Carranza did not kill himself. Such a version is absurd, even if there was not a presumption stronger, higher, more human and more unanswerable than the word of a traitor—Carranza's whole life, all strength, all serenity, all faith.

MANIAC REGRETS HIS FAILURE TO KILL ALL FAMILY

Sorry Baby, Wife, and Her Parents Still Live.

Still muttering regret because his frenzied raid upon his family had failed to end their lives, Nolan B. Robinson, escaped inmate of the Elgin Insane asylum, was taken to Wheaton last night by Sheriff George Leineke. It was less than fifteen hours after he had crept into his darkened home and tried to exterminate his wife, parents-in-law and five months old baby.

"Will my wife die?" he asked.

"No, the doctors think she will recover."

"Will the old man and the old woman die?"

"Your mother-in-law will. The surgeons say there is some hope for your father-in-law."

"I wish I had killed them all," he mumbled.

Arrested by Train Crew.

Three hours after his raid Robinson was arrested on an Aurora and Elgin electric car by the train crew, who noticed blood stains on his clothes, and turned over to the Chicago police.

The maniac's victims are:

Mrs. Vera Brown Robinson, his wife, 23 years old.

Mrs. Evelyn Brown, his mother-in-law, 66 years old.

L. C. Brown, his father-in-law, 75 years old.

Evelyn, the 5 months old daughter.

According to Robinson's statements to the police, to whom he talked freely, the attack was made because his wife had refused to live with him and because her parents had alienated her affections. He said he "hoped his parents in law would die."

Enters Through Bathroom.

It was between 2 and 3 o'clock in the morning that he gained admittance to the apartment, which is above a store at 183 Railroad avenue, Wheaton, by smashing in a bathroom window. The first person he met on entering was his wife. In his hand he carried an iron bar.

His first blow sent her reeling to the floor. He struck her again and started for his father-in-law's bedroom.

The old man was lying on his bed, unable to move. A stroke of paralysis had made him helpless. Robinson crushed his skull with the iron bar.

Mrs. Brown attempted to run from the room. The man swung the iron bar again and the aged woman fell to the floor with a fractured skull.

The maniac then rushed for the baby in its crib. She was severely bruised.

"I only hit the child once," he told the police. "The kid never knew what happened."

Wife Fights Madman.

By this time his wife had regained consciousness. She ran to her husband and they grappled. His fists struck her again and again. The pair brushed against the kitchen table. A long butcher knife lay upon it.

Robinson seized the knife and slashed his wife. Mrs. Robinson became unconscious.

With her limp in his arms remorse swept the crazed mind and Robinson kissed her. He said later he kissed all of her bruises.

Then he placed her in a chair and turned on the water faucet for a drink. While he was drinking she regained consciousness and jumped through a window. She was barefooted and bleeding.

Beats Wife Again.

Robinson caught her in the yard and rained blow after blow upon her face with his fists. She fainted again. He carried her three miles to a farmhouse and placed her on a porch. She again became conscious. She warned him to leave, which he did. He walked ten miles and boarded a Chicago bound Aurora and Elgin Electric train.

Robinson, a former sailor, was committed to the asylum at Elgin on May 5 after a judge and physician in Wheaton had declared him insane. He became a trusty in less than a month. He escaped after a dance last Monday night.

He met his wife two years ago when he was stationed at the naval training station in Grant Park. They were married shortly afterward. A year ago, after he was released from the service, they rented an apartment. A few months later he began to act strangely and his wife went home.

He went to Wheaton, took the baby and went to Joliet. They traveled on freight trains.

In Joliet he collected money and went to Dallas, Tex., his former home. He was arrested a few days later, brought back to Wheaton and committed to Elgin.

WIFE SUES COP WHO RESCU 10; 'HERO NO LO. ER'

For twenty years Patrol Sergeant Martin C. Mulvihill's name has been synonymous with chivalry, romance, and matchless courage. They called him the police Sir Galahad. Citizens remember how on Nov. 2, 1917, he made ten trips into a burning building at 543 North Michigan avenue to rescue ten persons. And one little girl can tell you how he went back an eleventh time—for her rag doll.

And Mrs. Mulvihill, who lives at 2443 West Jackson boulevard, recalled yesterday that on his forty-fifth birthday anniversary in 1917 he entertained for her husband and there were appropriate toasts to his acts of heroism.

"I don't know what the toasts were made of," she said, "but he hasn't been the same man since. He hasn't contributed one cent to the support of the family. Why, he used even to trot our 4 year old son on his knee and boast, 'I'll make a mountaineer out of that lad. He can drink more red-eye now than I can.' He's changed so that my daughter hasn't spoken to him for three years. And he drives two automobiles when he's off duty."

Mrs. Mulvihill is suing for a divorce.

EVANSTON GIRLS' LEAGUE EXPANDS TO THIRD HOUSE

The Girls' League of Evanston moved into its third house yesterday and held a little celebration. The league began with one house and with the girls themselves coöperating in its management and upkeep. Each girl had her own particular duty. One month she was laundress, the next month she might be treasurer, or "house mother," or something else. Each girl washed her own dishes and put them on her own shelf in the pantry, and each cooked her own meals.

Transients were given a night's lodging for 50 cents, and sometimes the league obtained jobs for girls in need.

The league has grown to a membership of more than 100 in the last three years. It is believed to be the only organization of its kind in America. The main house is at 615 Church street.

"BABY NOBODY WANTED" AT 9 IS HOMELESS AGAIN

Foster Parent's Burden Increased by Stork.

When a feller needs a friend, as does 9 year old William, there is nothing to do save to trust in Providence, as William is doing.

This story is written at the second cross roads of destiny that William has reached in his lifetime, and there are involved several persons.

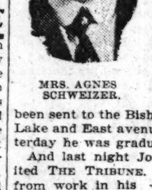
JOHN G. SCHWEIZER.

On April 11, 1911, William came into the world at the Ross hospital, 1900 Kedzie avenue. The motherly nurses called him "the baby nobody wanted." He became a ward of the county.

There lived at 1375 Carroll avenue John G. Schweizer, and his invalid wife, Katherine. They had no children. Schweizer is one of the type of citizens that goes to make up what might be termed the soul of the city—a hard working, home loving man, who has worked twenty-five years for the same firm of building contractors

William Is Adopted.

The Schweizers decided to adopt a child. They saw William. He was just 1 week old. John carried him home, and his wife was overjoyed. On Dec. 10, 1913, in the Cook County court, they signed the adoption papers. A few years later Katherine died.



MRS. AGNES SCHWEIZER.

In January of 1919 John married Miss Agnes Peterson, and they established a home at 2046 Flournoy street. William, in the meantime, had been sent to the Bishop Quarter school. Lake and East avenue, Oak Park. Yesterday he was graduated.

And last night John Schweizer visited THE TRIBUNE. He had hurried from work in his blue denim shirt and khaki suit. He related the foregoing.

Expected Mr. Stork.

Then:

"We're expecting a new arrival at our house tomorrow. And I just don't know what to do. I make $50 a week. I'm paying for my home; I'm supporting my wife's mother—she lives at 1029 Escanaba avenue, South Chicago—and I've about reached my limit.

"I love little William. But I just can't afford to keep him. Yet I don't want to give him up unless I can be sure the people who take him will love him. Do you think THE TRIBUNE could find some lonesome couple who would love a bright, clean little shaver? His mother won't care for him. I've visited her. She's wealthy. She lives in North Robey street. She said it had been so long since she had seen him that she did not feel like a mother to him."

WILLIAM SCHWEIZER.

Tracing His Mother.

The Cook county court adoption papers which Mr. Schweizer carried, bore the name of Charlotte Lerch, as William's mother. He said he thought she was living at 3424 North Robey street. A reporter visited that address last night, but no one answered the door. Later he telephoned.

"Is Charlotte Lerch there?" he asked.

"Why—who is this?"

"This is a TRIBUNE reporter. John G. Schweizer has visited our office and asked help in caring for a 9 year old boy, William."

"Well, what's that got to do with us?"

"We were merely investigating one phase of his story—that Charlotte Lerch, the mother, lived at your address."

"Paid for His Help."

"O! He was paid at the time. That is understood. Besides, it is so long ago."

"Could we talk with Charlotte?"

"She's not here. I don't know who you mean."

"He says he has asked her to take the boy because he is unable to provide for him longer."

"I know nothing about it."

She hung up.

BRITISH AND FRENCH PLAN WORLD LOAN TO PAY AMERICA

[By Special Cable.]

PARIS, June 26.—Having failed to get America to await payment of national loans until Germany pays, Great Britain and France now are reported to be contemplating floating an international loan for the express purpose of repaying the United States the loans falling due in October.

Security for this loan would be created by pledging Germany's payments, through a mortgage on customs receipts or by some other method.

The plan is not enthusiastically approved here. It is pointed out the money to subscribe the loan is available only in America, so the plan simply would attempt by another way to get America to wait for final settlement until Germany pays.

Another objection is that the 120,000,000,000 gold mark indemnity proposed to be paid by Germany in 3,000,000,000 yearly payments would provide interest and a sinking fund on a loan of only 50,000,000,000 francs, of which France's share would be less than what it owes the British and Americans. In consequence, the German indemnity would not even pay the debt, and would leave nothing for the devastated regions and military pensions.

Spares Rod; Slapped and Called Boob; Asks Divorce

When John D. Allen, superintendent of St. Andrew's Sunday school, applied modern methods of chastisement to his children, Ida May Allen, his wife, slapped his face and called him a boob, according to witnesses in Judge McDonald's branch of the Superior court yesterday. For these and various other reasons, Judge McDonald indicated that he would grant a divorce to Mr. Allen.

Mrs. John Allen, mother of the complainant, who lives at 5671 Washington boulevard, told the court that she often saw her daughter-in-law slap her husband.

No Sugar

Required in Jiffy-Jell Fruit Desserts

Sugar is scarce and high, yet now is the time for rich, fruity desserts.

The solution is Jiffy-Jell. Serve it alone with its real-fruit flavors, or mix in fresh fruit if you wish.

Jiffy-Jell comes ready-sweetened. It comes acidulated with lemon or grape acid. Simply add boiling water and let cool. Then you have a fruit dessert rich in real-fruit essence.

Jiffy-Jell flavors are not artificial. They are condensed fruit juices in liquid form, in bottles. There's a vial in each package.

They are rich in fruit, for much ripe fruit-juice is condensed to flavor each dessert. Mix in fresh fruit if you wish, but Jiffy-Jell itself has fruit essence in abundance.

To make salad jell, use lime-fruit flavor, tart and green.

Use mint for mint-jell to be served with meats.

These are delicious summer dainties, and the sugar is already there.

RULE AND RUIN RADICALISM.

Karl Radek, the Russian bolshevist leader, is especially interested in propaganda in the United States, which he says has "the most violent government now existing" and must therefore be overthrown by violence.

With Comrade Radek and his collaborators in Russia, American radicals of the Communist and I. W. W. varieties are cordially working. They are "boring from within" in the organized labor movement and attacking from without in various guises. Every conference of the great federations and brotherhoods is a battle ground these days of radical and conservative, and the conflict is as violent as it once was between organized labor and capital.

The radical labor tactics are clearly explained by the Russian. "In the United States," he says, "they (the radical leaders) are furthering strikes which they declare have no purpose other than to make the burden of life under a democratic form of government impossible."

It is easy to follow in the American labor movement today the two currents, one keeping its feet planted on trade union principles, using the strike for concrete purposes to obtain wage increases or better conditions of work, respecting bargains as the essential of the system of collective bargaining, taking a citizen's part in community life, ready to defend our democratic institutions, believing in progress through evolution; the other party forever agitating for the sake of agitation, or rather, as Radek says, "to make the burden of life under a democratic government impossible."

That, in fact, is the object of the radical tactics in this country as elsewhere, to make life intolerable, to prevent our institutions from working, to keep labor and capital at each other's throat, to paralyze production and transportation, to bring chaos in order that the radicals may build out of the ruins of present society the utopia which their egotism assures them they will be able to create. Sympathetic strikes, outlaw strikes, sabotage, the breaking of contracts, and, if expedient, the breaking of laws, are the fighting tactics intended to destroy trade unionism, private industry and democratic institutions by making life as it is now organized intolerable.

This is not a fight between employer and employé, or even between labor and capital. It is a fight between those who believe in democratic society with its foundations of individual liberty, private property, private initiative and progress through evolution, and those who in Russia have set up an extreme form of collective despotism which has wiped out individual liberty, destroyed property, reduced the productive functions of the people to a minimum by penalizing private initiative, and wasted lives as ruthlessly as the worst of the tyrants whom democracy overthrew.

The radicals in America deny these facts and try to cover their tactics with a gauze of altruism. What they are after, according to themselves, is a better society. What they are after, though most of them will not see it, is what Russia is getting.

If the American wage earner wants what the Russians are getting under Russian communism, they may consistently follow the lead of the communist-bolshevist radicals in America. But if they are not ready to march into that morass they will fight radicalism in the labor movement until it is out root and branch.

What is needed is knowledge of the facts. The American wage earner, with the highest pay, the best conditions, the best prospects of prosperity and progress of any wage earner in the world, may be fool enough to throw these all away in exchange for dreams which have been realized in the slaughter and devastation of triumphant Red radicalism in Russia. We do not think he is, but it is time for him to make up his mind. Radical tactics in this country are costing the nation, including the wage earning class, a heavy and growing price.

HELP THEM TO THE COUNTRY.

If there is a current away from the farm to the cities, of which we are all talking, there is another away from the cities to the farm, to which we give little thought.

The current away from the farm is powerful. The current away from the cities is weak. It is hardly a current; rather a trickle. But it is worth considering. We realize that entirely aside from high wages and short hours of work, the lure of city life draws the young people of the country, and we are trying to counteract its influence. A hard task, yielding perhaps little result. But there is also the lure of country life for many young people who are disillusioned in regard to the city—who are tired of its vexations, its cares and burdens, and who long for life in the open.

Why not give more attention to this impulse, which is natural as the impulse of country youth toward the city? Why not work with the current instead of against it, or as well as against it?

We do very little for the city man or woman who wants to get to the country. For some of them it is the problem of getting back, and that is not an easy one. For many others it is the problem of getting away for the first time, and that is much harder.

A man or woman, with city training, cannot pack a grip and take the first train for the country. First of all he or she must learn a little of what successful work in the country requires. We can supply that by education if we will take a little trouble. We think the city schools ought to establish vocational training for the farm and dairying and with that give guidance to employment. Another important step affects also the young farmer. That is to increase the means of getting land on reasonable leases and by gradual purchase on easy terms.

The welfare of the nation, economically, socially, and politically, depends upon the maintenance of a prosperous agriculture and of a safe balance between country and city. That balance is being destroyed and there is no question of greater moment than how to restore it. The hopeful sign is that since Theodore Roosevelt opened discussion of it, we have all become in some degree aroused to its importance. But not nearly enough has been done. Mere talk helps, but we must try to make our talk count in practical action. We think our suggestion for country life education in city schools is important, and we hope the press and educational authorities will take it up.

KIDDING THE ENGLISH.

We are sorry the English go in for prize fighting. In many respects they are a great little people. They sent some university track runners over here recently who did nicely. They play lawn tennis well, better than we can. They are great at racing horses. They are pretty good at yachting. But not so very good.

They lead the world in diplomacy and they are fine soldiers, winning nearly every war they lose. They have a great navy. We have profound respect for the British navy. We hope the British will lend it to us if we ever happen to need it.

They row well, and rowing is the worst heart breaking sport there is. Only a sturdy people can produce great crews, and the English produce crews which row together for years. Once in a while an English crew is licked, but not so often. An outfit of formless Belgians turned the trick twice and the Harvard second eight did it just before the war, but on the water the English are there.

If they would just admit that prize fighting is not their game we could not kid them at all, but with so many distinctions naturally theirs, they still cling to the idea that they can use the gloves. It is pathetic, and the temptation to kid them is irresistible.

Recently there was much display preliminary to the fight which Frank Moran, the Yank, was to have with some Englishman, who lasted a fractional part of one round, and the illustrated papers found that a small corner on the back page would serve for an illustration of the result.

Then there was a fight between Beckett and Bombardier Wells for the championip of England. Beckett is the lad who stood up seventeen seconds before Carpentier. Wells is a noble old timer. A moving picture of Wells' fighting would be a still of the Dying Gladiator. They are pie for the Frogs, and the matter has a serious aspect.

The English speaking races are supposed to be the two fisted races of the world. Their symbol is that of the conqueror who uses his fists. They don't knife, club, kick, bite, or gouge. The power of this idea is terrific. It represents power, courage, infallibility, and sovereignty, and with it the English speaking peoples stand on top of the world.

Now here are the English showing us all up. What we fear is that some day a Chink, a big northern Chink, will stand in a ring with an English champion, and in the first ten seconds of fighting place a right on that champion's chin and knock him clear off the island.

The structure of our civilization will not stand that. You'll hear it cracking and going down. Then there will be something you can call chaos.

The British are willing that the Greek soldiers should do their fighting in Turkey. Won't the English permit Americans to do their prize fighting?

CAN YOU BEAT IT?

The New York Times finds the Republican plank on international relations most unsatisfactory, because "nowhere in the platform is there any word of approval for the covenant adopted at Versailles," and the Times further asserts that "the agreement among the nations to preserve the peace of the world" or the "international association," which the Republicans "profess to favor," "would be merely the league of nations under another name."

Thus we have the Wilsonian dogma from the pen of an adept. There are all sorts of constitutions and forms of association in national life. There are different constitutions even for republics or democracies. The British have one, the French another, Latin American republics various others, ourselves another, the new nations of Europe various others. But when it comes to a league of nations there can be but one constitution, the sacred document formulated at Versailles. Any one who thinks of any other form of international association is insincere, not to say blasphemous. Mr. Wilson and his colleagues have brought forth not merely a constitution but the only possible constitution.

EMMA GOLDMAN'S CURE.

[From the New York Tribune.]

The Petrograd correspondent of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE reports that in Emma Goldman's room is an American flag draped about a picture of her niece.

"That's the flag of my niece's country," Emma remarked to the correspondent. "I'm going back there some day, for I love America as I love no other land."

What the correspondent writes may well be true. A trip abroad often works a permanent cure of anti-Americanism. When the deportation occurred last winter the Tribune ventured to say that many of the anarchists would be healed, and suggested that some might be honest enough to declare it.

Doubtless in time Miss Goldman will realize her desire to see America again. Cleansed of mind, she would be welcome. It is not the spirit of the great republic to think of past offenses when there is genuine regeneration. And if a flag about the picture of a niece pleads for amnesty, so does the grave of a nephew who died gloriously on the field of battle in France. A musician of remarkable talent, he resigned the duty of entertaining the soldiers, which was assigned to him, and asked for a return to his company, saying he came to Europe as a man, not as an artist, and fell in the first engagement.

SHE SAID AN EARFUL.

[From the Farmington Bugle.]

Engineer Richardson bumped a flivver and its sole occupant, a woman, off the track Sunday afternoon while bringing his engine over from Monmouth. The woman was determined to contest the right of way with the locomotive and drove on to the track just in time to get hit as the engineer could not stop in time to avoid it. The fliv was wrecked but the only damage sustained by the woman was a complete wreck of her disposition and she handed Richey an earful of language.

Another Red, Revolutionary Attack on American Principles.

(Walter Bagehot, "The English Constitution.")

"The most strange fact, though the most certain in nature, is the unequal development of the human race. . . . We have a great community . . . crowds of people scarcely more civilized than the majority of two thousand years ago; we have others, even more numerous, such as the best people were a thousand years since. The lower orders, the middle orders, are still, when tried by what is the standard of the educated 'ten thousand,' narrow-minded, unintelligent, incurious. . . . Great communities are like great mountains—they have in them the primary, secondary, and tertiary strata of human progress; the characteristics of the lower regions resemble the life of old times rather than the present life of the higher regions. And a philosophy which does not ceaselessly remember, which does not continually obtrude, the palpable differences of the various parts, will be a theory radically false, because it has omitted a capital reality;—will be a theory essentially misleading, because it will lead men to expect what does not exist, and not to anticipate that which they will find."

The Empty Stage.

(Further Letters of John Butler Yeats.)

The desire to go on living is the passion and sin of the old man and the scorn of the young. The young do not see death and the old see nothing else, or rather for the young it is a figure of the imagination and to the old a reality that conquers or would conquer the imagination. Indeed, when we are young, for us, whether men or women, there is fascination in the scythe Time holds in his hand. We gather round it and examine it and admire its tragic sharpness and its terrible swiftness, but old people, whimpering and trembling, stand round the hour-glass and are careful lest anything should agitate the glass and the hands that hold it. In youth we do not see death, the stage is too crowded. In old age all the actors have left—and they were only actors—and death remains sitting patient on his stool.

HOW TO DRESS WOUNDS.

THE following is suggested as the proper method for the treatment of a fresh wound:

1. Trim away all badly injured tissue—tissue liable to die because it has been mangled, bruised or lacerated.
2. Cleanse with ether.
3. Spray or wash wound with iodine (2 per cent).
4. If cavities exist pack with dry gauze.
5. Dress dry.

Treatment of infected wounds: All wounds treated as late as the third day after injury are to be treated as infected wounds.

1. Remove all scabs and loose skin.
2. Cleanse with ether.
3. Spray or swab with Dakin's solution of sodium hypochlorite.
4. If cavities exist pack them with gauze saturated with Dakin's solution.
5. Dress moist.

Treatment of clean wounds: Treat all wounds as clean on the fifth day and after unless infected.

1. Spray or swab with neutral hydrocarbon oil containing iodine.
2. If cavities exist pack them with dry gauze.
3. Dress dry.

Treatment of indolent wounds:

1. Cleanse with ether.
2. Spray or swab with argyrol (5 per cent solution) or swab with balsam of Peru.
3. If cavities exist pack them with dry gauze.
4. Dress dry, using slight pressure.

Treatment of burns:

1. Apply hydrocarbon salve and dress dry.
2. This may later be varied with neutral hydrocarbon oil containing iodine.
3. Or treated as an indolent wound.

Equipment for minor wound treatment:

1. Five white enamel 5x6 inch jars containing:
(1 jar)—1 inch bandages.
(1 jar)—2 inch bandages.
(1 jar)—Sterile gauze.
(1 jar)—Sterile cotton.
(1 jar)—Sterile wooden tongue blades to be used as spatulas and applicators.
2. One 3x4 inch white enamel jar containing a sterile neutral hydrocarbon ointment.
3. One 2x1 inch covered glass dish containing sterilized dish containing rubber tissue cut in strips.
4. One 4x17 inch white enamel tray containing six splinter forceps, six sharp pointed scissors, and six probes.
5. One medicine glass containing a 5 per cent solution of carbolic acid in which is kept forceps.
6. One 2x8 inch white enameled tray.
7. One hard rubber atomizer containing a 2 per cent solution of iodine.
8. One atomizer containing fresh Dakin's solution.
9. One atomizer containing a solution of iodine in hydrocarbon oil.
10. One atomizer containing benzine.
11. One can of ether.
12. One jar of solidified liniment.
13. Several one-fourth inch strips of adhesive plaster one inch long.
14. One bandage shears.
15. A number of aluminum finger guards.

These are suggestions for discussion made to a recent meeting of the American Association of Industrial Physicians and Surgeons.

CONDITION HARD TO DETERMINE.

Worried father and mother write: "Is there any chance for a boy of 9½ years to recover fully from the effects of scarlet fever? Over two months ago our boy got red rash over his body. A doctor said the boy would be all right in about four days. After being home four days the boy went back to school for two days, and then got so sick we had to call another doctor, who, after examination, said the boy had scarlet fever and his kidneys were badly affected. Now his heart beats twice as fast as it should, and the doctor cannot give us a definite answer. We are very much worried over it and wish that somebody would give us a little hope that our boy will be all right again. The doctor says his kidneys are almost normal, but his heart is very weak and when he sleeps he breathes very heavily. He has no appetite and lost about seven or eight pounds during the sickness. He looks very pale and weak."

REPLY.

Bright's disease is a not infrequent after effect of scarlet fever. If the kidneys are almost normal, the outlook in that direction is not very bad. By care he should escape chronic Bright's. If his rapid, irritable pulse is due to weakness and kidney trouble, it should get better. If he has an endocarditis or myocarditis, the outlook is not so good. Any one of these conditions is liable to follow scarlet fever.

THEN YOU WILL ENVY THE THIN.

Doris K. writes: "I am 14 years old, weigh 113 pounds and am 5 feet 4½ inches tall. I eat plenty of proteins and other nourishing foods, but am still under weight.

"1. What shall I eat?

"2. How much should I weigh?"

REPLY.

1. If you want to fatten eat milk and sweetened cereal at bedtime and in addition once during the day. Protein is not specially fattening.
2. About 118 pounds. You will make a mistake if you try to get stouter.

PROBABLY NO DANGER.

Mrs. A. B. B. writes: "1. My baby is 4 months old and has had a cough ever since she was born. What is the cause? What can I do for it? She coughs four to five times a day.

"2. She weighs sixteen pounds now and weighed eight at birth. She wants to stand up. Will this injure her in any way?"

REPLY.

1. If she only coughs four or five times a day nothing need be done.
2. Do not encourage or permit her to stand.

REINSTATE LAPSED POLICIES BEFORE JULY 1.

Any ex-service man who has been discharged over eighteen months and has let his war risk insurance lapse, may reinstate the insurance any time before July 1.

The government does not ask for all the intervening premiums to be paid. The government realized that when some of the men were out of the army their insurance would be overlooked, having been taken care of automatically while the men were in the service. It also realized that many of the men would think they could not afford to keep this insurance at the time of their discharge. For these and many other reasons the special provision has been made whereby nearly all ex-service men may carry this valuable insurance. Those who have been discharged only three months may reinstate their insurance by paying two months' premiums with no statement as to present physical condition.

Others may reinstate their insurance within eighteen months after discharge or before July 1, whichever is the later date. Such reinstatement, however, must be accompanied by a statement that the applicant is in as good health as at the time of discharge or at the expiration of the grace period, whichever is the later date; two months' premium must be paid for the reinstatement.

The premiums may be on the amount which is to be reinstated if the insured wishes to reduce the amount of the policy. However, after insurance is reduced it can never be increased.

At the close of the war there were millions of records of ex-service men on file in the various departments of the war risk insurance bureau. This necessitated a great deal of system which caused so much delay in the handling of communications to the bureau. The insurance department at Washington is now in a position to give better service to the men and the ex-service man will not experience the delay in the future in dealing with the bureau of war risk insurance.

Fortunately, men in and near Chicago may if they wish, reinstate their insurance, reduce and convert it, as well as making all premium payments, at the local war risk insurance bureau, room 1307 Stock Exchange building, 30 North La Salle street.

The American Legion is helping men to reinstate their insurance and make any desired changes. Many of the posts have insurance offices which will be open every evening until July 1.

The insurance section of the central war department, 230 East Ohio street, Chicago, is also ready to help men with their insurance.

The Buck Privates society, 125 North Clark street, has also offered its services.

DO NOT WAIT TILL IT'S TOO LATE. NOW'S THE TIME TO REINSTATE.

MAY HAVE MEDICAL AID FROM GOVERNMENT.

Chicago, June 23.—[Friend of the Soldier.]—While in the government service during the war I was assigned as an instructor at the rifle range instructing in the use of revolver and pistol firing. During that time my hearing was impaired so that it has affected me since my discharge.

When I entered the army I was O. K. physically and at the time I received my discharge I could pass the discharge examination, but I find since that time, that gradually my hearing in one ear is beginning to be impaired.

Kindly let me know if there is some place that I could apply to for an examination of my ear drums and if I am entitled to any compensation. A. R. T.

As you are discharged, apply for your examination to the United States public health service, sixth floor, Leiter building, Chicago. If you need medical attention it will be given you at the expense of the government. Whether or not you will be paid compensation depends on the extent of your disability.

No attention will be given to anonymous letters. To insure a personal reply inclose a stamped, addressed envelope.

IF WE KNEW THESE RESTAURANTS—

Chicago, June 24.—[To the Friend of the People.]—I wish to submit a complaint and request that you kindly refer it to the proper city department to receive attention. The rear of the buildings on Ogden avenue beween St. Louis and Clifton Park avenues, in particular the yard and alley in the rear of the restaurant on the corner of St. Louis and Ogden, are in a filthy condition. No garbage receptacles are provided and refuse of all kinds is dumped and lays there, making an awful stench. Paper flies all over the block. E. P. R.

The alley complained of was thoroughly cleaned and was in fair condition when inspected recently.

The restaurant complained of was served with notice to provide proper receptacles for garbage and ashes and to discontinue throwing paper and rubbish in the alley.

2. We do not understand what you mean by saying her signature is on them.

STILL HAVE SMOKE NUISANCES.

Chicago, June 24.—[To the Friend of the People.]—There is a bakery occupying the premises at 1704 North Robey street. The chimney of this building is in very bad condition, part of it having blown or fallen down, so that the smoke is not carried away properly and is troublesome to the residents in the adjoining buildings. I own the building at 1706 North Robey street, and my tenants complain that most of the time they cannot open their doors or windows on account of the smoke pouring in. I would like to know the most effective way to compel the owner of that property to repair this chimney. C. W.

An investigation was made by an inspector from this department, as a result of which a notice was served to tenant to abate nuisance of smoke from chimney on bakery entering windows of adjoining buildings.

Chicago, June 24.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—I have reason to believe the building I live in has been sold. My rent is paid to July 1 and I expect the new owner will want my flat.

1. How much time am I entitled to in order to find a new place? I have no lease, but have lived there two years.
2. Can I compel the new owner to pay my moving expenses?
3. Must I pay rent for that part of the time after July 1 which I occupy the flat while looking for a new location?

J. F. J.

1. Thirty days' notice effective at the end of any month of the tenancy.
2. No.
3. Yes. You will have to pay for the entire month unless the landlord agrees to the contrary.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

NOT McADOO'S TUBES.

Chicago, June 19.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Under the heading, "Sick of Supermen," you make a statement that is not in accord with the facts in the case when you say that McAdoo built the Hudson tubes.

Mr. McAdoo had an appointment in New York some years ago with lawyers of some prominence and was delayed in keeping this appointment by ice in the Hudson river, which the ferry boats were unable to break up in order to make fast to the slip, except after some 30 or 45 minutes of repeated assaults. This peeved him very much, as it has also peeved others who have had the same experience, and he wondered whether there could not be a tunnel built under the river to do away with such annoying things.

He may or may not have known at the time that there had been three previous attempts made to do the same thing, the first one having been tried at about 1873. All were unsuccessful and resulted in loss of life of the workers.

He talked the matter over with certain New York interests, who were then considering the same thing, and it resulted in forming a company for the building of these tunnels, if there could be found a way to do so with any assurance that they would be successful.

Now the important thing in this letter to you is that the New York interests positively refused to have anything at all to do with the scheme unless they were able to get the firm of Jacobs & Davies, consulting engineers, to undertake the design and supervision of the entire project. Also the undertaking would have been a rank failure the same as the others had been if the shield process of tunneling had not been used, and improved, by these engineers in the prosecution of the work. Mr. McAdoo simply acted as a promoter of the enterprise, and, as is the way with most promoters, he had a good press agent who saw to it that he got all the credit for the entire job. The engineers were too busy doing the work to bother about press agents, and hence their part in it has only received a tardy recognition in New York, and out here in Chicago there are still, it seems, some who think that McAdoo dug the tunnels with his own hands.

It would be only simple justice to a group of earnest, tireless, and conscientious workers, without whose aid there is no real lasting and useful work done for the progress of humanity all over the world, if occasionally some credit were given them for these works, and not have it go, as in this case, to a press agented hot air merchant that does not deserve it.

R. C. KELLOGG.

THE JAY TREATY.

Chicago, June 21.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—While concurring with the criticism passed by "Republican" in today's issue on the policy of the Republican party at and since the convention, I beg to point out that he is in error in his reference to the Jay treaty and its significance. Mr. Depew contrasted Washington's appointment of Chief Justice Jay to negotiate a treaty with England (1794, not the peace treaty) with Wilson's failure to select a man of like caliber for Versailles. But "Republican" declares: "Mr. Depew is too familiar with American politics not to know that Jay was burned in effigy on his return from Great Britain and the treaty was ratified after a long and bitter contest by a bare one over the required majority, and that Washington, on account of that treaty, was openly accused of having been bought by British gold."

What are the facts? The treaty (excepting the West India clause) was ratified by the senate June 24, 1795, sixteen days after its presentation, by a vote of 20 to 10. After a bitter political discussion by the adherents of the Jefferson and Hamilton parties (Republican and Federalist, or, in present day verbiage, conservative or pro-English, and radical or pro-Jacobin) the house voted on the appropriation to carry the treaty into effect April 30, 1796, 51 to 48. It is true that Washington was "burned in effigy" and that he was accused of taking British gold," such being the shameless rancor of party politics of that day. But the verdict of history as well as the overwhelming sentiment of his contemporaries has vindicated the character of the great chief magistrate and it is singular that an American of today should so much as hint at the epithets of his traducers.

We should recall that the main issue in the discussion of the Jay treaty was neither the West India trade nor the navigation of the Mississippi, but the French revolution and the continental war, into which the partisans of republican France were attempting to drag the United States against the advice of Washington, who warned the young republic against "entangling alliances." Incidentally, it may be noted that the much abused Jay treaty gave the world its first international arbitration commissions, their tasks being (1) to define the boundary between the United States and Canada, and (2) to adjudicate the respective claims of Great Britain and the United States in respect to illegal captures and condemnation of vessels during the revolutionary war.

WAGES AND PRICES.

Chicago, June 20.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—It certainly makes a working man's blood boil to read such statements as appear in Sunday's TRIBUNE, June 8, written by Arthur M. Evans as to bricklayers and carpenters causing the advance in the cost of buildings. When he says the men's wages have doubled, he lies and he knows it. They have advanced from $6 to $10 per day, while the price of brick has risen from $8 to $18 per thousand and lumber has gone from $20 to $60 per thousand. He does not say a word about that, but lays all the blame on the working man. A bungalow that sells for $8,000 or $9,000, sold for $3,500 five years ago. The mason work on it at present, including bricklayers and laborers, does not cost over $3[illegible]. The carpenter work about the same. Now where does the difference come in? All other buildings are in the same proportion. I would like to have your expert explain it to me and thousands of other working men.

J. B. NIX, Bricklayer.

THE SLOW WAGE BOARD.

Chicago, June 21.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Have the railroad men been forgotten?

The Chicago press fought generously for us up until recently, but lately have not mentioned our case. The wage board seems to take its good natured time, and if I may use the old saying, "The cow starves while the grass is growing." Many of us have been forced to sell our Liberty bonds and find it hard to get credit on the strength of the back pay. Car fare alone has gone up [illegible] which will take an extra ½ cent per hour out of our wages; gas and all other necessities are going up accordingly. The railroad men will not be able to wait much longer, but will be forced to seek employment in other industries. It is being said that the shopmen are not doing the work they used to do, but how can you expect a dissatisfied worker to deliver the goods? Tools have gone up so we cannot afford to buy them and we must try to get along the best we can instead of renewing same.

Isn't it pretty near time for the board to give us relief? And the award must be forthcoming soon or the transportation system of our country will be at a standstill.

A SUFFERER.

TABLOID BOOK REVIEW by FANNY BUTCHER

Last week's best sellers in a leading Chicago bookstore were:

FICTION.

"This Side of Paradise" [Scribner's], by F. Scott Fitzgerald.
"Affinities" [Doran], by Mary Roberts Rinehart.
"Mary Marie" [Houghton Mifflin], by Eleanor H. Porter.
"The Power of a Lie" [Moffat Yard], by Johan Bojer.
"The Young Physician" [Dutton], by Francis Brett Young.
"The Portygee" [Appleton], by Joseph C. Lincoln.

NONFICTION.

"Now It Can Be Told" [Harper's], by Philip Gibbs.
"White Shadows in the South Seas" [Century], by Frederick O'Brien.
"Letters of Travel" [Doubleday Page], by Rudyard Kipling.

Last week's six best circulators at the public library were:

"This Side of Paradise," by F. Scott Fitzgerald.
"White Shadows in the South Seas," by Frederick O'Brien.
"Economic Consequences of the Peace," by John Maynard Keynes.
"The Great Desire," by Alexander Black.
"The Portygee," by Joseph C. Lincoln.
"The Man of the Forest," by Zane Grey.

JACINTO BENAVENTE has been awarded the Nobel prize for literature. The public announcement has not yet been made to the world, but everybody knows about it just the same. Señor Benavente is known to Americans only through two volumes of his plays, which were translated into English by John Garrett Underhill. Miss Nance O'Neill played "The Passion Flower" to devoted audiences in New York last winter. I was not one of the devotees. I thought it a rather horrible display of mock heroics and noisy wailings about a sex complex which was not in itself especially dramatic. But some of the critics liked it. "The Governor's Wife" was chosen for the spring production of the Harvard Dramatic club, and another of his plays—I don't remember which one—was produced at Amherst. "His Widow's Husband" was produced in New York some time ago by the Washington Square Players, and "Bonds of Interest" by the Theater Guild, and his "No Smoking," an extremely amusing farce, was done here at the Arts club. Señor Benavente is a great man in his home town of Madrid, a member of parliament, a noted actor, the director of a new national theater, director of the national conservatory of acting, the author of eighty plays, and a prominent figure in the motion picture industry in Spain—in other words, a national institution. And now an international one.

Yearly statistics are always interesting—so long as they appear only annually! The statistics about book publications for the Literary Digest for 1919 have just been completed. There were published altogether 8,594 books last year, the smallest number since 1906, and 643 less than the total number for 1918. Six classes of books show a gain over 1918—sociology and economics of 125, fiction 116, applied science, engineering, which were formerly called useful arts, 88; general literature, essays, 86, and medicine and hygiene two. Religion and theology records exactly the same number as in 1918. The principal losses were among books on military and naval science, 237. Poetry and drama lost 139. History, which in 1918 held first place, records a loss of 110. Biography had a loss of 82, agriculture 78, education 73, and juvenile books 69. Of the total number of books published, 10.54 per cent were fiction, 10 per cent economics and sociology, and 9.5 per cent history, 8 per cent religion and theology, 7 per cent science, 6 per cent poetry and drama, 6 per cent applied science, 5 per cent juveniles, 5 per cent agriculture, 4.5 per cent medicine and hygiene, 3 per cent each philosophy, biography, philology, and education, 2.5 per cent law, 2 per cent geography, 1 per cent each fine arts and domestic economy, and less than 1 per cent military and naval, games, music, and general books. Great Britain published during 1919 a total of 8,622, only twenty-eight more books than the United States. Of the 8,594 books published in the United States, 7,625 were new books, 969 were new editions, 7,179 were by American authors—giving the lie to those who say we will read nothing except the work of Englishmen—and 1,615 were by English or foreign authors; 2,853 were pamphlets.

Miss Harriet Monroe is, one hears, in Waco, Tex., being wreathed with an LL. B. degree by the University of Texas. On either side of her, also being decorated, are William Howard Taft and Amy Lowell. Only a cartoonist's pencil could do justice to the picture of Harriet Monroe, more fragile than a Sheraton chair, sitting between the two most overstuffed davenports in the United States.

There is to be no new Archibald Marshall this fall because Mr. Marshall has been overtaken by a severe, though not fatal, heart attack. His trip to America will probably not be postponed, however. He is to come in the fall, and unlike most of his countrymen, he will not lecture.

The authorized biography of Theodore Roosevelt, including his letters, edited by Joseph Bucklin Bishop, will be published in the fall by Charles Scribner's Sons. The letters, which have been appearing in Scribner's Magazine, show Roosevelt in his relations with grown men and women, the same fine, sympathetic, humor loving, fatherly person that his "Letters to His Children" proved (to those who needed the proving) him to be. The biography will probably be the most popular biography of the year, as William Roscoe Thayer's biography of the hero of American politics was last year.

E. P. Dutton & Co. have promised for publication soon a translation by Dr. Fournier d'Albe of Prof. Schrenk-Notzing's "The Phenomena of Materialisation." The professor has photographed the souls of the Dear Returned (no longer the Departed), and gives records of the molding of soul substance into the "shape of admirably molded hands and feet, of heads with thick hair upon solid skulls, of complete and sometimes beautiful faces." Complete figures also appeared and "presented every appearance of the living human being" (to quote Mrs. Reginald De Koven in "A Cloud of Witnesses," about the Professor who Schrenk at Notzing).

She was Mercedes de Acosta when she wrote "Moods" and her first novel, which is to appear in November. She is Mrs. Abram Poole now, and her little volume of prose-verse is being much discussed. She may be as beautiful as the dawn and the midnight combined, as one is lead to believe by adoring friends, but her "Moods" aren't.

Ethel M. Dell turns out best sellers the way a well oiled press turns out newspapers—printed, folded, in order, and ready for immediate consumption. Her latest is "The Tidal Wave," a volume of short stories written with her usual facility and dash.

Did you see what Andrew Soutar, a correspondent for the London Times, just back from Archangel, said of Maxim Gorky and the artistic movement in Bolshevik Russia? Maxim Gorky and his wife direct the entire movement. They are the artistic censors of Russia. Scarcely anything pertaining to the legitimate stage, to the opera, the ballet, concert halls, or motion pictures is put on without their sanction, he says. The theaters in Russia have never been so patronized as they are now, he insists. Everything artistic is flourishing, due partly to the minimized cost of production and the artists' salaries. The boom for Maxim Gorky for bolshevik ambassador to the United States is still resounding. There was a rumor at one time that he was seriously considered, but he refused to come. He is surely one of Russia's greatest literary if not political figures.

B. W. Huebsch, who now has an "Inc." after his publishing name, has decided to publish paper covered books on economic subjects, thus making volumes—and pamphlets—which are usually prohibitive in price and have a small circulation available to every one. He did it with "The Bullitt Mission to Russia," a pamphlet of international significance, and he is continuing with an exposure of the French-German coalition during the war concerning iron ore, called "Where Iron Is, There Is the Fatherland!" written by Clarence K. Streit, an American soldier and member of the peace commission; "Sir Auckland Geddes' Handiwork," by George W. Russell; "The Great Steel Strike," by William Z. Foster, and four distinguished books by E. D. Morel, "Truth and the War," "Africa and the Peace of Europe," "Ten Years of Secret Diplomacy," and "Red Rubber," a new and revised edition of the book which drew the attention of the world to the rubber slave trade in the Congo.

Albert J. Beveridge has received the Pulitzer prize for his "Life of John Marshall" as the best American biography teaching patriotic and unselfish service to the people. John J. Leary Jr. has received the same prize for "Talks with T. R." as the best example of reporter's work during the year; Eugene O'Neil has been awarded the prize for his "Beyond the Horizon" as the best drama of the year (and it is a marvelous one!), and John Drinkwater's "Abraham Lincoln" has been honored with the highest praise, but the author has not been given a prize, because he is a foreigner.

That mysterious looking photograph of the top of the cold cream jar which adorns the front flap of "The Cream of the Jest," a new edition of which has just made available again one of James Branch Cabell's most delightful books, is easily decipherable if one wants to take the time to figure it out. Translated from Cabellese, it is: "James Branch Cabell made this book so that he who wills may read the story of man's eternally unsatisfied hunger in search of beauty. Etarre stays inaccessible always, and her loveliness is his to look on only in his dreams. All men she must evade to the last, and many are the ways of her elusion." "Which is," writes Guy Holt, who is now under indictment for the publication of "Jurgen," and whose name will go down in literary history as the man who suffered unjustly for publishing the greatest American book ever suppressed—"which is," he says, "one of the interpretations of the book. If you substitute for beauty the notion of wisdom, happiness, nobility, or, in fact, all those ideal qualities and things which we commonly desire of life, you have, in three sentences, Cabell's creed, as expressed in 'Beyond Life,' in 'The Soul of Melicent,' in the 'Jest' itself, and—by showing the pursuit of fact, rather than the dream, and the devastating effects of realization—of 'Jurgen.'" Which summing-up, it seems to me, is the best and most explanatory word that has ever been said of Cabell.

POEMS YOU OUGHT TO KNOW

INTRA MUROS.

By Mary C. Gillington.

At last 'tis gone, the fever of the day—
Thank God, there comes an end to everything;
Under the night cloud's deepened shadowing,
The noises of the city drift away
Thro' sultry streets and alleys, and the gray
Fogs 'round the great cathedral rise and cling.
I long and long, but no desire will bring Against my face the keen wind salt with spray.

O, far away, green waves, your voices call;
Your cool lips kiss the wild and weedy shore;
And out upon the sea line sails are brown—
White sea birds, crying, hover—soft shades fall—
Deep waters dimple 'round the dripping oar,
And last rays light the little fishing town.

CHILD HEROINE OF PARIS WINS FORTIN PRIZE

Is "Little Mother" to a Family of Five.

[Chicago Tribune-New York Times Cable.]
[Copyright: 1920.]

PARIS, June 26.—In a little wooden shanty outside the old walls of Paris there lives a real heroine, 9 years old. This is her story:

In 1918 her mother, the wife of a stone breaker, died from the effects of an explosion of a "Big Bertha" shell near their home. She left her unfortunate husband with six children to bring up. The eldest was 8 years old, the youngest 7 months.

With so many little mouths to feed the man could not engage help, and there seemed no alternative but to send the children to a public orphanage. It was then that the heroic strain in the family showed itself. Having no dolls to play with, the eldest child—Louise Depuis is her name—took charge of the household.

Is Real "Little Mother."

Night and morning she washed, dressed, and cooked for her little brothers and sisters. Not only that, but she saw to it that all toddlers of the family went regularly to school, where she went herself and took prizes.

She is not yet 10 years old, but for nearly two years she has brought up in perfect health and comfort her family of five.

Her only anxiety has been to find a better house to live in, but houses, where there are children in the family, are difficult to find in Paris.

In it all she had no thought of reward, but reward has come. Some years ago Henri Fortin left money to found an annual prize for some act of heroism or devotion and by unanimous consent that prize has been this year awarded to Louise.

Is Fortune for Her.

At the Trocadero yesterday she received it—for her an immense fortune of 500 francs—at the hands of solemn members of the committee with tears and laughter. She seemed scarcely to understand what all the fuss was about, but this morning she washed and dressed her family and took them to school with a lighter heart, for she had been able to give all of them eggs for breakfast.

HERO'S WIDOW

Two checks aggregating $6,559.14—the gift of readers of THE TRIBUNE—were handed yesterday to Mrs. Anna Roberts of 7431 Ingleside avenue, wife of Patrolman William A. Roberts of the Hyde Park station, who was shot to death by Horace Le Roy Walton, the mail train bandit. One check of $5,559.14 represented the contributions of many readers who had read of the widow and her five children and wished to pay a small tribute to the courage of a policeman who had sacrificed his life in the line of duty.

The other was a personal check of Julius Rosenwald for $1,000, given through THE TRIBUNE fund.

"I wish I could thank every one of THE TRIBUNE readers who have been so kind to us," said Mrs. Roberts, "but that is impossible, so I'll just have to thank them through the newspaper. I want you to assure them that every penny of this will be well spent—that I will see to it that not one cent which has been given so that we might keep our household together is wasted.

"First there will be the funeral bills to pay. The rest shall be saved. I may invest part of it in this house which my husband started to purchase two weeks before he died.

"Just now the doctor says I must have a rest. After that I am going to plunge in and see what can be done to help the children along. I don't want to have to part with one of them."

MRS. WILLIAM A. ROBERTS.

GIRL SACRIFICE TO OTHERS GETS REWARD OF JOY

She's Going to Happiness Camp at Algonquin.

Pollyanna is going to Algonquin this summer. Pollyanna isn't her real name, but it might just as well be as far as the story of her tragic life is concerned.

Helen—or Pollyanna—is 13 years old, and has an invalid mother. Besides acting as nurse for the mother, she cares for her 4 year old brother, dresses and feeds him, cooks all the meals, and when she hasn't anything else to do goes to school. Sometimes she earns extra money for the household by running errands for neighbors.

Helen's father is dead. She has an older sister who works. The family lives in a third floor flat, rear, and Helen is satisfied if her charges get the best care she can give them.

She Forgets Herself.

When investigators talked to Helen she forgot all about herself. She spoke of how happy she would be if mother and sonny boy got a vacation and rest in the country. The world would be good, then. She didn't know that she is ten pounds underweight.

Personally, she is happy. But Helen is going to know real health and happiness. She is going to Algonquin, THE TRIBUNE'S free hospital and camp for sick and tired mothers and children.

You can help send Helen and her family and many other Pollyannas to Algonquin by sending in your contribution at once.

MIDWIFE SENTENCED TO PRISON 21 YEARS FOR WOMAN'S DEATH

Mrs. Anna H. Heissler, a midwife, living at 1648 Allport street, was found guilty of murder by illegal operation yesterday by a jury in Judge Theodore Brentano's court, and was sentenced to twenty-one years in the penitentiary.

MRS. ANNA H. HEISSLER.

Just before Mrs. Lena Benes died in the county hospital on May 31, 1919, of blood poisoning, she made a statement to Deputy Coroner Charles Herman to the effect an operation had been performed on her three days previously by Mrs. Heissler.

The midwife denied the charge, declaring she had treated Mrs. Benes for a severe cold in the lungs.

MOTHER ILL AS FATHER HUNTS FOR MISSING SON

W. M. Knott of 343 Plum street, Elgin, appealed to THE TRIBUNE yesterday to aid him in finding his son, Stanley Wilson Knott, 16 years old, who disappeared from home a week ago. The boy's mother is seriously ill as a result of her son's absence and continually calls for him. Mr. Knott believes the boy has come to Chicago.

STANLEY WILSON KNOTT.

Stanley is 5 feet 8 inches tall and has dark brown eyes and hair. He weighs about 160 pounds.

"Stanley is a good boy at heart, and I believe if he knows how ill his mother is he will come home for her sake," said Mr. Knott. "I'm sure if he sees my appeal in THE TRIBUNE he will come. If he doesn't see it, some one who knows his present whereabouts is bound to see it and either let us know where he is or tell him to come back."

Butcher Stabbed; 5 Held; Police Seek a Woman

Paul Ambrogi, a butcher, living at 616 Vedder street, was wounded in the abdomen and the right hand in a mysterious stabbing which occurred at 1018 Blue Island avenue, a two-flat building. His condition is serious. The police believe a woman was involved. His brother, Frank Ambrogi, and four other persons were held for questioning.

Seize Man as Slayer of Woman Twenty Years Ago

A man who describes himself as John Jackson of 3506 South State street was arrested yesterday, charged with the murder twenty years ago of Hattie Strogie at Rayville, La. John Timmons of Chicago met the man in a saloon and informed the police he was Daniel Wright, the murderer. Jackson denies the charge.

There is a group of enviable men who, through years of honest devotion to the highest ideals of our great industry, have acquired for the cars which they produce a profound respect which is shared by thousands of good people who discern in these cars something of the character and ideals of the men who make them.

This respect and appreciation for work honestly done goes far beyond all considerations of price or mechanical design, and acquires deeper significance when we witness the loyalty and pride of ownership which gives certain cars unquestioned leadership in the fields they occupy.

It is our earnest hope that the men of the Jordan organization will be guided for all time by the admirable example of these intelligent and sincere men.

PARIS' perplexity would have been most tragic had he been summoned to Oak Park yesterday with his apple. Being a discreet youth, all he could have done would have been to slice it twelve ways.

There are twelve girls. Even Science, which informs us we are merely aggregations of atoms, would have been confounded at the discriminating knack manifested by nature as an atom connoisseur. Each is a perfect type of American girl.

But the story: They have been chosen, after profound deliberation by nine judges as the fairest of the suburb's fair sex. The contest was held under the auspices of the Elks club. They will ride in the Oak Park float of The Hours in the Elks national parade here, July 7.

The fortunate judges are: H. W. Austin, Grace Wilbur Trout, Judge Jesse A. Baldwin, Dr. Thomas E. Roberts, William Rietz, exalted ruler of the Oak Park Elks; Robert Cantwell Jr., Mrs. E. Burton Hamilton, Miss Emma Wandeschneider, and Roselle Dean, correspondent of THE TRIBUNE.

The Oak Park Elks will entertain for the girls and the judges at a beauty party tomorrow night.

TWO NEW STRIKES CALLED ON CITY; MORE EXPECTED

Water Pipe Men and Roller Engineers Quit.

Strikes of 450 water pipe extension laborers and thirteen steam roller engineers yesterday brought the number of municipal walkouts up to four. The electrical workers and garbage handlers, who struck Thursday, are still out. Collection of garbage has ceased.

The number of city strikes is expected to grow before the council meets on Tuesday to take final action on pay schedules for the remainder of the year.

The laborers are receiving $5.60 a day. The finance committee is considering a boost to $6.80 a day. The strikers are asking $1 an hour—$8 a day—on the ground that they are building trade laborers.

Construction Men May Go Out.

About 350 city construction laborers are members of the same union and, according to Business Agent Anthony D'Andrea, Democratic committeeman from the Nineteenth ward, the construction men probably will go on strike in sympathy with the water pipe extension men in a day or two.

While the water pipe men are on strike, no new buildings will be connected with the city mains, and should main trouble develop there will be unavoidable delay in making repairs.

City Engineer P. S. Combs requested D'Andrea to supply small gangs for emergency work. The business agent said he will give his answer tomorrow.

Engineers Ask $10 a Day.

In the case of the steam roller engineers the city is asked to approve a rate not yet in effect. The strikers want a promise that they will be paid $10 a day after July 1. They are receiving $8.

They also ask that about $250 be paid each of them in the form of "back pay." To give them employment last winter when the weather permitted no street repair work the city paid them $5 a day as watchmen. The rate should have been $8 a day, they claim.

IRISH LEADERS END CIVIL WAR IN LONDONDERRY

Death List in Week's Fighting Eighteen.

BY JOHN STEELE.

[By Special Cable.]

LONDONDERRY, June 26.—Whatever the conciliation committee of citizens may do, Derry troubles have been settled by a direct conference between leaders of the Ulster volunteers and the Irish Republican volunteers, both of whom control the disciplined forces. Leaders of the Ulsterites give credit to Capt. Wilton, ex-officer of the British army, and Republican Ald. Canir Bradley, leader of the Sinn Fein party in the Derry corporation, for ending tht erouble.

I was talking to Bradley in the municipal office when Wilton walked in, saying:

"See here, Bradley, you and I are the only two sensible men in Derry. I am called away and can't attend the committee meeting. You know what I want. Carry on and make them see reason."

Bradley told me the trouble originated in the failure to discipline Ulster volunteers during the world war.

"When first organized," he said, "Ulster volunteers were controlled by good, responsible citizens who believed they were right and wanted order.

Bad Element Controls.

"Those leaders went to war and control fell into the hands of a bad element. It takes a shock like this to bring back responsible men to power, but now I hope they are coming back and we can deal with them. We know and respect each other. It is also, I fear, partly our fault. When we captured the corportaion at the municipal election I, as spokesman of the Sinn Feiners, advocated a policy of no irritation and respect in every way for the feelings of the minority. That seems to have been regarded by the hooligan orange element as a sign of weakness, and I think this outbreak was intended as a test.

"We tried to avoid a conflict until we were forced to defend ourselves. Had we wished we could have swamped Derry with disciplined men from country districts, but we deferred and still prefer conciliation.

"It is our settled policy to avoid anything like religious or sectarian strife. With this policy in view we have protected Protestants and their property in Catholic districts.

Ulsterites Are Blamed.

"Sniping was begun by Ulsterites who were out of control of their leaders, and our snipers have only been counter sniping against these men. I am sure all indescriminate shooting has been done by the other side, and I am sure their responsible leaders deplore it as much as I do."

Two bad cases stand out on each side. One case is that of Howard McKay, son of the governor of the Apprentice Boys' Orange drganization, who was held up on a bridge and shot in cold blood. It is alleged this murder was due to the prominence of McKay's father on the orange side and the fact that McKay was suspected of importing rifles for Orangemen.

The other case is that of Harold Austen, Englishman, who married a Derry girl, turned Catholic, and settled in Derry.

Austen Was Hated.

Austen was hated as "turncoat" and warned to leave Derry. He was going out to buy food on Thursday evening when he was shot in the street by a sniper from the Unionist quarter. The total official death roll in a week's fighting was eighteen, but it is alleged many deaths were concealed. Hospitals are congested. Rioters have amusing respect for each other. I talked this morning to a man shot through the arm while crossing Carlisle bridge, presumably by an Orange sniper. This man is a Catholic and he said admiringly: "He's a good shot."

It has been another quiet night, and Derry citizens hope it is all over except for occasional sniping, which will take some time to mop up.

Soldiers Search Citizens.

Military pickets are all over the streets. They search passers-by for arms before admitting them to the center of the city.

I was searched half a dozen times this morning. The young British soldiers are apologetic, and inclined to take the search as a joke.

There is no gas in Londonderry today, as the supply of coal at the gas works is exhausted. The gas works are in the Unionist quarter and workers are all Unionists, while the coal stores are in Sinn Fein quarters. This makes it impossible under present conditions to move coal.

The local papers were forced last night to set type by hand. One installed a dynamo to take the place of a gas engine. The electrical works are controlled by Unionists, and are working normally.

Railroad Strike Grows.

DUBLIN, June 26.—[By the Associated Press.]—The railway situation is gradually becoming worse. The railway men at a conference today unanimously resolved to continue their attitude of refusal to operate trains carrying troops, ammunition or police.

Southeastern line trains were held up on account of police and soldier passengers. In consequence of this other lines were blocked.

Bolsheviki Gold Found to Be Filled with Alloy

[By Special Cable.]

STOCKHOLM, June 26.—Exclusive official sources say the first shipment of bolshevik gold, estimated at 17,000,000 rubles, was alloyed. When assayed it was found to be below standard, but two carloads of material were sent to Berlin.

Mexico's Trouble Mint Now Turning Out Strikes

Mexico City, June 26.—The strike movement in various parts of the republic is growing, dispatches to the Mexico City newspapers say. Three spinning mills in Puebla City have been closed by a walkout for which no reason was given, according to Excelsior.

GREEKS ADVANCE

1—British battleships reach the Sea of Marmora.

2—Greeks advance on the Turks from four directions and capture several towns.

ALLIED CRUSHER STARTS TO WORK ON TURKS' ARMY

British Shells Kill 1,000; Land Campaign Is On.

BULLETIN.

LONDON, June 26.—(By the Associated Press.)—British warships at anchor before the town of Ismid, Asia Minor, have violently bombarded the Turkish line stretched around that place and have inflicted heavy losses, it being estimated that 1,000 Turks have been killed, according to a dispatch from Athens.

BY JOHN CLAYTON.

[By Special Cable.]

PARIS, June 26.—The first objective of the allied offensive against Turkey is to clear the portion west of the Constantinople-Bagdad railway and north of the Smyrna-Bagdad line of Turkish Nationalists.

According to reports from Greek headquarters, the advance of their troops has been following those two lines. The first was along the line of the Smyrna-Bagdad railway to the Afiun Karahissar junction with the Constantinople road. The second was northward along the Smyrna-Panderma railway to Balikesrl, thence east to Brusa, where they hope to effect a junction with the British, who are moving westward from Ismide.

This morning's communique indicated the capture of Soma late yesterday afternoon. Soma is more than half way between Smyrna and Balikesra.

May Put Turks in Crusher.

The column advancing east from Smyrna toward Afiun Karahissar consolidated its gains at Alachier and advanced several kilometers eastward from that city. If the Greeks succeed in taking Afiun Karahissar they will cut off Mustapha Kemal Pasha's forces opposed to the French. The only possible means of communication for the Turks, if in retreat, from their front near Adana is over the railway to Afiun Karahissar. It is estimated these Greek troops number 5,000 to 10,000.

The second stage of the offensive probably will be an attempt by the Greeks to push northward from Afiun Karahissar, the Greeks and British moving southward from Brusa to the Eski Shehr junction on the Constantinople-Bagdad railway, where that line meets its Angora branch. The British also will advance southward from Isund.

Angora is Kemal's base headquarters, though some say he is at Eski-Shehr now. The summer campaign probably will close at Eski-Shehr, because it is almost impossible to carry on operations eastward to Angora during the summer, owing to the heat, marshy ground, and the prevalence of malaria. If the Greeks, however, by that time have succeeded in obtaining their second objective they will have removed Kemal's threat against Constantinople and assure the present Turkish government a free hand in carrying out the terms of the peace treaty.

Want Italians to Help.

It is understood in Paris that the allied war chiefs are attempting to swing the Italians into line against small bodies of Kemal's troops along the rail line which parallels the Smyrna-Bagdad railroad line for a short distance south.

No matter how successful the first campaign may be, no decisive blow can be dealt to the Turkish nationalists until the allies have accomplished the results of the offensive against Angora and cleared Eastern Antolia of Nationalist troops.

British Warn Neutrals.

The British officially have notified neutrals to leave their zone of operations on the coast of the Sea of Marmora and have landed thousands of soldiers.

The British battleships Benbow, Emperor of India, and Lord Nelson, with destroyers, arrived in the Sea of Marmora today from the south to bombard Nationalist territory, while military precautions are taken to guard against possible attacks against the straits of the Dardanelles.

It is said Millerand has informed Premier Venizelos of Greece that Greek occupation of Smyrna depends on the ability of the Greeks to break up Kemal's forces and prevent the nucleus of his army from retiring intact into the interior.

KING OF GREECE LEAVES PARIS; CONSORT STAYS

[Chicago Tribune-New York Times Cable.]

PARIS, June 26.—King Alexander of Greece left Paris this morning for his capital, if not to lead his armies in Asia Minor to victory, at least to encourage them from Athens.

For one person his going was a war tragedy. For he has left his wife and uncrowned queen, Mlle. Manos, behind.

Until the new war is over their honeymoon must be interrupted. Then perhaps Alexander will come back to Paris or Mlle. will go to Greece. But for the present there are too many ill-speaking tongues in Athens for her to accompany her royal husband. Their farewells were said in private, and it was only his ministers and staff who bade the king farewell. The fair Cretan lady, who is still only half married, for the Archmandrite has not yet given his consent, will have to console herself in her magnificent new apartment which the king has given her.

BRITAIN READY TO GUARD ULSTER, FRENCH DECLARES

BELFAST, June 26 — Viscount French, lord lieutenant of Ireland, who is here for the unveiling of war and Titanic memorials, speaking at a luncheon today, said:

"It cannot be too clearly shown that the government never will under any circumstances listen to any proposal either for the establishment of an Irish republic or the coercion of Ulster.

"We desire above all things to give the country the utmost measure of political freedom, and hope sometimes against hope that a peaceable reconciliation will eventually be effected, but having said so much, I would be wanting in my duty if I did not repeat what I have said before, that we are determined the Irish people shall enjoy the same protection as the people of other parts of the kingdom, and the government will not hesitate to employ all the forces at its disposal to attain this."

Births 100,000 Greater than Deaths in Spain

MADRID, June 26.—There were 585,352 births in Spain last year and 482,030 deaths, according to vital statistics published by the Official Gazette. The births were about 28.25 per 1,000 population, while the deaths were about 23.26 per 1,000.

BEWARE LEST GERMANS STRIKE FROM AIR: FOCH

PARIS, June 26.—[By the Associated Press.]—Allied nations are masters of the situation in the near east, as elsewhere, and if in complete harmony can employ all the forces at their disposal to carry out policies "soberly proportioned to their interests," said Marshal Foch in an interview today.

Discussing German disarmament, he asserted this matter was not the destruction of 1,500 cannon, but the overcoming of the "hostile and militarist spirit of the German people."

"If such a spirit," he continued, "should again be translated into action, the arm it would use would be the most terrible and swiftest on earth—the airplane. The way to guard against renewed aggression is to increase the distance that separates us from the enemy. When we leave the Rhine, Germany is within snatching distance of Ostend, from which she could lay London waste in one night between dark and dawn.

"Until that evil spirit dies out, it is our duty to the next generation to see that our precautions are never abandoned."

Americans Plan Fourth Celebration in Sweden

[By Special Cable.]

STOCKHOLM, June 26.—Americans in Sweden are preparing the most realistic Fourth of July celebration in decades.

The Swedish Choral club of Chicago, with ninety members, which arrived last night, will give three concerts in the capital and suburbs and be entertained by Post Wheeler, charge d'affaires, in the home of Minister Morris of Chicago.

Invitations have been sent to hundreds of Sweden's leading citizens. Premier Branting is expected to address the club. Regret is being expressed at the absence of Minister Morris and family in Chicago, who are popular both with the natives and the American colony.

NATIONS' COURT FRAMERS RAISE GERMAN HOPES

Offer Wedge to Reopen Treaty Delegates.

BY HENRY WALES.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[By Special Cable.]

THE HAGUE, June 26.—Germany can demand revision of the Versailles treaty by the international court of justice, if the advisory committee recommendations are accepted by the league of nations, following two important decisions this morning.

First, the committee of jurists decided any power, whether a member of the league, has access to the court.

Second, the committee wants compulsory arbitration before the court regarding interpretation of treaties, international law, facts regarding the breaking of international agreements, damages due as results of broken agreements, interpretation of the awards of the international court.

Loophole for the Germans.

Thus, Germany, although not a member of the league, can hale the allied and associated powers before the international court to obtain an interpretation of the Versailles treaty, based on the question of international law, and can contest the reparations under damages due, as the result of the breaking of arbitration treaties.

Practically all jurists hold convictions certain clauses of the Versailles pact are juridically unsound, especially those interfering with the enemy state's internal affairs, like the prohibition against Germany and Austria uniting and barring the Hohenzollerns and Hapsburgs from ruling.

It is believed the interpretation of the treaty by the international court of justice would reveal many terms as fit subjects for revision.

The jurists are unable to agree on compulsory action as to all nations, as the big powers are objecting strenuously, insisting on their liberty of action, sovereignty, etc.

The committee dealing with the creation of the court adjourned until Tuesday afternoon.

Test for Court's Strength.

The crux of the strength of the international court of justice will be decided soon when the jurists determine whether one nation can hale another before the court or whether both disputants must appear voluntarily.

The highest authority assures me that Root still is fighting for a provision that the aggrieved state may place its case before the court regardless of the attitude of the state against which the complaint is lodged. If the defendant state refuses to appear the case could be tried according to the plaintiff's evidence and be decided by default if accused power refuses to make a defense.

Powerless to Avert War.

That a court of justice always is incapable of preventing war among the big powers freely is admitted even by the jurists organizing the court.

"If the court reduces or prevents wars between the little powers, it accomplishes much, because little wars lead to great wars," my informant said. "The great powers always dominate the little ones through commodities, raw materials, and finance. It is so easy to apply an embargo to force small states to accede to the international court decisions."

Customs Aid Whose Chief Is Eager to Save Him from Retirement Act.

[TRIBUNE Photo.]

William H. Milstead, 80 year old civil war veteran employed in the customs department at the federal building, will not have to worry about the civil service retirement act, which automatically discharges all government employés when they reach the age of 70.

"Although he is ten years over the age limit, he is able to do his work efficiently," William H. Clare, collector of customs, declared yesterday. "and I have sent a recommendation to Washington asking for his reappointment. I do not believe the retirement act was passed to eliminate men physically fit to do their work."

Mr. Milstead, who lives at 1309 Milwaukee avenue, has been in the government service the greater part of his life.

Makes Gift to American Hospital at Neuilly

PARIS, June 26.—George Edward Kessler of St. Louis has given 250,000 francs to the American hospital at Neuilly, it was announced today.

Louis D. Beaumont of the Aero Club of America yesterday gave Hugh C. Wallace, the American ambassador, 100,000 francs for the hospital.

The hospital to date has received 2,750,000 francs toward the 7,000,000 francs fund being collected for the purpose of enlarging the institution.

FOCH ACCUSES CLEMENCEAU OF TREASON, REPORT

BY JOHN CLAYTON.
[By Special Cable.]

PARIS, June 26.—The name of Marshal Foch has been hurled into the fight between Clemenceau and his political enemies in the first public demand made for trial of the "Tiger." Le Rappel, in an editorial by the owner, Eduard du Mesnil, headed "Roll Call Accused," calls for the appearance of the former premier before the high court of justice having jurisdiction over treason cases, and names Marshal Foch as the man making the demand.

Yesterday Le Matin demanded the publication by the foreign office of documents proving whether the agreement between France and England calls for France to receive 55 per cent of the total indemnities from Germany and England 25 per cent, or whether the agreement is one based on proportion.

Agreement Based on Proportion.

This morning's L'Echo de Paris publishes a statement attributed to the foreign office stating that the original agreement is based on proportion and not percentage, the original figures being 5 to 11. It states that translations of these figures last December in London by Loucher to 25 and 55 merely was a restatement of the first agreement, and did not mean necessarily that France would receive 55 per cent of the total.

Declare Tiger a Traitor.

Clemenceau's opponents declare that whether or not Millerand succeeds in obtaining an agreement on a basis of 55 per cent for France at the Spa conference, Clemenceau is guilty of treason for entering into a proportional agreement without informing or consulting his people.

Clemenceau's friends declare the reopening of the question through the public press merely strengthens the hands of Belgium, Italy, and Serbia.

REDS CUT OFF HANDS AND FEET OF PRISONERS

Washington, D. C., June 26.—Bolsheviki at Ivanopka in southern Russia shot a group of thirty officers on June 10 and tortured other prisoners, according to a report to the American commissioner at Constantinople, which was received today at the state department.

The report stated that the prisoners were horribly treated. One witness, Lieutenant Commander Koehler, said he saw the hands and feet of some of the captured officers cut off, and the officers' eyes gouged out.

The population in the region of southern Russia occupied by Gen. Wrangel's anti-bolshevik forces, continues very friendly, owing to the good behavior of the troops, reports to the department said.

A new law has been promulgated in that section by Gen. Wrangel, providing for the distribution of all the government land large estates among the peasants.

CONFIRM REPORT MRS. NILSON IS HELD BY BANDITS

Boston, Mass. June 26.—Confirmation of the reported kidnaping of Mrs. Harriet F. Nilson by brigands at Tarsus, Cilicia, was received by the American board of commissioners for foreign missions today in a cable from its Constantinople office.

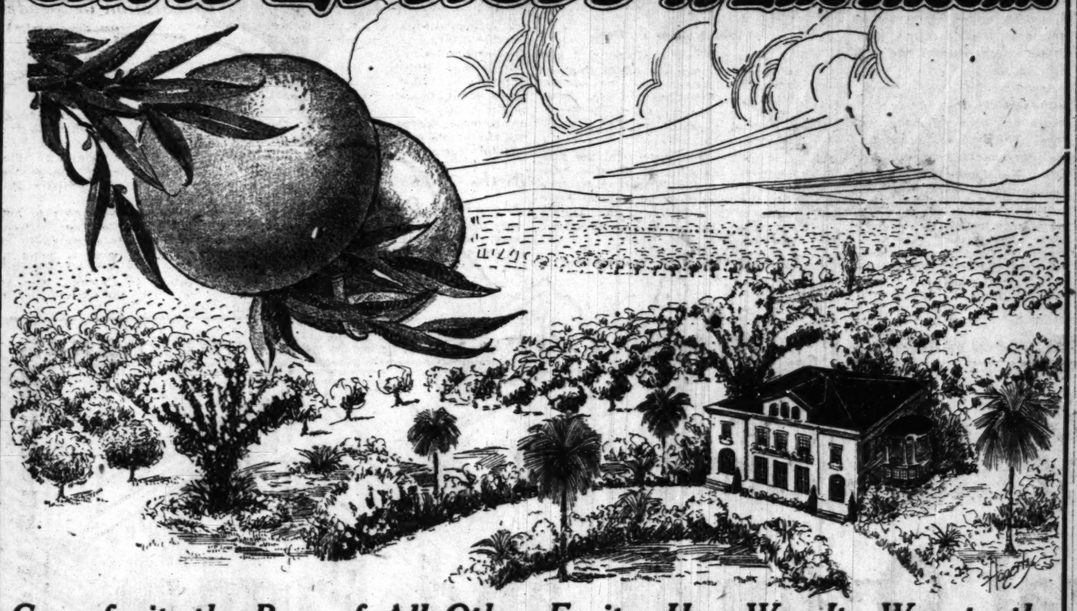
Mrs. Nilson is the wife of a missionary, the Rev. Paul E. Nilson, and taught a mission school in Adana, Turkey, for several years before her marriage. She is a native of Illinois and as Harriet Fischer was graduated at Wheaton college in 1912.

The cablegram said: "Mrs. Paul Nilson, Tarsus, taken captive and carried off by brigands. Friends working locally for release."

Dr. James L. Barton, secretary of the Board, wired the state department he was confident Mrs. Nilson could be rescued by prompt and vigorous action.

"The American board urges holding both parties responsible for protection and safe return," said Dr. Barton.

GRAPEFRUIT Can Give You A Life Income



Grapefruit, the Peer of All Other Fruits, Has Won Its Way to the Breakfast Table of Ten Million American Families in the Short Space of Ten Years. This Is the Story of How it Can Bring You a Comfortable Income For Life

GRAPEFRUIT CAN BE SUCCESSFULLY GROWN IN ONLY ONE SMALL PORTION OF THE UNITED STATES.

Millions of American families begin their day with grapefruit, a product that can only be successfully grown in one state in the Union, and even in that state in only very few sections. It is a semi-tropical fruit, prolific when properly planted and cared for, and capable of being cultivated to produce enormous profits for its growers. Near the beautiful, clean, and healthful city of Bradentown, Florida, on the Manatee River, and in the very heart of the greatest grapefruit district in the world, THE JAMES L. WATERBURY COMPANY (of Chicago) has purchased and is developing THE LARGEST GRAPEFRUIT GROVE IN THE WORLD, consisting of 10,000 acres. In the center of this tract a modern and beautiful city is being built by the people who purchase investments in this great project.

THE ANNUAL NET INCOME FROM SUCCESSFUL COMMERCIAL GRAPEFRUIT GROVES GREATER THAN FROM ANY OTHER AGRICULTURAL OR HORTICULTURAL LAND

When grapefruit groves are planted for commercial purposes and properly cared for, and the product intelligently handled and marketed, the annual net income is probably greater than that from any other agricultural or horticultural lands. The crop is a CASH crop, which cannot be overproduced. The demand is growing more rapidly than the supply. Good commercial grapefruit groves in Florida are worth thousands of dollars per acre; and during the past season most commercial groves produced a net profit for their owners of from $500 to $1,000 per acre.

GRAPEFRUIT LAND WITH HIGH EARNING POWER THE BASIS OF THE WATERBURY INVESTMENT

The basis of the James L. Waterbury Company is grapefruit land situated in Manatee County, Florida, which is one of the choicest grapefruit sections in that state and in America. This land has a high earning power brought about because of the crop it yields, which sells at a high price and cannot be overproduced. Substantial earnings are insured to all investors in this project because a big organization, operating under low costs and able to get high prices for the product, is back of the land and its operation. THE JAMES L. WATERBURY COMPANY is a big volume organization, operated on the same principles as the big volume manufacturing or merchandising concern. It is operating this project as a 10,000 acre project divided into units of ten acres each for financing and merchandising reasons.

HOW THIS ORGANIZATION SAVES THE INVESTOR $3,000.

When we examined the elements of this investment and studied the grapefruit growing problem, our figures showed us that an individual owner would spend a very large sum in clearing the land, planting it, and bringing his trees to bearing. Our figures showed us, however, that an organization, operating on the big volume plan on a different basis of costs and on a different volume production, could save the investor in such a project hundreds of dollars an acre over what it would cost him if he did it as an individual. We, therefore, worked out a plan by which the cost of planting, caring for the land during the tender years of the orchard, pruning the trees, giving expert management and care to each individual ten acres, could be spread out over a large operation covering 10,000 acres, and by reducing costs could bring such a tract of land in full bearing as a producing property to its owner at a figure far below that on which the individual could accomplish such an operation. We can give you a full bearing grove for at least $3,000 less than it would cost YOU at the present scale of labor and material.

WE DO ALL THE WORK FOR YOU

This, therefore, is an investment that will bring to you big returns without your going to Florida and watching your property, and we will market the crop for you, without any effort on your part, to better advantage than you could market it. You can stay at your work and the grove will be selected, planted, and brought to bearing. We reap your harvest for you, market it, and remit you the proceeds; we care for your property at a much lower figure than it would cost you individually; we give you the absolute protection offered by a big, responsible institution, while your land is maturing, and guarantee you better results from the point of view of net returns than you could possibly get if you handled the grove personally.

OVER SIX HUNDRED PEOPLE HAVE ALREADY BOUGHT

We have already sold over 6,000 acres to over 600 people, among whom are substantial bankers, business men, manufacturers, merchants and retired investors. We are now offering about 380 ten acre tracts to the people of Chicago and believe we have in this investment the most extraordinary opportunity for big future yields in income that has been advertised in years.

YOU CAN GET THIS INCOME PRODUCING INVESTMENT ON SENSIBLE AND EASY TERMS

We sell you a ten acre unit in this 10,000 acre project on a common sense plan. You buy from us the land, paying us a reasonable price per acre, and get a warranty deed for the property. At the same time you pay us the expense of clearing and planting this land to 780 grapefruit trees, which should come into bearing in four or five years after planting. Our charges for the work of clearing and planting are based on actual cost of doing the work and supplying the material, plus 10% for us. Each year, thereafter you pay to us the actual cost of care and maintenance until your grove comes into bearing. To this cost we add 10% for the overhead. These tracts are sold principally to investors—the kind of investors who need not depend upon them during the next few years for income. Fine homesites are provided in the townsite, which is located in the center of the property, and lots in this townsite are sold at a very reasonable figure. Here there will be built this year a comfortable Club House surrounded by beautiful grounds, and many of our tract owners have already indicated their intention of building winter homes in this beautiful spot. The town of Waterbury is but a few miles from the Manatee River and from the Bay. A short automobile ride will take you to the Gulf of Mexico—to the various beaches on the Gulf and on Sarasota Bay—to the towns of Bradentown and Sarasota—thus giving to the motorist and the tourist as fine an opportunity as is afforded in America for touring, bathing and other healthful recreation.

THE RESERVATIONS FOR OUR 2,000 ACRE PLANTING NEXT SEASON NOW BEING MADE

The cost of ten acres of land, plus the clearing and planting of it, require a reasonably substantial initial investment. Only 2,000 acres can be planted in the next season, and those who want quick returns should make their reservations NOW, so that they will have their land planted at the earliest date. Any thrifty person who can properly carry this investment—who can have a full planting of his property next season—will welcome our bringing this great opportunity to his attention. The project guarantees itself and needs no guarantee from us. The hundreds of people who have already bought are boosters, enthusiastic about their investment, and believe in the James L. Waterbury Company and in the work that it is doing. Under our plan, this investment has been placed within the reach of many thousands of American investors, and is in effect an insurance policy against old age or loss of personal earning power. Those who are financially able to purchase one of these tracts and have it developed will have a substantial income for life, and one of the most charming spots in the world as a place to live.

WE CAN BUILD YOU A COMFORTABLE INCOME FOR YOUR LATER YEARS

The average man finds it hard to save up more than a few thousand dollars in his lifetime; and this, invested in ordinary securities at 6% or 7%, will hardly bring him in enough to pay even a low rent on a home or an apartment. We are giving such a man an opportunity to make a yearly income as great as would be the income on many thousands of dollars invested in average well rated securities. No better or more feasible plan of participating profits has, in our opinion, been worked out for the man of average income, and we invite an examination and a thorough discussion of it by all investors.

GET OUR BEAUTIFUL FIFTY-SIX PAGE BOOKLET

We have prepared a 56 page booklet on this investment which we will distribute to those who are interested in the Waterbury project. As we do not wish to sell this investment to the man who cannot carry it, we urge only those who are financially able to consider this investment to send for the booklet.

We want you to know how you can gain for yourself an active participation in the profits that big volume organization in the past has rolled up only for the chosen few.

ALL ROADS LEAD TO RAVINIA AT OPERA OPENING

Scotti in Fine Voice on Gala Night.

From all directions pilgrims drawn by steam, electricity, and gasoline journeyed toward Ravinia last night, and by the time they had stopped assembling at least 6,000 were focused about the pavilion in the center of the park. The occasion was the opening of the 1920 summer opera season. For days every reserved seat in the inclosure had been sold out, but that fact in no wise deterred the operatic celebrants, and they grouped about the outside in lines six, eight, and ten deep.

Scotti in Great Form.

The opening of Ravinia is always something of an occasion for the north shore. It was a little more so this time, because Antonio Scotti, the veteran singing actor of the Metropolitan Opera company of New York, was there to lead off the season with his pictorial and malign impersonation of Scarpia in Puccini's "Tosca." Scotti and the Ravinia public established a mutual friendship last summer, and the welcome that he received on his return put him into high spirits and the best of dramatic form for this performance.

There were other old friends in the cast. Miss Florence Easton, with a record of high accomplishments at the Metropolitan last winter and the promise of more during the season that is to come, sang the name part with unusual effect, while Morgan Kingston as Mario contributed a dependable exhibition of his fervid vocalism.

Mr. Pappi performed the feat of conducting the entire opera from memory. The audience last evening would not be satisfied with less than seven encores after the first act, and the applause throughout was spontaneous and enthusiastic.

"Manon" Tonight.

Tonight's opera, President Eckstein promises to be no less of a gala occasion, both in atendance and performance. The opera will be Massenet's "Manon." Edith Mason, journeying from Paris to sing at Ravinia this summer, will appear as Manon. Charles Hackett, who comes as the Metropolitan's great find as a lyric tenor, ranking with Caruso, will make his first appearance in these regions as the younger Des Grieux; and Leon Rothier will reappear in the rôle of the elder Des Grieux. Richard Hageman of the Metropolitan will conduct.

Mrs. Hill, the pastor's wife, served as the national president of the women's general missionary convention of the United Presbyterian church recently held at Youngstown, O.

The Rev. Mr. Hill will also preach this evening in his new pastorate.

GIRL AND ESCORT HOLD UP VICTIMS AT DOOR OF HOME

Miss Hazel Juergens had recovered sufficiently from her experience with bandits who robbed her of jewels valued at $1,475 to return to her home in Oak Park last night.

She had been staying with her friend, Mrs. Ethel Forrester, at 2112 Seminary avenue. Escorted by George Anderson of the Plaza hotel, she attended a theater in the evening. The jewels were owned by Mrs. Forrester, who insisted that Miss Juergens wear them for safe keeping.

"We had just entered the vestibule," said Miss Juergens, "when two men came in and inquired if a family named O'Neill lived there. Before I could answer they drew revolvers and ordered us to hold up our hands.

"One of them snatched my mesh bag and stripped the rings from my fingers. It hurt terribly when he pulled the tight one off. Mr. Anderson pleaded that they leave me and rob him. He was struck a blow on the head with the handle of the revolver. They went through his clothes as he lay on the floor."

One of the rings, a keepsake, was valued at $1,000. Another was valued at $300. A gold mesh bag containing $25 and a diamond valued at $150 were taken by the bandits.

INCOME TAX MAN BARES 'DODGING' TRICKS OF ALIENS

That present day Germany is not so attractive as homesick Teutons pictured it in their dreams while held in the United States by war restrictions is evidenced by letters received daily by Jacob Popper, alien income tax exemption expert, from Germans who returned to the old country.

"I receive letters daily appealing for aid," said Mr. Popper. "Most of them paid an income tax on this year's wages before their clearance papers were issued, and they invariably mention it in their letters."

One letter reads as follows:

"On the 13th of March I paid the United States government an income tax of $89 and left for Germany. Now that I am here, I do not like it at all, and should like very much to return to America and become a good citizen.

"I lived seven years in America, five of which I spent in Chicago. I regret now that I returned to Germany. Conditions are not what I thought they would be like. If you have expenses in helping me I will repay as soon as I am able."

1,000 Aliens Leave Weekly.

Since the armistice thousands of aliens have left for their homes in the old country. At the present time more than a thousand apply each week at Mr. Popper's office for tax clearance papers.

Aliens applying for passports are required to present tax receipts proving they have paid all income taxes due the government since the law went into effect. A tax of 8 per cent is also exacted on every dollar earned during the current year.

Rigid questionnaires have been prepared to guard against willful tax evasions. Each applicant must show letters from former employers for the last four years indicating the yearly income received. Tax receipts for years when an income tax was paid are also required.

50 Per Cent Try to Dodge Tax.

"Fifty per cent of the aliens attempt to evade tax payments," Mr. Popper said, "and at least thirty out of every hundred are delinquent in paying taxes. During the last twelve months I have collected approximately $500,000 in delinquent taxes and penalties.

"Thousands plead ignorance. In those cases we simply add up the income for each year, figure the correct tax, and attach a penalty of 5. To this is added an 8 per cent tax on the income received in 1920. This paid, a clearance certificate is issued which enables the alien to obtain a passport.

"Every effort is made to defraud the government, however, in spite of our precautions. There isn't a regulation that some one hasn't figured out a way to beat. For instance, there is the rule allowing $200 exemption for every child in a family and every applicant knows it. I rarely find an alien who hasn't just the right number of children to insure escaping the income tax.

"Another popular dodge is to profess ignorance of the English language. They don't get away with that, though. Miss Rose Reiter, my assistant, can speak from ten to fifteen languages and every clerk employed is a linguist.

MRS. TURPIN TO BARE SKELETON, SHE THREATENS

The ramparts still hold at the Protestant Children's home, 6323 Yale avenue. Mrs. Jennie Turpin, who says she was, is and will be president, with her staff, is in charge. Speaking of the attack on Friday night, she said:

"It is an old skeleton that will have to be brought out in court Monday. I am not an intruder here. Twice elected to the presidency of the home I felt at liberty to come here last Wednesday and take possession. Mrs. Elsie Brough was matron. She left the home every night, having a room outside. The children were ill. Several who were quarantined were left to sleep without an adult within hearing distance of their cries in the night.

"Women connected with the Eastern Star afforded me a trained nurse, who assists in caring for the children. Had Mrs. Brough entered here in a peaceful manner, attended to those children assigned her by the court, all would have been well. But she entered in war armor."

POLITE THIEF HELPS SCIENCE, ALSO HIMSELF

When Dr. W. C. Gravitt of Dayton, O., an osteopath, now at the Hotel Sherman, pulled down the curtains and tossed his watch in the hammock of lower six at Dayton last Thursday night, he was the proud possessor of a smile, two suitcases, some important reports on the latest discoveries in osteopathy, and a lot of brand new clothes.

During the night a man who had gone to bed in upper 8 pulled Dr. Gravitt's two suitcases from beneath the berth, and dropped off the train with them at Logansport.

Yesterday a special delivery letter came to the secretary of the American Osteopathic convention, who is none other than Dr. Gravitt.

When the check was presented at the baggage room in the Union station Dr. Gravitt received a pasteboard box.

It contained all of his stolen reports. The thief believes in science, but he also believes in clothes.

UPHOLDS EDICT GIVING CHILDREN PART OF $500,000

Judge Thomas Windes of the Circuit court yesterday sustained a decision of Probate Judge Henry Horner to the effect the three grandchildren of Robert Simpson, former meat dealer of Evanston, should have a share in his $500,000 estate.

The children, Robert J., Charles George, and Genevieve Simpson, all under 9 years of age, were represented by Attorney Lester J. Bauer.

Judge Horner, while ruling the children should share in the estate, had delayed admitting the will to probate. Judge Windes will pass on that question within a month.

The grandchildren alleged that the son and four daughters of Simpson had the will barred from probation on false testimony. The son and daughters had asserted on the witness stand that their father was of unsound mind when he made the will.

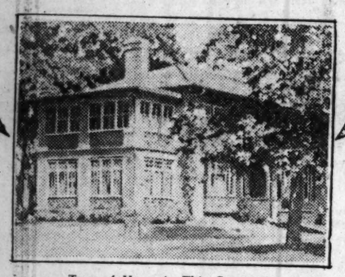
$9000 North Side Homes



Type of Home in This Community

Our announcement in last Sunday's Tribune, directed especially to people who can afford and are interested in building a North Side home to cost from $9,000 to $12,000, attracted many buyers to our property in Rogers Park.

There are in Chicago thousands of persons living in apartments and rented homes who can afford such a home and who would like to reside in a good, clean, attractive residence section.

Renters Build a New Home for Their Landlord Every Ten Years

You can buy a beautiful lot on a shady street and build your own home with your rent money. $50 per month paid for rent at 6% in ten years amounts to $7,903.40, in fifteen years to $13,965.46, and in twenty years to $22,071.10.

Stop Being a Rent Slave— Be Your Own Landlord

ASHWOOD is in the only unbuilt zone on the North Side with transportation—surface and steam. It is near schools and churches and is properly restricted as to kind and character of buildings. Already nearby vacant property is selling at $100 a foot.

Most of these Lots have been sold to well-to-do, thrifty people, after they have looked elsewhere, who intend to build $9,000 to $15,000 homes. These people were not sold by the strong arm method or by "great advance over night" talk. They bought because they planned their future homes to fit their incomes in a North Side community where they "feel at home" and where they know the property will increase in value because of the class of homes built. It is to the class of thrifty, progressive, get-ahead-in-the-world people that this advertisement is directed.

Secure one of the few really attractive building lots on the North Side, a mile and a half from the lake, and then build your own home. Prices are exceedingly low.

LARGE LOTS, 33 FEET WIDE, AT $35 AND $40 PER FOOT, SOLD ON EASY PAYMENTS.

BRITISH GAIN CONTROL OF ALL OIL IN PERSIA

Government Backs Huge Enterprise.

Washington, D. C., June 26.—[Special.]—While Americans desiring to develop oil fields abroad find themselves under a handicap, Great Britain is rapidly strengthening its hold on the future oil supply of the world. Information has just been received through official channels in Washington of new activities contemplated by the British in Persia, where the Anglo-Persian Oil company already holds an exclusive concession for the whole of Persia, except five northern provinces, for a period of sixty years, dating from 1901.

The new move by the British in developing the Persian oil resources consists in the formation of another oil company known as the North Persia Oil, Ltd., to develop the resources of the other five provinces. This new company will have a capital of £3,000,000. It is stated that the new company has been formed in conjunction with the Anglo-Persian Oil company. The Anglo-Persian Oil company, it is learned, has been in negotiation with the Persian government for additional concessions and the new company has been organized to develop these.

Future Supply for Navy.

The Persian situation is typical of activities of the British in providing for the future with respect to a supply of fuel oil for its navy and merchant marine. Under the terms of the concession by the Anglo-Persian Oil company, citizens or the United States are excluded from petroleum development in Persia. The concession heretofore held by that company, covering about 500,000 square miles, has been greatly strengthened by the agreement between the British and Persian governments, signed Aug. 9, 1919, by which the Persian civil, military, and financial administrations were placed under British supervision and direction.

According to official reports on the world oil situation to the state department, the British government has a controlling interest in the Anglo-Persian Oil company. The government also has assisted in the development of oil fields in other countries by bearing one-half of the expense and conducting experts.

Seeks Australian Concession.

The Anglo-Persian Oil company is not confining its activities to Persia, but is negotiating for a concession in Australia. A bill now under consideration by the parliament of Australia provides that the commonwealth of Australia and the Anglo-Persian Oil company shall become partners in the oil industry in Australia and the Papuan islands.

In line with its policy to strengthen its control over the future oil supply the British government seems to exclude aliens from the control of the petroleum supplies of the empire and to endeavor to secure some measure of control over oil properties in foreign countries. This policy, according to reports to the state department, appears to be developing along the following lines, which are directly or indirectly restrictive on the citizens of the United States:

1. By debarring foreigners and foreign nationals from owning or operating oil producing properties in the British Isles, colonies, and protectorates.

Control of Companies.

2. By direct participation in ownership and control of petroleum companies.

3. By arrangements to prevent British oil companies from selling their properties to foreign owned or controlled companies.

4. By orders in council that prohibit the transfer of shares in British oil companies to other than British subjects or nationals.

Prospecting for petroleum is lawful in the United Kingdom only by the board of trade or the minister of munitions or persons authorized by them. Similar regulations apply to working a petroleum property. The only drilling now going on in the United Kingdom for petroleum is being done by S. Pearson & Son Ltd., as petroleum development managers for the government.

It is unlawful for British citizens, without the consent of the board of trade, to transfer to an alien or to a foreign controlled company any interest in a company controlling an oil field in the United Kingdom.

America's Supply Low.

Significance of the British domination of the future oil supply of the world is indicated by the fact that while about 65 per cent of the petroleum now produced in the world is drawn from the United States, yet government experts say that the total underground reserve in this country will be exhausted in twenty years at the present rate of consumption. The greater part of the outside sources of supply are under the control of Great Britain.

While Great Britain is able to produce oil in the United States on equal terms with American citizens, the reverse is true when Americans attempt to invade British territory. American oil companies are expressly excluded from doing business in Burma by proclamations signed by Queen Victoria and Lord Salisbury, secretary of state for India, in 1884, and a blanket concession of ninety-nine years was given the Burma Oil company, Ltd., protecting this company from all foreign competition.

Officials of the navy and shipping board are greatly concerned over the future supply of oil for the American navy and merchant marine.

FOLD OPENED TO RAIL DESERTERS AS PERIL FADES

Union Chiefs Wired Strike Danger Is Over.

W. G. Lee, president of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, yesterday began work in an effort to bring back into the brotherhood ranks the 15,000 workers expelled for taking part in unauthorized strikes during the last year.

"With the promise of a wage scale decision berore July 20, retroactive to May 1, there is no reason for further dissension in our ranks," said Lee. "Already we have taken back 15,000 of the 30,000 men who were expelled and we will take back others who make proper amends."

Strike Peril Passed.

Lee remained in Chicago while other heads of the Big Four brotherhoods returned to their homes. He was in wire communication with leaders of his organization all over the country and declared that efforts to take out trainmen and yardmen on strike at midnight would prove futile as a result of the promise of an early wage decision by the federal railroad board.

May Be Some Trouble.

It was predicted, however, that in smaller centers, where preparations for a walkout at midnight had been completed by the more discontented factions of the railroaders some days ago, sporadic "vacations" would occur, but would be of short duration.

The general tone of the comment from both brotherhood and railway officialdom was that "strike talk" had been suppressed for many months.

New Demands Foreseen.

Should the wage award as offered by the railway board not prove satisfactory, it was hinted trouble might ensue. The more conservative of the officials, however, declared that a new schedule of demands would probably be promptly filed before the board for adjustment, that process to be repeated until the men were receiving, in their own opinion, a proper remuneration.

The statement issued in behalf of the brotherhoods by W. G. Lee, president of the trainmen's organization, appealing to the men to stay on the job until after the board's award, now that a definite date, July 20, has been set, met with favorable response all through the country, according to press dispatches.

At Philadelphia a number of shopmen affiliated with the American Federation of Labor and not connected with the brotherhoods walked out, it is understood, but officials believe they will return shortly.

Tamed in Chicago.

In Chicago the spirit of the malcontents who quit work some two months ago has tamed considerably. They are now willing to return to work under the labor board agreement, providing their seniority rights are restored. This problem, the brotherhood chiefs announced, will be taken up at a grand council of the brotherhoods, to be held here on July 19.

Although hearings on the wage demands before the labor board ended June 2, another angle of controversy between the managements and brotherhoods already has arisen, officials declared yesterday.

This is a fight for control over the middle class of railroad workers, the subordinate officials who are between the executives and the organized employes and who are responsible mainly for the management of the roads.

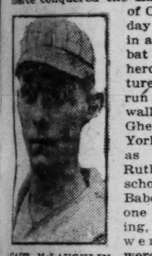
BY JAMES CRUSINBERRY.

New York City's High School of Commerce conquered the Lane Tech boys of Chicago yesterday at Cubs park in a baseball combat of thrills and heroic acts featured by a home run over the right wall by Louis Gherig, the New York lad known as the "Babe Ruth" of the high schools. The real Babe never poled one more thrilling, for the bases were filled, two were out, and it was the ninth inning. The four base drive settled all chances the Chicago lads had to pull the game out of the fire, the final count being 12 to 6.



CAPT. McLAUGHLIN [TRIBUNE Photo.]

That Chicago loves to see a real game played by "kids" was established by the fact that more than 6,600 followers of the national game assembled to see this contest. The size of the crowd makes it assured that such a game will be an annual affair which in time will become a classic event for the prep boys.

Lane Puts Up Fight.

Although decisively beaten, the Chicago boys put up a game and spirited fight all the way, and until the homer by young Gherig occurred in the ninth they were always within striking distance. In the first inning, the New Yorkers knocked in a cluster of three runs which would have discouraged most any team. Lane came forth with a gallant assault in the third and tied the count. New York scored once in the fourth and twice in the fifth, and from then on remained in front.

Perhaps Lane was playing in bad luck to some extent. Tom Walsh, who pitched the team to the championship of the Chicago public school league, labored only for five innings. He suffered so badly from a sore arm that he had to be removed from the game. Norris Eyrholm, the star of the Lane team, who has shifted from short to catcher, was compelled to take the slabbing job and, though he turned out some clever and sturdy work, he was wild.

'Twas a Mighty Blow.

In the ninth, he lost control after getting two men out and a couple of walks with an error filled the bases and made it possible for "Babe" Gehrig to come to bat once more. The husky New Yorker had been up five times and made nary a hit. He walked twice, but hadn't been able to get hold of the ball, and the crowd was wondering if the stories of his batting prowess were all myths. This time he made good.

PITCHER JACOBS. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

Eyrholm didn't intend to give him one in the groove, but did, and the "Babe" landed on it. The ball sailed out high and far and cleared the right field screen by many feet, finally landing in Sheffield avenue and bouncing on to a front porch across the street. It was a blow of which any big leaguer would have been proud and was walloped by a boy who hasn't yet started to shave.

McLaughlin Shows Gameness.

If there was another hero on the field, it was Capt. McLaughlin, catcher for the New Yorkers. In the sixth inning, he collided with Stevenson, first baseman for Lane, in trying to beat one out to first base. It was an unavoidable accident. In the crash, McLaughlin turned his ankle and had to be carried off the field. A substitute was permitted to run for him, and as New York had no other catcher McLaughlin insisted on returning to the battle. Between innings he was helped

Every Day He Asks Five Persons, Picked at Random, a Question.

Today's Question.

(Asked of persons who attended the baseball game between the Lane Technical and the New York City High School of Commerce.)

How do you compare the two teams?

The Answers.

WILLIAM J. HEALY, 1770 Leland avenue, real estate operator—The New York team showed itself possessed of more speed and was steadier. The Lane boys were too slow and did not seem to understand the fine points of the game.

MRS. ALFRED A. MARCOTT, 6685 Blackstone avenue, a housewife—The New York boys had the better of it, to my notion. They were quicker, had more poise. The Lane fellows suffered from poor infielding.

WILLIAM R. PETERSON, 119 One Hundred and Third street, New York, a contractor—There is no question in my mind. Our boys were the better team. Chicago's boys were apparently hampered by poor teamwork. They ought to have new pitchers and pep up the infield.

JOHN S. ROBERTS, 6825 Ridgeland avenue, clerk—The Lane kids didn't seem to have the stamina that the New York boys displayed. I think our boys have it in them to make better players than the easterners, but they cannot come up to them yet. They need loads of pep pumped into them.

JAMES C. MARTEN, 787 Monticello avenue, high school student—I think Lane has a shade the better in a comparison. They were stuck with a pitcher who couldn't throw the ball to second base, let alone peg 'em out. Their infield was rotten. But the New Yorkers seemed to play their best today, and I know Lane played its poorest.

GUNBOAT SMITH GIVES MELICHAR BOXING LESSON

TRIBUNE DECISIONS

Decisions of The Tribune fight representatives are:

At East Chicago—Gunboat Smith beat Tony Melichar [10]; Eddie Rayner stopped Young Army [2]; Jim Cawley stopped Macy Roberts [3].

At Cleveland—Battling Levinsky beat Ray Smith [10]. Bill Brennan knocked out Ole Anderson [8].

At Boston—Tommy Kloby beat Jack Lawlor [12].

BY RAY PEARSON.

Youth, as represented by Tony Melichar, refused to be served yesterday when the Chicago light heavyweight essayed to do business with Gunboat Smith, the old timer, in the windup of the show promoted by George Oswego at East Chicago. Mr. Gunboat didn't have any great difficulty in keeping his wrinkled chin out of the way of Tony's right hand, and at the same time he shot left jabs, right uppercuts, and occasionally a left hook to Melichar's head, all of which gave him a decisive margin on points in their ten round engagement.

Melichar's showing was a keen disappointment to a crowd which numbered about 3,000, a big portion of the gang being from Chicago. They had expected Tony to poke over his nifty right cross for a knockout, but it was the expectation that received the K. O., for Smith simply tucked his chin down in a hunched shoulder and about the best Tony could do was peg him high on the bean, which did no appreciable damage.

Gunboat Uses Head.

Gunboat played the old head stuff 100 per cent perfect. He took no chances after a couple of rounds, for by that time he had gauged Tony. He pulled the Levinsky stunt of holding a long left out in front of Melichar and poising the right for a cross or uppercut. Tony saw that left glove all afternoon, and most of his time he spent trying to circle around and get in close for walloping purposes. But when Tony circled, the crafty Gunboat turned, and so the Chicago scrapper made no progress.

Judged by the first couple of rounds, Melichar, who right from the start assumed the aggressive, looked like a winner. Tony won a slight shade in a "size up" first session, then copped the second by a wide margin, pumping a lot of left jabs to Gunboat's nose, which started to emit the crimson. When the third round started Smith began to stick out his left and uppercut with his right. A brace of healthy uppercuts caught Tony on the chin, and while the Chicagoan did the forcing and a bit of body punching he managed to get an even break on this round, as well as the fourth.

Melichar Stops Wallops.

The fifth started Melichar going to the bad. Gunboat cracked him on the mouth with a right hander which brought the blood. More rights to the same spot followed, and when Tony went to his corner at the end of the session he was bleeding from the nose and mouth. Aside from putting a few straight lefts to the body Melichar was unable to do damage. The description of this round goes for the remaining five, and, though neither fighter was badly punished, the Frisco Gunboat was easily the winner.

Two prelims were put on, and neither went the limit. Eddie Rayner of South Chicago was a winner over Young Army of Chicago in the second round. Army claimed he had been fouled and stopped fighting, and the referee halted the bout. They weighed in at 135 pounds.

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

Scoring points in eighteen of the nineteen events and qualifying twenty-two athletes for the final tryouts in Boston on July 17, Martin Delaney's Chicago Athletic association track and field team romped away with the honors yesterday in the mid-western Olympic trials on Stagg field by scoring 68 points. The Illinois A. C. team, handled by Frank Cayou, was second, with 30 points, while sixteen universities, colleges, and athletic clubs divided the remaining markers.

ARLIE MUCKS. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

The tests showed beyond all question of a doubt that Delaney, who yesterday stamped himself as the logical man to handle the American team in the Olympic games, will send a team to Boston which will make a strong bid for the National A. A. U. championship. The Olympic committee has decided that the final tryouts shall be the outdoor championships and the C. A. A. will send its full strength to the event.

Loomis Fails to Qualify.

In only one event, the 220 yard dash, did Cherry Circle performers fail to come through. In this, Joe Loomis failed to qualify in his heat. In the other events, however, Cherry Circle athletes were always in evidence and will be even better when the eastern tests are held.

RAY WATSON.

Although the caliber of most of the athletes was known, the running of A. Patasoni of the Haskell institute was one of the big features. This athlete, who is a full breed Indian, won the 10,000 meter run in the fast time of 33:36 3-5. He was practically unknown to the athletic world before yesterday, but his performance stamped him as one of the country's leading distance runners. He lapped most of his opponents and finished the grind with the speed of a sprinter.

Foss in 13 Foot Vault.

The two stellar performances of the tests were registered by local athletes. Frank Foss of the C. A. A., holder of the world's record in the pole vault at 13 feet 3 9-16 inches, won his event with a vault of 13 feet. He was forced all the way by Gardner of Yale, who was unable to clear the winning height. Eddie Enourek of the Illinois A. C. was third, his best being 12 feet 6 inches.

Joie Ray, the redoubtable runner of the Illinois A. C., turned his best mile of the season by winning his race in 4:16. The little tricolor club star was given a race for three-quarters of a mile by Arlie Schardt of the C. A. A., who was unable to hold the fast pace on the last lap. Unlike former meets, Ray confined his efforts to this race.

R. B. Watson of the Kansas Aggies secured revenge for his defeat in the conference two mile run by Furnas of Purdue by defeating the Boilermaker in a heart breaking finish in the 5,000 meter run. Furnas led into the stretch, when Watson passed him and won by three yards.

Scholz Takes Century.

Jack Scholz of the University of Missouri, conference 100 and 220 yard champion, showed he is the class of the dash men by winning the century in even time. He defeated Howard Drew of Drake, joint holder of the world's record for 100 yards at :09 3-5, and Jo Loomis of the C. A. A. He was beaten by his teammate, Massengale, in the furlong, although it looked as if Jack was content to win one race and his teammate the other.

Tom Campbell, formerly of the University of Chicago, who competed for Yale university, won the half mile after a hard race with Phil Spink of the C. A. A. Johnston of Des Moines college challenged Campbell on the back stretch of the last lap, but the Yale runner had too much in reserve and the Hawkeye dropped back to third place.

Crowd of 4,000 Sees Meet.

A crowd of 4,000 persons saw the events. Committeeman Everett C. Brown was well pleased with the turnout and the money taken in at the gate will go toward the fund to defray the expenses of the American team to Belgium. Summaries:

5,000 METER RUN.

Won by Watson, Kansas Aggies; Furnas, Purdue, second; Foreman, C. A. A., third. Time, 15:40.

THE DANDY OLD BILL-POSTER

In the Wake of the News

NEW YORK CHAMPIONS!

TO New York High School of Commerce, congratulations from Chicago and its high school following on a merited victory in the inter-city game, together with a friendly warning for next year.

To Lane Tech, congratulations in defeat for showing the best it had.

In a game in which every player tried his hardest, we may be pardoned for omitting specific mention in The Wake of New Yorks' individual feats, which are reflected in the score, and centering a few words on Norris Eyrholm.

This Lane player, whose regular position is shortstop, went behind the bat when three Lane catchers became ineligible through the scholarship route. Then when Pitcher Walsh was compelled to retire Eyrholm mounted the slab and attempted the impossible task of stopping the superior visitors. Norris is a great prep school player. He sacrificed his chance to shine in his own position for the good of his team.

The setting for the game was almost ideal—good weather, enthusiastic rooters present in large numbers, contortionist cheer leaders, and a fine spirit of sportsmanship on the part of both teams who never seriously questioned an umpire's decision.

Considering from all angles, the game surpassed expectations in every respect—a successful inaugural for annual games for many years to come.

BY I. E. SANBORN.

Pittsburgh, Pa., June 26.—[Special.]—After trailing the Cubs for seven innings today, the Pirates batted Hippo Vaughn for six runs in the eighth, and emerged victorious, 9 to 4. Vaughn was rapped hard most of the way and was given wretched support in spots.

In the awful eighth Terry and Hollocher collided going after a simple pop fly and converted it into a scratch hit which proved costly. In the third with two out Flack fumbled a hit from Whitted and then threw to second without looking and let a runner score all the way from first on it.

Mixup Over Infield Fly.

A mixup occurred in the fourth over an infield fly which Hollocher lost in the sun. Umpire Rigler declared the batsman out but allowed two runners to advance according to the 1920 ruling. The decision made no difference in the score.

The Cubs drove Hamilton off the slab in two rounds during which they scored all of their runs with the aid of a wild throw by Whitted and a base on balls. Meadow went on in the third and brought the Cubs to a standstill until taken out for a pinch hitter in the seventh that let Ponder finish the slabbing.

Five Hits by Southworth.

Seventeen hits were scored against Vaughn and five of them were made by Southworth in five times at bat. Barbare who batted for Hamilton in the third and then succeeded Cutshaw at second ripped off four hits in succession but did not get to bat again in the eighth.

BENNY LEONARD PUTS ON GLOVES FOR WORK TODAY

Benton Harbor, Mich., June 26.—Lightweight Champion Benny Leonard will do his first boxing since he began training for his fight with Charley White here the afternoon of July 5. The champion put in another long session on the road this morning and says he's feeling fit and ready now to take on his sparring partners—five in number—one after the other. Joe Benjamin, the coast lightweight; Tommy Holderson, Ted Murphy, Red Quinn, and Willie Findlay are now encamped with Leonard at Eastman Springs.

Charley white drew out another record crowd at his Edgewater club training camp. Automobiles lined the roadway for half a mile on either side of the entrance to the camp. White wound up his second week of training today and looks ready now to battle Leonard.

Shawnee on the Delaware, Pa., June 26.—Mrs. Ronald H. Barlow, Philadelphia, woman's eastern golf champion, today for the seventh time, won the annual tournament of the local country club when she defeated Mrs. Charles Knight of Garden City, the former English star, in the final match, 7 and 6.

In winning with a medal score of 83 Mrs. Barlow came within one stroke of equalling the record of 82 made by Mrs. W. A. Gavin of New York in the woman's national championship last fall. Had it not been for a "nine" on the seventeenth, Mrs. Barlow would have eclipsed the record

HARVARD COMES FROM BEHIND TO TRIM YALE, 6-3

Boston, Mass., June 26.—[Special.]—For five innnigs today the Yale nine had a splendid vision of a romp against Harvard. Yale had been presented with two early runs, and Left Hand Pitcher Frank Cox was going along at a fine clip. But in the sixth Harvard waded into Coxe's deliveries, not only overtaking Yale, but on four singles and a double to the left field fence, scoring five runs to set a 5 to 2 score, and holding the edge to win eventually, 6 to 3.

Robert Emmonsverd of this city was re-elected captain of the Harvard team for 1921, and James Wilton Peters Wilson of Providence, R. I., was elected captain of the Yale nine after the game.

NOTES

Cleveland again today for the last game of this set.

Paid customers kept filing into the park up to the third round. The crowd must have totaled over 20,000.

Tonight the Sox pull out for a three day stay in Detroit. Then they come back to battle the Browns here.

Speaker tied Weaver for the day's swatting crown. One of his three blows was a double. All of Buck's were one base efforts.

Faber undoubtedly let up after getting his big lead, but the Indians had his stuff pretty well sized up, anyway. At the finish Red seemed all in physically.

Jim Bagby, who is called one-half of the tribe's two man pitching staff, is due for a shot at the Sox. Cicotte or Kerr will work for the Gleasons, with Eddie first choice.

Both Gardner's triples were terrific smashes to the fence in left center. Jackson aimed his at right center in the fourth, and a faster man than Mistah Joe would have made a homer of it.

Notes

Pittsburgh, Pa., June 26.—At home with Pittsburgh tomorrow.

Paskert kept Whitted from a home run by a great running catch in the seventh.

Both teams boarded the same rattler after the game and will continue their argument on the north side tomorrow.

Robertson was out of the game and Barber filled his place in left. Dave has not been hitting much, neither did Barber today.

The Pirates played superbly in the field. Carey made a sensational catch that robbed Flack of a hit in the second. Caton went almost against the stand back of third base after a foul from Barber and caught it.

One of Southworth's five hits was a triple, which he tried to stretch into a home run in the fifth. Terry relayed Flack's throw in time to turn Southworth back, but O'Farrell nailed him before he could regain third.

When a ball team can combine ten hits in two innings it almost has to cop. The White Sox did just that against the Tribesmen yesterday, and the net result was a 12 to 7 victory over the leaders from Cleveland. It was the second straight licking the Speakers have accepted from the Gleasons.

Most of the fun centered in the fourth session. Seven solit hits, a walk, and an error were clustered in that jayous frame. The result is what is known among devotees of Ethiopian golf as a natural—meaning seven runs. NAME RESOLUTE AS CUP DEFENDER AGAINST LIPTON

Chosen Over Vanitie for Racing Shamrock IV.

Newport, R. I., June 26.—Selection of the sloop Resolute to defend the America's cup against the Shamrock IV. was announced today by the New York Yacht club. It was also announced the first race would be sailed off Sandy Hook July 15.

The decision was reached after the cup committee had witnessed the last trial race between Resolute and Vanitie in their elimination series today, which was called off about twenty minutes after the yachts had passed the outer mark with Vanitie a half mile in the lead. Today's race was in a light breeze.

Resolute to Be Refitted.

Resolute had a better berth at the start, but before three miles had been sailed Vanitie had taken the lead and was 2 minutes 41 seconds ahead at the outer mark. The course was a beat under the lightest of airs.

Resolute will be towed to Bristol at once for a complete overhauling, including the fitting of three new sets of sails and small spars.

The cup defender was built in 1914 by a syndicate composed of J. P. Morgan, Cornelius Vanderbilt, Arthur Curtis James, George F. Baker, Henry Walters and several other members of New York Yacht club. Two other boats were constructed at the same time, Vanitie by A. Cochrane and Defiant by a syndicate of Boston, New York and Philadelphia yachtsmen. The Defiant was withdrawn early in 1914.

Wins 25 of 29 Races.

The series of trial races scheduled in 1914 between Vanitie and Resolute was stopped by the war. In 1915 the two sloops sailed a number of races, nearly all of which were won by Resolute. In the two years Resolute had twenty-five victories to her credit against four for Vanitie.

The cost of the trial races this year reached about $125,000, financed by a syndicate which was formed to race the two yachts.

OLYMPIA FIELDS WILL HAVE FOUR COURSES IN YEAR

With its third course open Olympia Fields Country club will now turn its attention to the construction of its fourth. The spirit of loyalty which has carried the club over many bunkers and placed it on a substantial footing has made it possible to finance the fourth course.

The new course, according to bids received, will cost approximately $80,000. To raise this money it was decided to ask 200 members to advance $400 each, and the responses have been sufficiently numerous to warrant going ahead with the work.

The construction work will be let to a private firm which agrees to have the course completed inside of a year. This work will not interfere with that of improving the present courses.

The new course will be located at the south end of the club property, where the land is considered better than on the present courses, and the idea is to make the last course a real championship affair.

It has been the aim of the club officials to give the members good golfing facilities first, and now that the fourth course is assured the matter of a new clubhouse will be taken up.

Trap Shooters to Compete at South Shore Today

A 100 target event, class shooting, will feature the shoot at the South Shore Country club today. In addition to the main event there will be a doubles contest of 25 pairs, 16 yards rise. Traps will be open for practice at 11 a. m. and competitive shooting will start three hours later.

On Local Golf Links

FRANK M. CHASSEE holed a mashie shot for an eagle 1 on the fifth hole of the North Shore course yesterday. Chassee drove his ball 11 yards to the edge of the green, from which it rolled into the cup. Chassee didn't see the ball disappear and spent twenty minutes searching around the edge of the green before his caddy discovered it resting securely in the dugout. Thirty-two players qualified for the Directors' trophy, E. Lester making low net for the day with his 88—25—63. C. C. Owen took second low net with 87—23—64.

BELMONT.

President Heinzen won the R. G. Kerr trophy for the blind bogey at Belmont, having a score of 87. T. R. Boole played sterling golf, making the round in 44-44—88-71, winning low net for the day and defeating Heinzen 6 and 5 in the second round for the Electrical Men's trophy. Other results of the second round were: E. L. Easley defeated R. G. Kerr, 2 and 1; F. B. McGivern defeated T. A. Crooke, 2 and 1; F. B. Gallagher and O. H. Welsert defeated F. J. Kalb, 2 and 1; E. R. Hoyt defeated J. C. Schultz, 4 and 2.

MIDLOTHIAN

Probably the only reason J. C. Dean did not win more than three trophies was the fact that only a trio of events was scheduled. With a card of 94—24—70, he annexed the War Release cup and the sweepstakes, while a margin of 7 up on bogey gave him the W. J. Mohr trophy.

E. Hoover Bankard won the finals in the class A tournament by defeating C. W. Booth, 2 and 1. In class B N. S. Holan triumphed over W. H. Eagle, 4 and 3. D. R. McKay defeated A. R. Shurtleff, 2 and 1, in class C, while in the fourth division W. E. Sibley won when A. R. Fay defaulted.

CALICO BASS AND CRAPPIES.

Two fishes that now receive a great deal of attention from the cane pole brigade are the calico bass and crappie. These fishes rank high in popular esteem, not because of their great gaminess, but because they are willing biters, they look nice on a stringer, and they are mighty good to eat. Ask any young or old boy who has caught them.

LARRY ST. JOHN. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

There is a great similarity in appearance between these two fishes, and they are often confused. The calico bass, however, has a smaller mouth than the crappie, his anal fin is almost free from spots, and he nearly always has seven sharp spines on his back fin, while the crappie usually has but six.

The calico bass is the more northern species, thriving better in colder water than the crappie, but in some regions he appears to be lacking in hardiness.

Take almost any lake inhabited by calico bass and fully a third of the fishes found floating after the ice goes out will be of this species. Whether this is due to mortality in spawning or to parasitic diseases we know not. On the other hand, the calico bass has merits, not the least of which is his ability to establish himself in almost any kind of water. We have caught them in muddy ponds and in cold brooks.

Some of the other names sported by the calico bass are strawberry bass, grass bass, bitter head, big fin bass, and, at certain points along Lake Michigan, he is called the bar fish. The average size of the calico bass is around three to the pound, but we once saw one from a small lake near Holland, Mich., that weighed three and one-half pounds—the grandaddy of 'em all!

In the central states the crappie is an institution, and crappie fishing a leading pastime. His popularity may be judged by the variety of names that have been bestowed upon him. In the Ohio river districts he is called bachelor; in Kentucky Campbellite or lamplighter; in Indiana, John Demon; in New Orleans, sac-a-lait. Tin mouth, paper mouth, bridge perch, chinquapin are some of his other local names, but wherever you go they will know what you mean when you say "Let's go out after crappies."

Calico bass are more often found in open places than the crappie, the bars in deep lakes being a favorite spot, but both species travel about in schools and where one is caught it is a safe bet that others are near by.

In the south crappies are often taken by casting a small minnow, and while they do not put up a thrilling fight, they strike viciously, and with great how-de-do, and, having weak mouths, they must be handled carefully to avoid pulling the hook out. A Louisiana crappie fisherman will tell you, too, that it requires more skill to land a big crappie than it does to bring in a big bass.

The most exciting crappie fishing is trolling from a sailboat. With a good breeze and plenty of feeding fish it is a lively sport. For this work a No. 1 spoon may be used, with or without a small minnow on the hook.

Calico bass and crappies will also rise to flies at times, especially toward evening when the lake calms down. Usually a No. 0 or 1 spinner ahead of the fly—we always use a No. 4 Silver Doctor—adds to its attractiveness.

For general still fishing a small shiner makes the best bait for either species. Hook it lightly on a No. 4 or 6 hook, so as not to impair its activity, and let it swim around, about a foot off the bottom. If the water is clear a three foot gut leader is advisable.

Next best in the bait line is the peeled tail of a crawfish, although grasshoppers, worms, or even cut bait will do in a pinch. In very roily water a round spinner, about the size of a dime, is a good attention getter in still fishing. Keep it in motion by slightly lowering and raising the rod.

From very muddy places neither fish is first class for the pan, although skinning, instead of scaling, improves them. Many experts in such matters hold that there are but two fishes that are improved by being iced for twenty-four hours. One of these is the muskallonge and the other is the crappie.

PUNCHES FLY AS CARDINALS TAKE PAIR FROM CINCY

Cincinnati, O., June 26.—St. Louis went to second place in the National league race today by winning a double header from the champions, 5 to 0 and 4 to 3. Ruether was pounded hard in the first game, while Haines pitched perfectly, allowing only three hits. In the second game long drives gave the Cardinals the victory.

PITCHER LUQUE. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

In the eighth inning of the second game Pitcher Luque of the Reds attacked Umpire Klem and dealt him several hard blows about the head. The assault took pace while Luque was in the box with no one on base, and the pitcher claims that it was due to vicious language used by the official.

Luque and Catcher Allen of the Reds both made affidavits that Klem had used such language. If the claims are proved, the club will bring charges against Klem. Luque was put out of the game and Eller finished it.

Previous to this incident a shower of pop bottles fell around Klem when he called Fournier safe at the plate in the sixth inning. Wingo was put out of the game at this time for abusive language. Scores:

PREPS OF NEW YORK DEFEAT LANE TECH IN BINGLEFEST, 12-6

from the plate to the bench, suffering great pain all the time, but he gamely stuck to the finish.

The mishap was the only incident that marred the afternoon, though the Lane rooters grieved over the loss of Pitcher Walsh and always will believe that if his arm had been right the Lane team would have won. Walsh's peculiar slow curves had the visitors quite badly fussed, but because of his lameness he wasn't able to put the ball over the plate in his customary manner. Ryrholm hasn't been pitching and wasn't quite up to the job. His all around playing, however, was most admirable.

Others in Star Role.

Others on the Lane team who stood out were Christman and Stevenson, each with two singles and a double, and little Salvator Pasquinelli, who played his usual snappy defensive game and contributed a couple of blows.

The Chicago boys poled a dozen hits, one more than their rivals, but no one got a homer with the bases loaded, and and few were able to deliver in the pinches. Pitcher Jacobs of the Gotham squad waas steady and true all the way. His little side arm curve was bending in over the plate any time he wished it to. He walked only one man, and when there were men on the bases he always had some reserve strength. His support, especially from the infielders, at times was brilliant.

Johnson, Bunora, Rosomonda and Gherig form an infield that is far above the average found in high schools, and their dashing plays brought applause from the crowd many times.

Two Bands Furnish Treat.

Features outside of the game were enjoyed by the spectators. Before the contest began the Lane band in khaki suits marched across the field, followed by the ball players. In front of the flag the band and athletes halted, and the national anthem was rendered. All during the game Jack Bramhall's band reeled off jazz, and the three Lane cheer leaders were on the field continuously, doing stunts and leading the throng of students in the yells. Some song boosters sneaked in and megaphoned a couple of the latest to the crowd, and Frisco, the noted dancer, who came from New York on the same train with the team, took the field once and gave an exhibit of the latest moves of the "shimmy."

Pronounce Game Great Success.

When the battle was over the New York faculty men and Superintent of Schools Ettinger and his assistant, Mr. O'Shea, who came out here for the game, pronounced the affair an immense success, and said they hoped to see Chicago's champions of next year play in New York.

In the evening the players of both teams attended the play, "Poker Ranch," as guests of the Olympic theater management. The New York squad will start back for Gotham today.

OLD TIMERS TO MEET.

A special meeting of the Old Timers Baseball association will be held in Parlor 3 of the Great Northern Hotel at 8 p. m. tomorrow. Business in connection with the Old Timers field day at Pyott park on July 18 will be transacted.

One Record Is Broken in Southern Olympic Trial

New Orleans, La., June 26.—Only one southern record was broken in the southern Olympic tryouts today at Tulanevy stadium. This was by Lemon of Dallas with a jump of 22 feet 5 inches in the running broad jump. Lemon was one of the stars of the tryouts. Coughlan of Swanee ran a fine race in the 440 yard hurdles, going over the sticks in :59 3-5.

In the sixth inning the Lane boys executed a neat double steal with Ryrholm on third and Hanson on first and two out. Hanson dashed for second, drawing a throw, whereupon Ryrholm legged it for home. Shortstop Bunora took the throw at second and pegged home, but Ryrholm beat it, finishing with a good slide. The picture shows Ryrholm starting his slide, with Catcher McLaughlin in front of the plate to receive the ball. Budach, the Lane man at bat, is the other player in the group.

Q-Boat Jackson Park II. Victor in Close Finish

The Kraft syndicate Q-boat Jackson Park II. sailed a speedy race over the ten and a half mile course off Jackson park yesterday and cleaned up the big universal fleet of Q and P boats that competed in the main race. Jackson Park II. made the course in 1:39:19, which was two minutes better than the time of Intrepid of class P, which finished second.

YACHT RACE TO DAUCHY'S SARI; RAINBOW FOULS

The lake wasn't big enough for Rainbow, and Samuel Dauchy's Sari beat the Clark boat when the latter was disqualified for fouling a buoy in the third series of contests of the Chicago Yacht club, sailed over the Belmont Harbor course yesterday. It was a tight battle between these two craft, with the Rainbow finishing first, but when it ran down the mark at the end of the fourth leg it was ruled out.

Seboomook, E. Schnabel's famous old craft, gave the big Dorello a trimming through its big time allowance in the thirty-five foot class. G. V. Lewis' Seminole won the twenty-five foot class event and Lambin's Invader was winning raceabout. Webster's Dolphin and Andrews' Ste. Claire had no opposition in the yawl and thirty foot classes respectively. C. Udell's Ancona won the sixteen foot knockabout class with Alert second and Lolita third.

NOTES OF PREP GAME

"I didn't intend to give Gherig a nice one in that ninth," was what Pitcher Ryrholm said regarding the "Babe Ruth" swat. "I meant to keep it on the outside."

Capt. Pfleger of Lane turned a couple of pretty catches in centerfield, both on drives off Pitcher Jacobs. It was Pfleger's last appearance for Lane. He plans to enter Illinois in the fall.

It wasn't a crowd of school kids who attended the game. Perhaps not more than 2,000 Lane students were there. Most of the others were old timers. One regular fan pronounced it the best game he had ever seen.

Twice during the game New York boys were out for missing second base. Bunora would have had a triple in the fourth, but didn't touch second. Little Pasquinelli saw him miss it and so did Ump. Driscoll. Troy missed second in the ninth and Pasquinelli also saw that. Troy also missed third base in the fourth. It was noticed in the press stand and Ump. Cusack also saw it, btu none of the Lane boys did and made no play on the man, so his run counted.

YANKEES CRUSH RED SOX, 14 TO 0, BEFORE 38,000

Collins, Recruit Pitcher, Allows One Hit.

New York, June 26.—The New York Yankees swamped Boston this afternoon, taking the second of the series, 14 to 0.

A capacity crowd of 38,000 saw the game. While Warren Collins, a Texas league recruit, pitched a one-hit shutout in his third major league start, the Yankees battered Pitchers Bush and Karr for eighteen hits, totaling thirty-two bases.

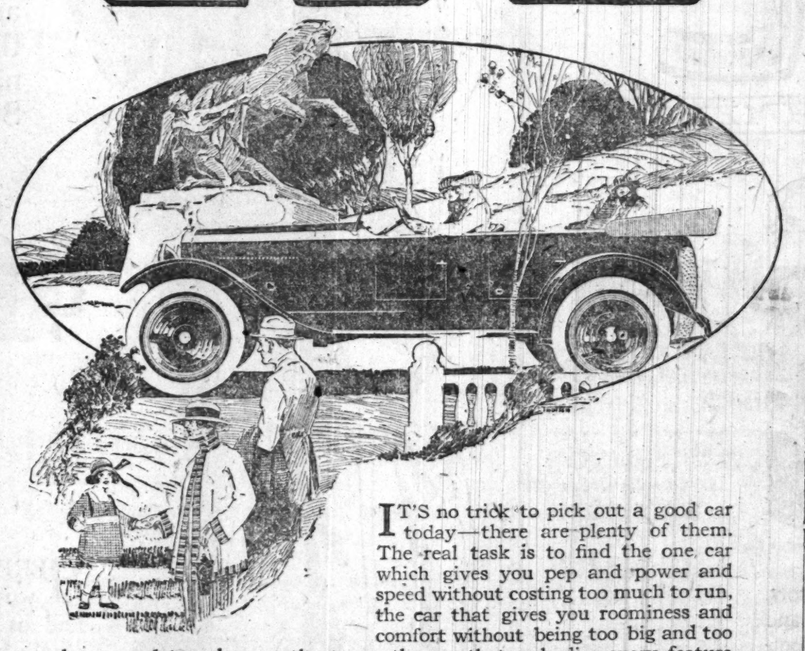
GRANT SIX



IT'S no trick to pick out a good car today—there are plenty of them. The real task is to find the one car which gives you pep and power and speed without costing too much to run, the car that gives you roominess and comfort without being too big and too heavy and too slow on the turns, the car that embodies every feature of advanced engineering yet does not hit the pocket-book below the belt.

We say that you will find that one car in the Grant Six.

The Grant Six chassis will sell itself to anybody who inspects it. Before you have had half of its many fine features pointed out you will be as enthusiastic about it as we are.

We like to explain in detail the mechanical features of the Grant Six—but if you prefer to test your judgment upon its performance you have a real thrill coming.

Seat yourself at the wheel and take the Grant Six through rush hour traffic, then spin out on the open road, tackle a nasty hill or two in high and go over the top at 30 miles an hour, brake it suddenly, step on it and feel it jump forward—You'll say "This is the car I want."

Hayes to Play "Clif" Herd for City Tennis Title Today

LUKE WILLIAMS and Jimmy Weber, the Yale varsity combination, took the measure of the three time western sectional doubles champions, Walter Hayes and Ralph Burdick, in the semi-finals of the Chicago city tournament at Chicago Tennis club yesterday, and today will play for the title against Jerry Weber, brother of Jimmy, and Clifton B. Herd, who was champion of the American expeditionary force.

Williams and Weber played cleverly, and merited their victory, which was gathered in three straight sets, 7—5, 6—3, 6—3. They lobbed over the western champions when the latter came in, and drove past them when the latter were out of position. Neither Hayes nor Burdick was on the top of his game.

Weber and Herd Win in Doubles.

Jerry Weber and Herd defeated A. W. Shaw and Arthur P. Hubbell in the other semi-final, 6—2, 6—4. 8—6, the losers proving good getters but being kept continually on the defensive.

Hayes qualified for the singles title by defeating the former western singles champion, Alex Squair, 6—4, 6—8, 7—5, 6—0. This match was mainly a duel from the back court, and was fought on even terms until the final set, when Hayes forced the play and sought out the corners of Squair's court. The latter weakened against the aggressive attack and dropped a love set. Hard defeated his doubles mate, Jerry Weber, in the other semi-final, in a match marked by spirited rallies.

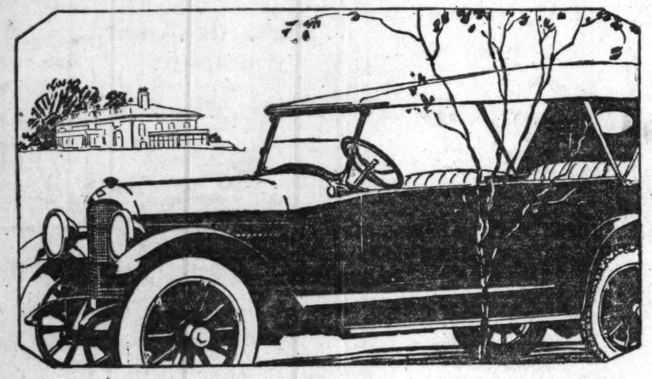
PAIGE

THE MOST BEAUTIFUL CAR IN AMERICA



AMERICAN business has been motorized. For both short and long hauls, the gasoline truck has proven itself a thoroughly efficient form of transportation.

And no intelligent field executive would dream of tackling his job without the proper equipment—a dependable touring car or roadster.

It would amaze you to know how many lawyers, doctors, architects, contractors and specialty salesmen have adopted the Paige. These men have bought their cars for active service and they have been influenced in their selection by practical considerations only.

They deliberately sought out the car that would offer the greatest dollar-for-dollar value—and they found it in the PAIGE.

MAYOR SAYS HE WILL FIGHT RAISE OF WATER RATES

Opposes Aldermen's Plan to Meet City Deficit.

Aldermanic suggestions that the financial deficit facing the city be met in part by an increase in water rates or a reduction of the 25 per cent discount rate received a jolt yesterday by Mayor Thompson's announcement that he will fight such a move to the limit.

Several members of the finance committee take the position that salary increases to water office employés this year will cause a deficit in the water fund. For years the fund has been more than self-supporting.

Francis Objects to Raise.

In taking his stand the mayor made public a letter from Commissioner of Public Works Francis saying that that there is "no justification for an increase in water rates."

"The water works system of Chicago is being operated at a profit," the letter reads. "In the water department the ordinary revenue has exceeded all ordinary expenditures of operation and maintenance by more than $3,000,000 each year. This excess of revenue or profit has been available for extensions and betterments of the water system, including rehabilitation work and capital outlay."

Letter Cites Figures.

The commissioner's letter gives the following figures to support the position Mayor Thompson has taken:

	Ordinary revenue.	Ordinary expenditures.	Excess available for extensions, etc.
1915—	$6,446,247.04	$3,287,548.18	$3,160,698.86
1916—	6,796,646.39	3,530,028.24	3,266,618.15
1917—	7,438,597.11	3,886,332.70	3,552,264.41
1918—	7,625,134.54	4,621,941.15	3,003,193.39
1919—	8,007,851.74	4,854,359.85	3,163,491.89

Thus far the finance committee has gone no further than to discuss the proposed increase in rates.

Special Assessment Books to Be Closed on July 1

No payments of special assessments will be accepted after July 1, the city collector announced yesterday. On that date the books will be closed preparatory to turning them over on Aug. 1 to the county treasurer. After Aug. 1 property owners have sixty days to pay their assessments to the county treasurer, after which property may be sold for nonpayment of the assessments.

BOYS IN STOLEN AUTO START FOR DETROIT, LAND IN JAIL HERE

Two Bens who started on a trip to Detroit in a stolen automobile came to grief at Battle Creek, Mich., when they asked for a free night's lodging in the city jail.

The jailer telegraphed to Chicago and, learning the car had been stolen, placed the boys under arrest when they prepared to leave the next morning.

The boys are Benjamin Labow of 810 South Paulina street and Benjamin Braverman of 2657 Potomac avenue. Neither is more than 16 years of age.

Commissioner Lewis F. Mason held them in bonds of $5,000 each yesterday when they were arraigned. According to the story they told Deputy Marshal Hennebry, some men actually stole the car and then disappeard.

GOOD HOMES OPEN TO CHILDREN DAD MUST LOSE

Do you remember the photographs in Thursday morning's TRIBUNE of the four little children who were looking for a new home? Remember those two clean cut boys and the romping, healthy look in the eyes of the two girls? Mighty fine looking children, weren't they?

Well, every one of those children is going to have a home. THE TRIBUNE has received no fewer than fifteen letters from parents who want to adopt one, two, three, or four children. The letters come from Chicago, Rochester, Wis., Homer, Ill., Paw Paw, Mich., Crestline, O., and many other places.

The Vocational Art institute, 6143 Kenwood avenue, offered to take all four children. Good educations, good homes, and good, loving friends were promised.

The children's father yesterday looked over the letters. He will answer them personally. His voice grew husky as he read the kindness of the TRIBUNE readers. He realizes that the time for the final separation is approaching. He has six children. His young wife died a few months ago, and he can't take care of them all.

THREE BANDITS IN MOTORCYCLE GET $3,100 HAUL

Three young bandits, jumping from a motorcycle with a side car attached, yesterday held up Peter A. Reisenhus, president of the American Glove company, 2021 Churchill street, and escaped with the concern's pay roll of $3,100.

The holdup occurred at Bloomingdale and North Hoyne avenues. Reisenhus and his son, James A. Reisenhus, were returning to their office from the Noel State bank at Milwaukee and North avenues with the money to meet the pay roll, when the motorcycle drew up at the curb and the three men leaped out.

They all carried .45 caliber army pistols and are believed to be ex-soldiers. One of them wore an army flannel shirt and wrapped leggings. One of them grabbed the parcel and all three leaped back to the motorcycle and fled.

Miss Hazel Joergens was robbed of jewels valued at $1,350 and $25 in cash early yesterday by two robbers who hid in the vestibule of her home at 2112 Seminary avenue. George Anderson of the Plaza hotel, her escort, lost a stickpin.

CHILD DROWNS IN TROUGH.

Robert Dobbins, 18 months old, was drowned in a water trough on his father's farm in Arlington Heights, shortly after 9 o'clock yesterday.

STOCK MARKET LISTLESS; NO GREAT CHANGES

YESTERDAY'S AVERAGES

New York, June 26.—[Special.]—It would be hard to imagine a more listless session of the stock market than today's short one. A few stocks, mostly industrial specialties, fluctuated a little, and at times some of the professional traders tried to give their favorites an appearance of activity; but none of these attempts enjoyed outstanding success. For the general run there were nothing but purely perfunctory advances or declines of small fractions.

In the news budget there was little to inspire. The intimation that railroad wages are to be substantially advanced soon had no apparent effect on railroad share prices.

The reported arrival of gold on the Mauretania made the amount somewhat larger than earlier rumors had intimated, but cabled advices from London greatly reduced the estimates of the amount the Olympic is bringing. The Cunarder brought in $4,000,000, as against the estimate of $2,000,000, while the Olympic's consignment, which had been guessed at all the way up to $10,000,000, was reduced to $1,250,000 in the London cable. If the latter proves correct, the idea that the shipment is for the British government seems unwarranted; more likely it represents further purchases of Transvaal gold.

Huge British Steel Merger Makes Progress

Further progress in the formation of the British Empire Steel corporation, into which will be merged a number of companies, and which will be one of the largest industrial enterprises in Canada, was made yesterday.

At a special meeting of the stockholders of the Nova Scotia Steel and Coal company the merger proposal was ratified. Stockholders of the Dominion Iron and Steel company a week ago elected a board of directors favorable to the merger.

Negotiations for specific terms are now in progress with the Canada Steamship Lines, Halifax Ship Yard, Collingwood Shipbuilding company and Port Arthur Shipbuilding company, Ltd. This merger, which, it is believed, will be completed in July or August, involves the issuance of approximately $25,000,000 of securities to provide additional working capital.

Charles Musil, a lieutenant in the paymaster's department at Great Lakes, yesterday filed suit for a divorce in the Lake county Circuit court at Waukegan.

GRAINS ADVANCE, CLOSE NEAR TOP; SHORTS BUYERS

BY CHARLES D. MICHAELS.

Forecast of a hot wave in the central west, combined with less favorable reports from Illinois and Iowa, resulted in a sharp upturn in oats. That market showed independent strength and with heavy commission house buying of the deferred deliveries prices advanced and closed within ⅛@¾c of the top, with net gains of 1⅛@2¼c, December leading. Corn was affected by the strength in oats and closed 1⅛@2⅝c higher, while rye was ⅛@1c higher and barley ½c higher.

While there was heavy selling for profits and a great deal of bear pressure on grains the last week, net losses were not large. Corn at the close was off 1⅜@4½c from the previous week, July leading. Oats lost ⅛@⅞c, rye 1⅝@4c, and barley 3c.

Buy September Freely.

Oats in Illinois and Iowa are in the critical stage, and in a position to be badly damaged by hot weather. This factor, combined with a generally less optimistic tenor of reports from the two states, led to free buying of September at the start by strong commission houses. The surplus was taken out of the market and later sellers of offers were forced to protect themselves. When the bulge was on the early buyers turned sellers and checked the advance.

Premiums in the sample market were 1@2c lower, buyers refusing to follow the advance in futures. Country offerings of loaded oats showed an increase, but generally spot prices were asked, and purcases were small.

Corn Closes Firm.

Corn made its lowest prices at the start and the highest toward the close. Trade was light and almost entirely of a local character. Week end evening up and the strength in oats led to short covering and made the advance. Sentiment was somewhat less bearish.

Cash corn was unchanged early, and ½@1c higher at the last, but the spread between No. 2 mixed and the July at the close was only 2c, against 3c the previous day. Estimated receipts for Monday around 300 cars, with inspection crews working on two railroads today. The crop is not sufficiently advanced to be hurt by hot weather.

Rye was dull, but slightly firmer in sympathy with other grains. At one time the July-September spread was 30¼c, the widest known, but at the last the difference was only 29½c. No. 2 on track sold at 5c over July.

Barley offerings were small and prices unchanged, with spot sales at $1.41@1.48. Receipts, 8 cars.

Rally in Lard.

July longs were fair sellers of provisions, but there was enough buying to take the offerings and advance prices, making a close at gains of 17½@20c on lard, 10@15c on ribs, and 22½c on July pork, while September lost 7½c.

An advance in corn and private predictions of reduced arrivals of hogs were the main bullish factors. Carrying charges widened slightly. Cash trade in hams was good and market firm.

Shipments of lard and meats were under last year's. Packing here since March 1 aggregated 1,893,000 hogs, or 602,000 under last year's.

NEWS OF THE CROPS

R. O. Cromwell's report to E. W. Warner & Co., from Springfield, Ill., which was a big factor in starting prices upward yesterday, said: 'In Woodford, Peoria, Tazewell, McLean and Logan counties there are numerous oats fields, some of which are well along in heading, that would not hide a rabbit. May not run over half a crop. Local people all very pessimistic. Conditions below those in southern Iowa."

George M. Le Count wired Stein, Alstrin & Co. from Iowa City, Iowa: "Very dry in this territory, but oats doing fairly well. Straw is short but most fields well headed. Earliest oats going into milk stage and will make fair crop of good quality if weather stays cool. Corn generally very promising. Early fields knee high. Lots of old corn.

"Belleville to Norton wheat continues good," wired John Inglis to Logan & Bryan from Norton, Kansas. "Northwestern counties have large crop in prospect. Much of it only in the milk. Northern banner corn counties have increased their acreage. Conditions very poor. No growth."

WORLD'S GRAIN MARKET NEWS

No trading in wheat for September delivery was on at Baltimore yesterday. There were bids of $2.81½ with $2.82 asked, and with August $2.82. A message from Baltimore said that wheat sold for spot or future delivery, unless otherwise specified, is to be known as contract wheat and upon such sales the seller shall have the right to deliver No. 1 red winter wheat or No. 2 red winter wheat, No. 1 and No. 2 red garlicky wheat. Baltimore inspection. Deliveries must be made through public elevators, declared regular by the Baltimore Chamber of Commerce. Public storage is about 5,000,000 bu. Commissions are ⅝c for members and ¾c for non-members.

Preparations are being made at the leading wheat markets for reopening of trading. Plans provide for a more elastic delivery. Kansas City has adopted a rule permitting a delivery of No. 3 grades at a good discount. Chicago has the most liberal allowances for deliveries, which were adopted three years ago and provide for the delivery of the leading No. 1 and No. 2 grades of the various varieties of winter and spring wheat and for No. 3 dark hard winter, No. 3 hard winter, No. 3 yellow hard winter, No. 3 red winter, No. 1 and No. 2 white wheat at a discount of 6c.

Grain receipts at primary markets last week aggregated 15,525,000 bu, the largest at this time in more than five years. Wheat receipts of 4,633,000 bu exceeded last year's by 3,214,000 bu, and were the largest since 1916. Corn made the best showing in more than five years, increasing 793,000 bu for the week and 3,098,000 bu over last year, while oats with an increase of 348,000 bu to 7,863,000 bu were the smallest in more than five years and 2,535,000 bu short of a year ago. Chicago had the largest run of corn in four years, with an increase of 450,000 bu for the week and 1,300,000 bu over last year, the total being 2,584,000 bu. Oats lost 1,334,000 bu from last year.

Active buying of bids on September corn were on after the close yesterday by leading cash houses, while offers were taken extensively by a house with eastern connections.

The short interest in corn and oats was cut down materially yesterday. Elevator people are buying No. 2 and No. 3 grades of corn to get the cars to handle them to fill their shipments to the east and at the same time accumulate a supply. There are indications contract corn will be delivered on July sales.

A New York message said foreigners who have been absent from the wheat market are inquiring for wheat and rye.

Millers long on wheat bought from the Grain corporation, shipment of which has been delayed are trying to hedge it by sales for September delivery at Baltimore.

"In these days of constant uncertainties, conservatism should guide every action in the grain markets," said W. C. Weigand, with Simons, Day & Co. "Caution was never more advisable; high prices make the application of caution doubly valuable. It is a good rule and a good policy to follow."

Primary receipts of wheat from June 1, 1919, to date aggregate 400,076,000 bu, or about 35,000,000 bu less than last year. Receipts of corn since Nov. 1 are 150,845,000 bu, against 134,218,000 bu last year, and oats since Aug. 1 are 188,593,000 bu, against 277,157,000 bu last year.

Shipping orders absorbed half the day's receipts of hogs, which forced better grades 15@25c higher, several loads making $16.15, or within 5c of the week's top and 30c above the previous Saturday.

Owing to the large number of poor to fair packing hogs carried over from earlier in the week this class sold little, if any, higher than Friday, the Armour mixed drove costing $14.33. The general average was $14.95.

The larger number of "big heavy" packing sows secured this week caused an increase in the estimated average weight of hogs, which stood at 238 lbs, against 236 lbs the previous week and a year ago.

Closing cattle trade was highest of the week, with most offerings 50c@$1.00 higher than earlier in the week. With continued moderate receipts traders are expecting best beef steers to go still higher. The week's top was $17.25.

Practically all the 5,000 sheep received Saturday were consigned direct to packers. Closing trade was strong, with the general tendency higher.

Receipts for Monday are estimated at 20,000 cattle, 40,000 hogs and 15,000 sheep, against 22,430 cattle, 54,535 hogs and 24,160 sheep, corresponding Monday a year ago. Next week's estimated receipts 51,000 cattle, 160,000 hogs, and 55,000 sheep.

Various estimates placed next Monday's probable hog receipts at 35,000 to 47,000. W. S. Nicholson marked 47,000, Edward Morris and P. R. Burrows 45,000, E. R. Gentry 43,000, G. M. Nichols and F. W. Waddell 42,000, H. H. Moore 40,000 and Felix Gehrmann 35,000.

NEW YORK, June 26.—EG

RESERVE BANKS SHOW EASING OF CREDIT IS SLOW

That the credit stringency throughout the country is only slightly less severe and that only a very gradual relaxation may be expected is evidenced in the weekly bank statements issued yesterday. The reports of the federal reserve banks showed that the improvement of the preceding week was merely temporary, the advantage gained being almost entirely lost. Loans again mounted and the reserve position was less favorable.

The New York federal reserve bank statement showed that the member banks, which in the preceding week had reduced their borrowings by $111,837,000, increased them last week by $69,746,000, or more than half; while other federal reserve banks, which reduced $22,461,000 a week ago, increased last week by $24,000. The government cut down its borrowings by $15,781,000, against the previous week's increase of $56,304,000; while the volume of bills bought by the bank increased $2,531,000.

Offset Is Net Result.

Thus on the whole account, there was a standoff. The week before the bank had reduced its total loans by $75,178,000, but last week it increased them by $70,726,000, so that all improvement was lost and the loan account was higher by $4,548,000 than a fortnight ago. Total loans showed an increase of $93,375,000, and as a consequence the member banks' reserve account increased $29,856,000. Total gold reserves declined $33,434,000, deposits increased $29,856,000, and circulation showed a further increase of $4,000,000.

The ratio of reserves to deposit and note liabilities combined fell to 39.2 from 43.5 per cent in the preceding week, and the ratio of reserves to net deposits, after deducting 40 per cent gold reserve against note circulation, fell to 38.3 from 43.7 per cent in the preceding week.

Deposits Here Decline.

A considerable decline in deposits, together with an increase in loans, caused the statement of the Chicago federal reserve bank to make a less favorable showing. The bank reverted to its former status of borrower from other federal reserve banks, such indebtedness, which had been wiped out in the preceding week, again mounting to $24,950,000.

The changes in the items of loans and deposits more than nullified the favorable showing of the preceding week. Loans increased $12,518,518, represented entirely by an increase of $29,216,806 in loans on commercial bills, whereas loans secured by government obligations declined $16,698,288. Despite the increase in loans, the reserve account of the member banks declined $8,337,141. Total deposits declined $26,329,887, government deposits dropping $8,167,910. Note circulation declined $451,755.

Gold reserves increased $5,234,839, and this factor helped the reserve position, although it still was less favorable than in the preceding week. The ratio of reserves to net deposit and note liabilities combined declined to 39.96 from 40.1 per cent in the preceding week, and the ratio of reserves to note circulation, after setting aside 35 per cent against net deposit liabilities, fell to 42.11 from 42.14 per cent in the preceding week.

New York Showing Better.

The statement of the New York clearing house banks made a considerably better showing, but this was largely the result of increased borrowings at the federal reserve bank. The excess reserve increased $31,905,250, wiping out the deficit of $3,847,970 incurred in the preceding week, and now standing at $28,057,280. This increase was largely the result of an increase of $23,721,000 in the reserve account of the member banks at the reserve bank. Net demand deposits declined $60,195,000 and time deposits receded $976,000. Loans increased $3,121,000. Circulation declined $164,000.

ON THE BROAD

DORT

Quality Goes Clear Through

Mark Closely These Fine Car Features

Stop for a moment and think how often you hear the name Dort these days.

You hear this story of Dort economy, and that story of Dort power.

You hear of its long and loyal performance. You hear of its unusual freedom from need of attention.

Constantly you are hearing good things about the Dort.

Back of it all is the high mechanical excellence of the Dort.

In every part, every feature, every detail, you find sound, simple, clean design.

The Dort motor—the heart of the car—is a high efficiency engine.

It is built on the small bore, long stroke principle.

So you get vigorous power, together with unusual fuel economy.

It has the "pep" and "drive" to it that you like in a car.

Yet it's simple. When adjustment is desirable you can service the car yourself easily and inexpensively.

Another point! The Dort crankshaft. It weighs 47 pounds. That's real weight, mind you.

But see what it does. It reduces vibration, makes for smooth power flow, easy riding, and insures longer life to the motor.

You're interested in the springs, of course. Because you like comfort.

Take the Dort front spring. It is the semi-elliptical type of unusual length—37½ inches—and 2 inches wide.

Our word for it—that size and length are unusual.

But Dort comfort is unusual, too. Just watch a Dort go over a rough road. See how it flattens the bumps and straightens out the swings.

Your double exhaust on the Dort Motor shows under test that it adds 12% horsepower to the already powerful motor.

Further, it eliminates back pressure and congestion.

Especially should you observe the Dort cooling system.

The water jackets have 2½ gallons capacity.

There is complete circulation around the valves.

There is a three-quarter inch water space in the jackets and over cylinder explosion chamber.

Your Dort keeps cool even in hard duty.

Then examine the Dort brakes. Big, powerful brake drums, 12 inches in diameter, with a 1¾-inch face. Equalizers, too.

Note the husky Dort frame. Looks as if it were made for a much larger car.

This solid frame means that road-pounding and travel-shocks won't weaken the car.

A light frame will soon become twisted and distorted.

But the Dort frame won't. It is like the rest of the car—built over-good.

Every dollar of the Dort price buys real, honest value.

It's a sound investment. Drop into the nearest dealer and see your Dort.

With every Dort goes Geyler service.

A Tale of the Louisiana Swamps and "Africa in a Thousand Strange Forms"

IT was unmixed chance that recalled, at the only junction possible with my passage north, the melancholy fact that Abner Shapley was living in Louisiana. This was depressing both because sickness had forced him to move away from the Quaker community in Pennsylvania, where he was rooted by every association and belief, and for the reason that in the south Abner must be supremely out of keeping with the modes of life and thought. One of the veiled rapid decisions that defy common sense carried me, by a change of trains very much for the worse, in a rambling manner through the dark toward Varney, Shapley's forced place of retreat, while I found entertainment in the thought of him living in a Parish.

I had telegraphed, and when, at last, Varney was reached Abner was waiting on the station platform in the clear thin light of early morning. It was evident, however, that physically Louisiana had proved beneficial—he was quite fat again, and his face, boyish and placid at fifty, had the bright glow of a summer apple. In his plain clothes, without buttons, his rotundity and color, he was even a greater contrast to the life about him than I had expected. The native whites at the station were rather thin than not, sallow with black eyes somnolent or momentarily stirred by a glittering sultry vision; while Abner, whose eyes were calmly blue, preserved the crispness of frost in his voice and movements.

"This was very kind of thee," he said, my heavy bag in his strong grasp. "With thy valise it would be better to take a hack. Ordinarily I walk."

But this information was needless. I knew Abner, I knew my own town, and I could see the dejection that settled over him at the thought of paying the driver. We rattled, in a decrepit single phaeton, through the ugliest streets imaginable, past a gloomy square with dark trees and broken iron benches, along a raw wide chasm that held a yellow river perhaps fifty feet below, out over a road between leaden gray fields to a crossing with a closely wooded stream and a number of small houses, one of which was spectacular in fresh, orderly paint.

"Here we are," he announced cheerfully, recovering from a small disbursement; "and Lucy, I can see, has breakfast for us."

The bare, contracted hall and sparely furnished room to which he conducted me were immaculately, meticulously clean, and, in answer to my surprise at his servant's efficiency, he admitted in a rueful tone that he had had to wash the house himself. "Although she is improving every day," he continued earnestly, at the breakfast table. "If the negro is shiftless, it's because he sees shiftlessness everywhere. The whites——" he hesitated and sighed. "Yet warmer hearts don't exist. Really they have been a lesson to me in humanity. At the same time thee must realize I can't approve of them. They have passionate evil humors, and hardly regard it a sin to take fellow lives. The Lord will not hold them guiltless. But their treatment of the negro!" His lips tightened and his blue northern gaze was frigid.

Lucy, I saw, scarcely ever withdrew a wondering speculation from her employer. She was absolutely black, with a flattened African countenance, while her young body was a solid monument to nature's perfected intention. Her dress included such striking and incongruous articles as a battered soft gray masculine hat and heelless red morocco slippers that dragged over the floor as she waited on the table in an abrupt, slovenly manner and replied to Abner in a tone not entirely innocent of impertinence.

This, however, was inevitable, the result of a shared misconception; but equally I knew there would be very little actual imposition on a celebrated Quaker frugality. "Take this girl, Lucy," Abner Shapley began appositely, then interrupted himself, "I'd thank thee not to smoke. Now, Lucy—she is entirely the result of example. If I may say so without undue pride, I comprehend her thoroughly. But indeed that is not difficult; she is as simple and transparent as a child——"

"Or a savage," I added.

Abner was at once opposed to me. "That is a wicked thought," he asserted. "I had expected more enlightenment from the son of thy father. Lucy is a daughter of God. The color of her skin is nothing but a provision of nature to protect the body from tropical suns. Her soul is all that should concern us, and I have found it wonderfully responsive to patience and grace.

"The negro is admittedly religious, perhaps too impressionable; but for that very reason easier to bring into the way of righteousness." He became very grave. "Friend, my affliction and journeying here were a mission. What, in my blindness, I lamented was a provision of the Almighty." Abner gazed at me with the steadiness of conviction, of faith, that is the greatest good procurable on earth. "I am to fetch some holiness to the negroes of this place."

My long admiration, even affection, for him was shadowed by a swift doubt, and the desire to uphold his faith led me to the verge of brutal frankness. "You mustn't hope for much," I told him. "Helping the negro is not so simple as you think. It will be done, of course, but it's a problem for science and not sentiment."

He regarded me with a placid pity, and in his next words made it appear that I was in danger of being victimized by current skepticisms. "Such science," he corrected me, "is but a trace of the wisdom of the Lord. As I said before, I have been sent here. What I can accomplish is small, if anything heavenly is small, and I have begun with Lucy. A negro lives down the road. Their moral sense," he admitted, "is deplorable; many of the births are out of wedlock. However, I am encouraging Lucy and Zachary—he's called Zebra, but I couldn't support that—to live differently. At first they had no self respect and I allowed them to sit in my front room." I demanded:

"What do your neighbors say?"

"It doesn't concern them," he answered stubbornly. "True, they have remonstrated, and the rougher element were even threatening; but our Father's ways are not at the beck and call of men." He rose serenely. "Shall we go out on the porch; an air seems to be stirring."

Following his full neat back I was suddenly overwhelmed by the somber strangeness of the land to which the accident of sickness, interpreted by Abner as the will of God, had carried him.

II.

It was late March and already, through the day, oppressive in a diffused, enervating sunlight. The sandy rutted road before the house lay parallel to the stream choked with foliage; the somber water oaks folded in trailing gray shawls of Spanish moss, the forbidding undergrowth, the pale spongy cypress with bared roots, snakelike in the gumbo mud, made a tragic contrast to the remem-

For The Hair and Complexion

So Refreshing and Healthful

KIRK'S JAP ROSE SOAP

Golden Transparent

JUST imagine feeling wonderfully rested and refreshed after shampooing your own hair. Try to imagine such a shampoo with no wearisome rubbing and rubbing to raise even a thin lather, and no rinsing and rinsing over and over till your back is nearly broken and your hair still stringy and sticky from the undissolved soap.

You can easily realize such an imagination if you use JAP ROSE soap. Just dip the big, golden-transparent cake in any kind of water—even when cold. A few light rubs on your moistened hair, and presto—almost like magic come flock upon flock of the prettiest little elfish, pearly bubbles. How they do go after the dust and oil in the hair, and right down to the skin pores of the scalp. And then the rinsing—how easy it is. A dash or two of water or a brief swish of the spray—and all the bubbles are gone, everyone, while the hair and scalp are thoroughly clean—of soap as well as grime.

So pure are the oils in JAP ROSE soap, and so scientifically blended with c. p. glycerine are they, that besides its wonderful cleansing powers, JAP ROSE is the most healthful, hygienic soap that it's possible to make. It not only cleanses but beautifies, leaving a smooth, tender glow to the complexion, and the hair soft and fluffy.

Roses in the cheeks, fluffiness in the hair, fragrant cleanliness everywhere — that's JAP ROSE.

You'll Like It!

bered open green hills, the bright maples and hollows flushed with coral peach blossoms, white with the drifting petals of cherry trees, of Abner Shapley's home.

Some black children, half naked, their eyeballs startlingly white, were playing with soft shouts by the road, and my companion indicated them benevolently. "Who could keep from liking them?" he demanded. It would be difficult, certainly, to quarrel with him there; the children were appealing, alert, and innocent and happy. But their gayety was abruptly extinguished by a negro who advanced ponderously with the assistance of a thick carved stick.

He was amazingly fat, a pendulous body in a precariously strained garb, with a drooping face the color of wood ashes. It was difficult to see his eyes—the merest bloodshot glimmer, his lips, like stale meat, rolled with a soundless mutter at his arduous progress, while he breathed in painfully sharp explosive breaths.

Abner leaned forward and called: "Homer Tybo, I trust to find thee better today." The swaying bulk paused and a resonant, unctuous, deferential voice replied that Homer Tybo was barely able to walk. The misery was powerful bad. Again addressed to his progress, he lifted a foot, placed it ahead of the other, and painfully resumed his course.

"That unfortunate creature," Abner told me, "is regarded with a superstitious and wicked awe. Not only by the negroes. I have heard presumably intelligent whites declare that he is a . . . some Godless nonsense I can't remember. It is better, thee recalls, to have a millstone hung about the neck than to offend——" he pointed toward the children once more engaged in eager play. "They are all, young and old, like that," he concluded; "of such is not the kingdom made?"

The heat became almost palpable like a swimming of the sight; the passersby were infrequent, noiseless in the muffling sand, and an insidious drowsiness enveloped me from which I was roused by the appearance, from the back of the house, of a small colored man whose pigmentation was faintly streaked by a trace of other blood. He was raggedly clad and wore, fastened by a shining brass button, a dingy starched collar unattached to any shirt. His manner expressed a wistful humility with, at the same time, shrewdly appraising glances, and a subconscious sense of opportune dramatic values.

"Morning, gentlemen," he saluted us. "This is a powerful fine day for your good healths."

"Good morning, Zachary," Abner replied.

A deprecating smile was turned to me with the explanation, "My name's Zebra, that's what it is, but Zebra's not high-toney enough for the Gen'ral."

"I've told you before not to give me a military title," the other, annoyed, instructed him. "I am Abner Shapley."

Zebra—privately I liked this better than Zachary—was painfully disconcerted. He wrinkled a troubled forehead, and, from a largely inarticulate murmuring, I gathered that he had no intention of inviting disaster by informally naming a white gentleman. After profound study, a stumbling in the obfuscation of his mind, he triumphantly suggested the alternative of Judge. This, with a sigh, Abner allowed. Then Zebra, immensely cheered, after a politely veiled inspection of my clothes, proposed a responsibility for my appearance.

"The Judge," he continued, with tremendous emphasis, "he don't ride to no account at all, and your shoes will just have to be brushed up all the time." That was self-evident, and I engaged him at once for my short stay at Varney.

"I come around," Zebra explained, "to give that Lucy any lift; but maybe you got something for me right now: you might have a whole lot of shoes——"

When he learned that I hadn't he made his bow and, putting on his hat, left in the direction of the kitchen. "Men," Abner declared, "are made alike in the image of God. I wish I could lead them away from these expressions of worldly servitude." He regarded me with pursed lips. "It might be well to keep an eye on Zachary and your things: negroes have almost no idea of property. Some articles of mine disappeared and I was obliged to get locks. My large red bandanas——"

His optimism, I reflected, in regard to his familiar brilliant handkerchiefs, reached absurdity. And, going up to my room for white flannels, I found Lucy engaged in putting sheets on the bed. I opened a bag—delaying until she was through—and, laying out what I needed, I secured the rest with a key. I could see her, in the small looking glass of the bureau, and she made a childish face at me that had entirely vanished when I turned. Purely on Abner's account, after the formal transference of a dollar, I encouraged her in the expression of her general state of being, and she announced a large dissatisfaction.

Abner, it appeared, was difficult if not impossible to please. It was evident that she had looked, from a gentleman, for notable attitude and had been disappointed. Then she giggled at his eccentricities, "Sitting in the parlor with that skinny yellow nigger! Ruinate him something terrible. He wants us to get married," she added, rolling her eyes at Abner's extraordinary interest in such trivalities.

"Mr. Shapley's powerful religious."

Her character, I thought, was entirely evident to me. Abner Shapley's fanaticism—it was that, a bitter flame, for all his placidity—had, of course, misled him. He saw the negro as a duty, his message, as beings amenable to Christian influence, capable of taking permanently the shape of virtue; whereas, they were yet, in the light of western civilization, simply unmoral beings of a totally different racial heritage betrayed into an alien and fatal captivity.

This I explained to an acquaintance of Abner's, calling hospitably to welcome me to Varney. He was the Rev. Peter Kaner, a Methodist minister with, I realized at once, a big, prosperous church and wide influence. There was every reason why this should be so: he combined to a remarkable degree the opposites of a solemn calling and a penetrating humorous comprehension of reality. He listened with his mobile, smooth-shaven face closely attentive to my assertion that, together with him, I understood the negro.

"Perhaps you do," he said; "indeed, it is possible that you may. I should certainly be delighted. But I don't," his voice was positive and, for a moment, gave me the uncomfortable feeling of having made a pretentious, ill-founded statement. Yet, I privately thought, the south had made a botch of the colored problem; they had hopelessly involved it in a hundred unfortunate aspects. "I'll take you around with me," Kaner proceeded, "and show you our country. A measure of prosperity has come to us with three hundred dollar cotton. The is the region of the genuine long staple."

A kind man, Abner pronounced, when the visitor had gone, but, like the rest, a shade benighted, unenlightened, toward the black brother. With this I was able to concur. "They see things," he specified, "that don't actually exist, and make the negro out to be a sort of scarecrow. It's time for the evening prayer."

He rose and called Lucy. Kneeling with Abner Shapley and the girl in the front room, I couldn't but be impressed by the beauty, the power, of the invocation sounding about Lucy's devout position and responsive ardor.

III.

The following day, wabbling over a characteristic road with Kaner in his automobile—the light car necessary in central Louisiana—I at last asked a question that had lurked apprehensively among my thoughts since I had been in Varney with Abner Shapley. My companion turned an injured expression toward me that immediately changed to the greatest beneficent good humor.

"Why, bless your innocent heart," he cried, "what have you been reading about us! We're not all night riders. I like Shapley very well; he's made a lot of friends. It only needs a look to see his quality. Of course, he is different, but," Kaner smiled, "that doesn't always tell against him. One or two little deals have been decidedly to his advantage. Shrewd. He's a member of the Varney Board of Trade and we're thinking how to get him into the Rotary club.

"If a local man held his views it would be another thing, or if he upset the blacks—we couldn't allow that." Suddenly he became uncommunicative. "But," he quickly grew cheerful again, "nothing of the kind has happened. The negroes respect him, while I imagine they take advantage of his—well, shall we say hopefulness?"

The country through which we were progressing lay flat, unrelieved, like the circular unvaried horizon of the sea. It was gray and without grass, and had the appearance of intolerable heat, as though it were a furnace floor from which the fires had been lately drawn. There were no trees except the secretive dark oaks about the plantation houses, suffocated in moss, and the low-lying cypress brakes of the illimitable swamps. Occasionally a bayou, tideless and deep, cut through the sandy monotony like a prolongation of the viscid morasses. The ground seemed absolutely dead, incapable of sustaining any life; the dried stems of the cotton plants looked as though they had been arbitrarily stuck in as they were, and the flowers, gorgeous in color, exactly resembled paper.

"These swamps," Kaner told me, "are remarkable. I have been in them fishing or just exploring. You would be lost, probably dead, by night. A hundred yards and you'd be helpless. Some of the negroes know them—there are dreadful stories of the old days, rumors still. I tell you, brother, if you knew the negro you wouldn't be so easy-minded about him."

We were passing by what I could see was a great plantation, the stark fields were only lost in far vapors, and under open sheds the cotton was heaped in bursting bales. The negroes, the field hands, were gathered in supine, grotesque attitudes about their primitive cabins. Mostly black their bodies gleamed through scant brilliant or sordid rags; and they followed our movement with faces empty of any expression but a dull curiosity. All at once my comfortable sense of understanding was lost in the apprehension of a mystery—the dignity of an enigma—withholding the truth: the women with babies at great breasts like sooty black bags, shriveled old men with patches of white wool adhering to their dried skulls, gigantic young males like sable Olympians with broken features, oppressed me not merely as tragic aliens, but with a feeling of imminence.

"Perhaps you can tell me this," Kaner proceeded, adding, to my discomfort, "Why won't a negro pick the last corner of a cotton field?" He paused, but I could only reflect his interrogation. The Rev. Mr. Kaner didn't know. "Why does he leave part of a corn row? Why won't he cut down a tree struck by lightning?" Suddenly he stopped the car by the most respectable black I had yet seen, a man neatly dressed, with steel bowed spectacles. "Sumpter," the minister said cheerfully, "here's a gentleman way from the north who wants to know how things are down in Louisiana, and I'd like you to tell him what you've got in your left shoe."

A pleasant smile, wreathing the countenance before us, gave place to utter seriousness. "There ain't nobody ignorant 'bout that," he asserted. "I just got a pinch of snake dus'." Kaner added, "And your buzzard's feather—you haven't gone and lost it?" A lively concern invaded Sumpter, only dispelled when he located, hidden in his hat, a moldy and rumpled feather.

Farther on my companion interrogated me with raised eyebrows. "Sumpter," he said, "is one of the pillars of the church. That snake dust is to make him invisible, and, with the buzzard's feather, he thinks no law or posse can catch him. But there are things I couldn't ask him, even if it would be of any use. You can't learn a scrap of the negro's secrets. Take the grapevine telephone—if a murder is committed twenty miles one side of Varney and the sheriff, following a clew, drives hard twenty miles in the other direction and inquires of the negroes, they will know already—word will have been 'sont' them to cabins back of nowhere."

We were again in the town, by the chasm of the river; precariously swaying narrow steps led giddily down to the cypress-stained water, and on the left the courthouse was set in the shadow of the hollow square of oaks. The gloomy light swimming in the inclosure created the fantastic illusion of a gigantic lynched negro slowly twisting and untwisting at the end of a long rope; and I was relieved to be back in the familiar presence of Abner Shapley, seated with him at a frugal table in his bare, scrubbed house.

Lucy put the coffee pot down noisily; as she moved about her red slippers flip-flapped on the boards, her stained felt hat was pulled over an amazing complication of puffed, crinkled hair.

The supper was miserable, a plate of fried tomatoes uneatable, and Abner was plainly disconcerted by the waste. He addressed a homily to the servant which, with a sullen, lowered countenance, she heard standing by the kitchen door. The conviction that had disturbed me earlier, of a potent secret hidden in the negro's heart, returned; but I was conscious of a growing irritation at what I called my gullible disposition—all that I felt was no more than a reflection of the local superstition. The south was simply benighted about its human charge.

But the next morning Lucy was entirely cheerful, even communicative. Abner, it appeared, had advanced the plans for her marriage, Zebra had procured a suit of clothes, almost new, and the ceremony was to be held here, in a white folks' house, with a white minister. Lucy reckoned there'd be some mighty grand presents—which, she added, she'd take good care didn't reach that useless pale nigger. Such being her description of Zebra. This he practically repeated, standing by the roadside; whatever it might have occurred to me to give them would be safest with himself. You couldn't trust that Lucy; she was said to be luny. I demanded exactly what, in such a connection, luny meant; but he absolutely refused to add another word and hurried away as if he had committed a dangerous indiscretion.

IV.

Standing in Abner Shapley's swept front room with Zebra uneasily at her side, Lucy presented a remarkable combination of the exceptional and the commonplace in garb; the red morocco slippers were still in evidence, but there were now transparent white fiber silk stockings; her skirt, unevenly hitched, I recognized; but the soft hat was gone and her hair gathered into three masses like the close elastic filling of a mattress that gave her charcoal black face and dull, thick lips a savagely African appedrance. A heavy string of variegated glass beads was wound twice around her throat and large imitation pearls were fastened to her ears. A nose ring, I reflected, would have been in no way out of place.

The evident fact about Zebra was that beyond any doubt he was frightened; his face was more gray than yellow. The suit—almost new—was too large for him, and on feet incumbered with tremendous half shoes of a forgotton pattern the trousers fell in awkward folds. The coat sleeves were so long that his hands, but for the extreme finger tips, were swallowed; while on his thin neck the pretentious collar still rode unconnected with the safety, the anchorage, of a shirt.

The Rev. Mr. Kaner, facing them, dropped a cheerfully bantering manner and was instantly grave in the pronouncement of the grave words of the marriage service:

"Dearly beloved, we are gathered together in the sight of God to join . . . holy bonds of matrimony . . . an honorable estate . . ."

Lucy followed him with an impressed attention, but I doubt if her companion heard a word. The dread deepened perceptibly, his shoulders twitched and his feet shuffled, he glanced about despairingly in search of a possibility of escape; and he inevitably entangled the business of the ring. The woman to whom he was being joined—for better or worse—gave him an infuriated shove together with a muttered promise of ill immediately to follow . . . and the ceremony was over.

Abner and I fixed our names to the wedding certificate and the former led us to the dining room, where there were cakes and lemonade. Here, however, Kaner rather hastily withdrew. There was no question of a honeymoon, and Lucy, discovering something burning on the stove, vanished, while Zebra reckoned, in tones both weary and at a loss, that he'd better be getting along. He reckoned that, with that paper bearing our names, he had been married very tightly. Abner called his attention to the neglected supposition that God and not man had joined Lucy and himself; and uninterestedly he reckoned, a third time, that this was a fact.

Abner Shapley, in the full formality of Quaker garb, wore a pepper and salt coat with tails which he parted carefully upon occupying a chair on the porch. Beyond, the trees, choked with moss, the naked roots of the cypresses, the glimpse of coppery water, were utterly still; the sky was empty except for the perpetually wheeling buzzards. "I suppose," Abner said, "at home thy plowing has commenced and the robins have arrived." His expression, as always, was placid, the rosy countenance of a boy; but I recognized that he was saturated with nostalgia

"These are a kind people," he repeated; "kind, but—but improvident and quick tempered. They are not my people and mine are not theirs." He sighed. "Everything is as God wills, and my duty has been made clear. Thee knows it is no longer my lung that keeps me here, but the unhappy negro. I must stay and extend His influence."

"How much do you think it was assisted by this marriage?" I asked directly.

"I can see the deplorable spirit that has entered thee," he replied gently. "Thy faith is weak."

Recalling my feeling of the negro strangeness, I repeated Kaner's conviction that we knew nothing, practically, of the black race. Abner smiled and forced my conviction toward his rather than to the support of the local opinion. "They are so mysterious about it," I complained, "and insinuate extraordinary things, but there's no substance to the hints and stories. It's all high-colored nonsense."

The dusk fell swiftly, with an impenetrable silence emphasized by the distant quavering of an owl. For a moment from down the

THE TEENIE WEENIES

THE LADY OF FASHION HAS AN ADVENTURE WITH A PINCHING-BUG.

BY WM DONAHEY.

IT was very early in the morning, and a big robin sat on a bush peering at a tiny column of smoke which curled up from beneath a huge fern. The robin stared for some time out of one round eye and then, not being sure that he had seen correctly, he turned his head and blinked his other eye at the smoke.

"Well, by the big fat grub-worm!" he exclaimed, as he hopped onto the ground for a better view, "this is a most peculiar thing!"

In three hops the robin stood on a little rise of ground, where he was able to peer under the fern, and his beak opened in wide astonishment at the sight he saw.

"Well, strip my wings, if it isn't the Teenie Weenies!" exclaimed the bird.

"Right you are!" answered the Cook, who was boiling a thimbleful of cocoa over a tiny fire.

"What in the name of goodness are you doing here?" asked the robin.

"I'm just getting breakfast," said the Cook, as he stirred the cocoa. "We have spent the night here and we're on our way over to the big swamp to camp for a few weeks."

"Will you have a bite to eat with us?" asked the General, who was standing near.

"No, thank you," answered the bird. "I'm on my way over to a garden nearby where I can find some really fine worms. I'm just as much obliged," and hopping onto a bush he spread his wings and flew away.

The Teenie Weenies soon ate a hearty breakfast of hot rice cakes and cocoa, and while Gogo and the Cook washed the dishes the rest of the little folks began breaking camp. They took down the tiny tents, folded up their blankets and loaded them into their little wagons. The Cowboy and the Turk brought up six mice which were soon harnessed and hitched to the three wagons, while the Policeman and Paddy Pinn stamped out the last spark of the camp fire.

When all was ready the General gave the order to march, and the little caravan set out with the Cowboy and the Indian walking ahead, their tiny guns over their shoulders and their eyes on a sharp lookout for toads and dangerous bugs. All morning the Teenie Weenies trudged along, and at noon they stopped beside a cool spring of water where they ate three cold navy beans which the Cook had prepared for their lunch.

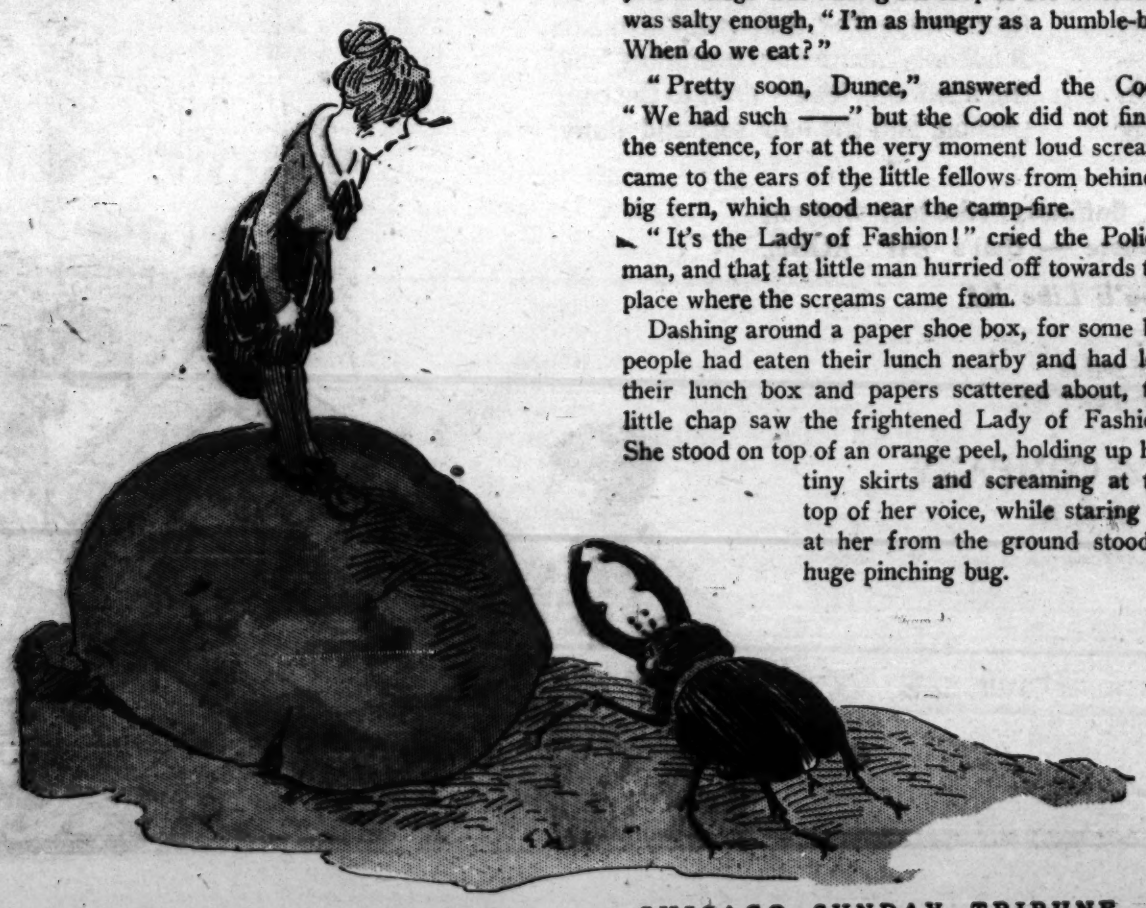
After a short rest the little folks took up the march once more and by 4 o'clock in the afternoon they were mighty tired, so the General gave the order to stop for the night. In a very short time the mice had been unhitched, the tents puts up, and the tiny blankets hung out to air. The Cook soon had a fire going and a thimbleful of water boiling over it. He threw half a frog ham and ten grains of rice into the thimble, which presently cooked into a delicious soup.

"S-s-s-s-say," cried the Dunce, who came up just as Gogo was tasting the soup to see whether it was salty enough, "I'm as hungry as a bumble-bee. When do we eat?"

"Pretty soon, Dunce," answered the Cook. "We had such ——" but the Cook did not finish the sentence, for at the very moment loud screams came to the ears of the little fellows from behind a big fern, which stood near the camp-fire.

"It's the Lady of Fashion!" cried the Policeman, and that fat little man hurried off towards the place where the screams came from.

Dashing around a paper shoe box, for some big people had eaten their lunch nearby and had left their lunch box and papers scattered about, the little chap saw the frightened Lady of Fashion. She stood on top of an orange peel, holding up her tiny skirts and screaming at the top of her voice, while staring up at her from the ground stood a huge pinching bug.



TEENIE WEENIE DOLL.

The Teenie Weenie doll can be colored by yourself this week. The Policeman's uniform and hat should be blue, the buttons and mustache yellow, and the face pink.

The Policeman picked up an olive seed which lay on the ground and threw it at the bug with all his might. The seed struck the bug on the head and he lost no time in scurrying off into the tall grass.

The poor little Lady of Fashion promptly fainted and rolled off the orange peel onto the ground.

Catching up a handful of dew from a dandelion leaf the Policeman dashed it into the little lady's face and she promptly opened her eyes.

"Oh, dear, save me!" cried the Lady of Fashion, throwing her arms about the Policeman.

"It's all right," smiled the Policeman. "The bug is gone, he won't hurt you."

The Policeman quickly led the little lady back to the camp, where she soon felt none the worse for her experience.

"I thought I'd take a little walk before supper," she said, "and I was strolling along when I saw that awful bug coming towards me. I leaped up on the orange peel and began to scream and then the Policeman came and I—I—"

"Fainted," smiled the Policeman.

"Y-e-s," answered the little lady, blushing deeply. "Wasn't that foolish? But I was, oh, so frightened!"

"I just wish I'd have been there and I'd have just kicked that bug into the middle of tomorrow," cried Tess Bone.

"Well, supper is ready," announced the Cook, and the little people were soon seated around the camp fire eating the delicious soup out of tiny bowls made from plum seeds.

bered open green hills, the bright maples and hollows flushed with coral peach blossoms, white with the drifting petals of cherry trees, of Abner Shapley's home.

Some black children, half naked, their eyeballs startlingly white, were playing with soft shouts by the road, and my companion indicated them benevolently. "Who could keep from liking them?" he demanded. It

"These swamps," Kaner told me, "are remarkable. I have been in them fishing or just exploring. You would be lost, probably dead, by night. A hundred yards and you'd be helpless. Some of the negroes know them—there are dreadful stories of the old days, rumors still. I tell you, brother, if you

Abner, it appeared, was difficult if not impossible to please. It was evident that she had looked, from a Gentleman, for notable attitude and had been disappointed. Then she fizzled at his eccentricities. "Sitting in road a song—but in reality it was a chant—sounded, a high, sexless wail dying away in a prolonged minor note of hopeless resignation. There was a stir in the gloom and Zebra approached, his hat respectfully removed. Abner had temporarily gone in, and, standing troubled below the porch, the other asked me if I had any pills for a low down catch in the inwards. Naturally I hadn't, and advised him to see a doctor. But he had thought I might have something, a powerful concoction, from the unknown north. Actually what he had hoped for was an amulet, a charm. The negroes, Kaner told me, carried such things—conjure bags of red flannel with absurd jumbled contents.

He was being done bad, Zachary was convinced of that; and, lowering his voice, he asked me if it were possible to cure one person by giving medicine to another. But he retreated, his courage evidently failing, as my questioning advanced. He had just wanted to know, not for any special reason. Zebra said again, however, that Lucy was luny; when the moon came out she was no account. He added, with an amazing flare of passionate feeling, that if she fiddled with him he would bust her head down on her ears—he'd moon her.

There was, I noticed, a pallid veil of moonlight widening as he spoke; and vaguely the darkness was changing into an immaterial vision of elusive reaches and blurred forms. The owl cried again and Zebra hung about the porch, reluctant to go to his bride. He progressed to another slowly evolved idea, and asked if I would take him away with me;

He was admirably civil and, with a removed hat, hoped that he found me in better health than he experienced. His misery was powerful sharp, yes sir. Zebra's eyes, I saw, were closed; he was, I thought, without a vestige of attention; and then it seemed to me that his utter listless dejection had changed into a strained rigidity. Homer Tybo addressed Lucy as sister, and it developed that he had come to remonstrate with her—but in a tone of the most Christian forbearance—about a small delinquency in her contribution to a sanctified cause. This was brought out publicly. Lucy made no reply other than a flutter of her eyes, and, at her invitation, Elder Tybo raised his sagging body up the steps and inside.

I repeated to the Rev. Mr. Kaner what I could remember of Zebra's tentative demands and described his subsequent sorry condition. We were once more in his car, bound to Bayou Tête Blanche, the farthest excursion we had undertaken, and the minister's face grew shadowed and then grim as I proceeded.

"No one can reach them!" he cried to a dark, immobile company of pines. "After all these years I am as ignorant as—as your Quaker friend. I know that they brought Africa here, through the West Indies, in a thousand strange forms. I have heard occasional words.

"What Zebra asked you about treating one person for the sickness of another goes into the heart of voodoo; it is concerned with the god of injury, Elecua. Then there is Olloram, Babagueye. But, more than whispered names——" He made a helpless gesture. "The belief of Elecua, that good can only come from harm to another, is mixed up with a Cuban tree, ceiba. Yet if Zebra has been made a victim of such hellish practices, if Lucy is a Brujo, what can we do?

"When you question them they stare at you stupidly and either say nothing or go off mad. At times late in the summer I have driven up quietly to one of their country churches and listened at a window. It would put cold water in your veins, brother."

I saw such a church as he spoke, set in a gray waste meeting the sky at the dreary line of a swamp. Small and raised from the ground on brick piles, the paint was blistered from its boards, a bell hung awry in the cupola, and the windows were closed on a dank interior.

The Rev. Mr. Kaner had some surprising theories which he expressed in his resonant and pleasantly dramatic voice; the north, he proclaimed, fought not to free the negro but to liberate the white blood in him from servitude. He had, he said, seen papers by famous abolitionists proving this. He progressed to mules, which he supported as the most sagacious animals in existence, and seriously assured me of habits not incongruous to the home conduct of grave professors. I gazed hastily at his countenance and found it entirely composed. Things more serious followed—stories of that passion for personally administered retributive justice called in the North by a shorter, ugly term, but here the base, almost, of manhood. There were tales touched with somber dread, of amazingly beautiful quadroons—beautiful, that was, except for their eyes, which resembled the opacity of wet mud. But for hidden traces of bright blue they were as creamily white as gardenias and saturated with a heady and fatal charm.

We reached the objective, the plantation, of our journey and met a cordiality, an utter hospitality of the heart, that delayed our return until the approach of dusk. Driving through the deep, soft roads, the moon, a huge disk of pallid green, rose abruptly on a world of grayness; we were lost, it seemed to me, in an insubstantial region without sounds or reality. Time as well apparently had suspended being, and we went on and on between ghostly fields, by the heavy dampness of cypress brakes and swamps, past the murky sparks of smoking lamps in negro cabins. The moon climbed into the emptiness above and shed an increasing radiance into the vacuity below. I recognized that we were nearing Varney when I was conscious of a sound like the low, pervasive murmur of a gigantic hive of bees.

VI.

It died almost at once, but it was so unusual and charged with a disagreeable potency, like a human breath unexpectedly stirring my scalp from behind, that I turned disturbed to Kaner. He had already stopped the motor and sat listening with an intensity of concentration that scarred his face into deep lines. The droning, hollow and namelessly disquieting, again hung in the air; it was impossible for me to determine the direction from which it came; but my companion, with the clatter of the starting engine, drove on perhaps for another mile.

We were, I knew vaguely, at the edge of the largest swamp of the Parish. It extended, Kaner had told me, for mile upon mile in a poisonous, stagnant tangle, traversed by rare, secret paths, through fevers as palpable as the moss draping the dead limbs of the blanched cypress. Then, as if to justify our course, there was a breath of sound, a mere vibration, like that of a drum rubbed by resinous fingers. Kaner got down from the automobile with a stony face nad narrowed vision. He said:

"I'll ask you to wait where you are."

In reply I promptly followed him to the rutted sand.

He added curtly: "I am going into the swamp in the name of God and his Son, our Redeemer. But there is no need for you to accompany me. Stay out here; you can drive a car. Perhaps you'll have to. No, I am serious. Back there in an hour you might be no more than a rotten log. Or worse, oh, very easily worse."

"You think it's primitive Africa," I replied, "and I'm intensely curious. I'd like to see it, but in the name of anthropology."

Privately I found him a little ridiculous, inflated in manner. He told me the way was tortuous and narrow, if I fell I'd sink in the gumbo, perhaps beyond recovery, while a noise, a breaking branch, could be the signal for incredible disaster.

I urged him, in effect, to lead off; but, in the swamp, my spirits fell. There was an abominable odor of measureless decay; with a step or two I had entered the muck of before history, the slime of an era when men were not—well, men. The path twisted by black, iridescent water, over soft hummocks, defined by a floating moonlight like the shimmer of myriad gauzy insects. Again I heard the faint, uneasy sound; but now its mystery had darkened: it was as if my sensation of a revolting dread below consciousness had been made audible. What I could see of the Rev. Mr. Kaner's firm bearing impressed me with the fact that he was sustained by his faith, an allegiance to a superb vision, but I had no such resource; I was plunged in swamplike fears; there was a choking at my throat that couldn't have been worse were I literally sinking in the mud.

"There's a plateau a little farther on," he told me, cautiously, stopping. "Don't stumble on it. The turn is sharp."

I could see a broader plane of moonlight, an icy radiance touched from below with a warmer flickering radiance, and immediately after the opening was spread behind a matted curtain of wild grapevines—a roughly oval space, two or three hundred feet long, shut in everywhere by the impenetrable night of the swamp.

At first it seemed empty except for the enormous squatting figure of a man over the ruddy embers of a smokeless fire. Immobile, and stripped of most of his clothing, his prodigious back was crudely painted in circles and bands of staring white; then it became evident that his hands, hidden from me, were busy . . . there was an intolerable hoarse whimper, and—as hastily as possible—I turned from a small furry animal, outraged and coughing, lifted into view. At that moment it was borne upon me that the plateau was banked with negroes.

The elusive light defined their features on the darkness as if its magic had created them from the stale vapors of the past. They were motionless, intent and silent, except for the suppressed volume of their labored breathing. While they were like statues carved from the night, they were, as well, charged with a raw hysterical emotion—bound in an ugly abnormal rigidity.

The savagery of the painted figure hideously employed by the embers gained a strange irony from the surrounding inappropriately modern garb. I saw thick shoulders in an electric blue suit with a violent dotted tie and checked cap; there were glimpses of the overalls of field hands, the recognizable clothes of indispensable civilized vocations, the solemn travesty of formal broadcloth. There was the glitter of a heavy watch chain across a light waistcoat and the paste jewelry of tie pins—unsubstantial trifles on the oppressive revelation of a spirit stronger, older, than all the evil and good forces of human society.

Then, with the merest breath of the invisible drum, a momentary shudder of sound, a tense whisper swept about the open, "Changu, Changu." The obese man rose painfully; and the painted mask of his face, skull-like in its whiteness, seemed totally detached from his mountainous flesh. He stood swaying livid and obscene against the blurred fire when advancing toward him from the profound obscurity was the magnificent stark blackness of a woman with her hair woven into a flaring crown of rose-mallow flowers colorless under the moon. She stopped and lifted her arms in an open-in short, he implored me to be a party to his desertion of Lucy.

At that moment Abner reappeared, and, with an assumption of severity, commanded the shadowy, miserable figure to proceed instantly in the direction of his duty.

"I didn't want to marry her nohow," he grumbled.

Abner said curtly: "It was necessary; you were living in a state of sinful adultery."

"What's that?" the other demanded.

And for the first time I heard Abner Shapley descend to the irascible attitude of Louisiana toward the Negro.

"Get around there," he ordered; "I'll make a decent couple of you in spite of the devil."

Zebra fell back startled. "Yes, sir; yes, sir," he returned hastily, vanished into the pale gloom.

"Terrible—their state of neglect," the Quaker proceeded. "Entirely ignorant of morality. But, friend, we mustn't be dismayed. They shall be led out of their long captivity in Egypt, freed not only in body but spirit. Indeed, a little of the latter first"—he closed his lips sharply on what had promised to be a stimulating indiscretion.

V.

There was the most pressing need for the communication of some spirit to Zebra when I saw him in the morning. Seated against the back of the house, in a vaporous sunlight, he was a huddled shape of abject misery. The spent fatalism of his attitude recalled that ability of the negro voluntarily to stop breathing which had been a cause of such loss to the early slave ships. His will, it was evident, had been crushed, obliterated; probably by the conception of an adverse power as fantastically crimson and gilded and horrible as a Juggernaut car.

Zachary was the sorriest possible bridegroom.

He glanced up indifferently, with yellow, suffused eyes, his consciousness, it appeared, hardly pierced by a query, and then returned to his isolation. I could hear Lucy, through the open door to the kitchen, singing the refrain of a hymn about grievous sinners and the Lamb. She appeared in the doorway, untidy, with a slumberous gaze shadowed by the incongruous rim of her hat. Standing above us, still and enigmatic and black, the imposing sweep of her body triumphing over the meanness of its garb, she seemed monumental. Then abruptly she was animated by a sudden motive hidden from me until I heard a slow, dragging step, a strained gasping breathing, and the monstrous negro Abner had called Homer Tybo was at the kitchen steps.

ing gesture that seemed to draw all the earth up to her, and as she stood the light poured over her shining body with the quick liquid silver gleams of water.

I saw this, but with the realization of infinitely more, when the Rev. Mr. Kaner, moving with the extremest slow care, waved me back over the twisting path.

Again—amazingly—in the car he fell into a bitter, silent dejection.

"Of course," I ventured, "we could do nothing. Except, perhaps, like that unhappy cat, in the way of sacrifice."

He made no reply.

"You recognized the woman?" I tried once more.

He spoke, hardly audibly, but not in answer to me.

"Changu, the bestial god, still unchained."

Perversely I thought of the ceremony in Abner Shapley's swept parlor, a place that so entirely resembled its owner's orderly and simple virtues; I heard Kaner's deep, assured tones: "Dearly beloved, we are gathered together in the sight of God——"

This memory gave place to a depression as heavy as the minister's, as profound, but different. It didn't belong specially to what I had seen, but to what it held of me, of Kaner, of every one alive; of all men, it might well be, forever to be born—not what was happening just then in the moonlight of the swamp, but because I was part of it. Inescapably, in a calling drum, it was a part of me. The futile pretense of a separate spiritual eminence and wisdom, my comfortable aloofness, was lost in the realisation that, supremely, there were no negroes and no white men, only an appalling procession of life, burdened with the fetishes of its brutal fears, reaching from the primal littoral to the dry secretiveness of dust.

Abner was seated placidly before his house, and from down the road, from an obscure cabin, came a wailing drift of immeasurably sad song.

"Zachary is very low; I've had a doctor, but it was as good as useless. They have little resistance, it seems, and often die without the slightest apparent cause."

Leaving directly after breakfast, I laid a sum for Lucy beside my plate. The red morocco slippers dragged listlessly over the floor; under the battered gray hat her face was sodden with weariness. Abner Shapley gently respected an attitude that bore so palpably, so decently, the evidences of grief. While to destroy his security with that vision of abysmal savagery, of the vicarious curing by a lustful god of Homer Tybo, was the farthest of every intention from my fundamental dismay.

Jane's Legacy by Eden Phillpotts

JANE COODE was what you might call comfortably poor. She had enough to look on ahead without fretting; but 'twas just enough and no more, so there weren't no call for her to be worrying about it, or troubling her conscience whether she was spending it in a proper manner. She'd got her cottage and a pound a week; and the cottage and her money came from her dead father, for she was his only one and had been a very good daughter to him for fifty years.

In fact, many thought, when her mother died, that Jane, for her father's sake, never took a husband, but devoted herself to him; though others, with a poorer opinion of human nature, reckoned the reason why Jane remained in the spinster state was that no man had ever axed her to change it.

That, of course, was a subject hid between Jane and her Maker; but, anyway, when her father died, at 86, she was an old maid of 65; and two or three years later her great adventure of the legacy befell her.

Little Silver, you must know, was in the manor of Godbold's Leigh, alongside Dartymoor; and the lord of the manor, old Gen Bassett, K. C. B., was a very good Christian man of ancient pattern as be dying out now along of education. The folk liked him and he liked them; but he saw the great changes with a prophetic eye and when he was took, at 75, 'twas said he minded not his going, but almost with his last breath declared that he was satisfied, and praised God, who had called him from the evils to come.

In his will the old general remembered a lot of humble people, and it was very like his nature to surprise small folk who had done him service in times past and been glad to do so. For them called to work at Godbold's Leigh was always well paid for their labor, Sir George holding that the rich should remember their obligations and use their power in a manner becoming.

'Twas said that not less than £19,000 of money was left to the parish under his will, and his son by all accounts didn't feel none too pleased to see hundreds going out to old laborers, and "whips," and gamekeepers, and such like; for no doubt the younger man, though he was near 50 when he came to his own, reckoned what with the death duties and such like, a fair hole had been made in his fortune, large though it was.

However, a will's a will, and in that will, if you please, Jane Coode of Little Silver was down for a thousand pounds! A nine days' wonder, you may say, and none more astonished than Jane. She'd done a good bit of needlework at Godbold's Leigh, being very skillful in that matter, and for five and twenty years, I dare say, she'd sewed there off and on, when the need arose in Lady Bassett's time, and been very well paid for doing it. But since then she'd never been up there, and to see her down for such a dollop of money cause a great deal of excitement and wonder all round.

In fact, her life was changed from that hour, and she became a marked woman. A little, go-by-the-ground creature she was by nature—humble, meek, and kindly. She wore black and went her way, and was well thought upon by her friends and cultivated by her relations. But this great honor and sudden thought of £50 more a year on to her money rather turned Jane's head, for a time, as well it might.

She didn't give herself airs about it, exactly, but she couldn't behave quite as usual, and she was full of praise for the late Lady Bassett, for putting such a wonderful thought in Sir George's head and setting such store by her needlework.

It made Jane the center of the village, of course, and in her uplifted moments she gave a wondrous tea party to her friends and spent a pound or two upon it, 'twas thought. But then came news as she wouldn't get her legacy for a good few months, so that calmed her down a trifle; and from that day forward she found in a manner of speaking that her life was going to be changed by the money, as life always is changed by it. For though she said to herself it weren't to make no difference, of course it did. Because money interests other people beside him or her who's got it, and Jane soon found that, apart from her own thoughts on the subject of that £1,000, a lot of other folk had thoughts about it also.

As for her own opinions, to take them first, there's no doubt she soared to property. She confessed to my wife that what she hankered after was furniture, and she'd longed all her life for one of the American organs. Not that she could play it, but she felt it would make a very fine appearance in her parlor and give her something to polish while she lived and a valuable thing to leave behind her when she died. She had other ideas, too, and thought of a new kitchen range, and a new bedstead, and, perhaps, even one or two proper painted pictures, that you often pick up cheap at a sale. She confessed to my wife also that she might buy a few clothes, perhaps, and a real black silk; and there was a rood of ground next her own cabbage patch that was for sale. This, if added to her own, would give her the benefit of three very proper apple trees, and a cherry tree, and a pig's house.

Those were Jane's own desires; but she soon found that her relations took a different view. One and all of 'em seemed bit with the same opinion, and her brother's wife, and her two nephews, and her married niece all cried the same thing with one voice.

"Don't you touch the capital, Jane," said Nelly Coode, Tom Coode's missus; and "Don't you touch the capital, Aunt Jane," said William and John Caunter, her dead sister's boys; and "Don't for the world touch the capital, dear Aunt Jane," said Susan West, wife of Jacob West, the publican to the "Joyful Welcome." And others gave Jane the same advice, until the poor soul began to feel like a guilty thing when the American organ came in her mind, or the kitchen range, or the new brass knobbed bedstead; while as for the little bit of land and the apple trees, they soon faded from her thoughts altogether.

It wasn't only her relations, however, took a wakened interest in Jane. That elderly soldier, Bart Coombstock from Chagford—an old friend of her father's—came over to congratulate her. And then he comed again, and presently he was often seen on the way to or from her cottage.

Long ago there'd been a bit of fun about them, though Sergt. Coombstock was ten years younger than Jane; but the courting had hung fire, because Jane's father didn't like it, and when he died nothing happened, though some of us thought Bert had offered and got "No" for his answer. But now he came out on the warpath once more, and there's no doubt he was terrible wishful to wed Jane Coode.

It worried her a great deal, for she had no thought of any such thing, and the fret of waiting for his proposal properly aged Jane. My wife advised her to take the bull by the horns and tell the sergeant she knew what he was up to and turn him down once for all, but Jane had her maidenly ideas and thought she couldn't well refuse to marry Bart before he offered for her.

Then her nephews got to hear about the sergeant's tactics and they weren't so particular. In fact, one night to the "Joyful Welcome" both William and John Caunter let go on Coombstock and told him they saw through his strategems and ordered him to let their aunt bide in peace. There was a proper row and Bart dressed down the young men with his tongue and no doubt made 'em bitter enemies for life. Not that that fretted him, or them.

Then came a day when Jane heard a man's step at her door and thought no doubt 'twas the sergeant, and was just screwing up her courage to tell him to stop it when she found it weren't Bart, but the vicar.

The Rev. Valletort was a good as well as a holy man, and now he called to start some fresh ideas in poor Jane Coode's mind and show her the views of the church on the subject of cash. His reverence didn't come cadging exactly; in fact, he took a regular pulpit line about it and said as he'd only looked in to show Jane her duty and remind her of a few things that people with money were only too willing to forget.

"There ain't enough lending to the Lord in this parish," said the Rev. Valletort. "We look at the needs of the church in a wrong spirit, Jane Coode, and seem to forget that as the laborer is worthy of his hire, so is mother church. There's a line taken by ignorant minds on the subject of tithes, Jane, that often pains me—not for myself, understand, but for those who cannot see the light in this matter and seem to think the servants of the Lord live on air."

He went on to explain tithes, as he understood 'em, and gave it as his opinion that with a come by chance like Miss Coode's thousand pounds, she couldn't do less than give a tenth to the church plate. Then he went on his way, leaving Jane with more difficulties before her; and when her relations heard of the reverend's views they opened out pretty wide, I assure you, and said a great many ungodly things. And Bill Caunter—a very shrewd man—put it in a nutshell and axed his aunt one question.

"When did the Rev. Valletort come in your house last afore this?" he queried, and Jane admitted 'twas on the occasion of her father's death.

"Very well, then—there you are!" said William; and Jane saw his meaning.

But next time she dropped in to see my wife, she said that now there was a new voice speaking in her ears, and she'd wake of a night and hear the words, "A tithe to the Lord!" as if it was a text echoing through the hours of sleep. And then again, next time she woke up, her "grandfather clock" would ring out, "Don't touch the capital! Don't touch the capital!" She'd given up hope of everything but the American organ by now, but still clung to that, like a drowning man to a straw.

She was miserable already, and I never seed male or female grow so much older in a short space of two months as what Miss Coode did. In fact, my wife cautioned her.

"You be letting this get on your nerves, Jane," she said, "and if you can feel so down hearted about the money now, afore you've touched a penny of it, or seen the color of one of them thousand sovereigns, Lord He knows how you'll bear up when the money descends upon you."

"I want to do right," she answered. "I know what I owe to my own, and I know what I owe to his reverence. Then there's another very vexatious item and that's Sergt. Coombstock. The man won't take 'No' for an answer, though I've given it. He says I want an independent person like him to stand up for me against my family and against the Rev. Valletort; and he presses marriage upon me, so as he shall be in his legal right to defend me and send 'em all about their business."

"There's another, too," said my wife; "you seem to forget her."

"And who might she be?" asked poor Jane with frightened eyes.

"Yourself," answered my wife. "Why the mischief should you worrit your wits to fiddle strings about your brother's wife, and your nephews and niece, and his reverence, and that crafty old soldier, and all the pack of 'em? The money's yours, ain't it? 'Tis the gift of Providence, and 'tis no better than weak minded to let every wind blow you away from it. These here people are after your cash—every man jack of 'em—and just you snap your fingers at the whole crew and remember the money's yours. You haven't got it yet; and when you do, you spend a nice dollop on some shining furniture and buy that plot next your father in the churchyard your mind's set on. The Lord helps those who help themselves, mind. And if you feel like it, put a £5 note in the alms dish one Sunday and tell parson you have. And for the rest, send Coombstock going with a flea in his ear. Be a free creature, Jane!"

Then I spoke.

"There's good advice from a good friend, Miss Coode," I said. "And you won't better it in Little Silver, or anywheres else. 'Tis sound sense," I said, "and if you go and do likewise, you won't regret it."

But we can't help our natures, and even as I spoke I knew my wife's wisdom was wasted, for Jane Coode was cursed with one of the worrying characters that won't let well alone and always listens to everybody—a very dangerous habit, if you haven't got a steadfast mind.

She went from bad to worse, and grew so thin as a shotten herring, and walked along as if there was a highwayman behind every hedge waiting to cry, "Your money or your life!" And my wife said as the next thing Jane Coode would be wanting was the doctor. But the end came in a very surprising and unexpected manner; and some of us ain't finished laughing yet.

My wife heard all about it from Jane herself, and though there's a hundred and one stories round the neighborhood, the true tale went like this: Jane had just dismissed the sergeant one evening and prayed him if he loved her, as he said he did, to leave her alone and come no more; and he'd gone off blustering, and threatening, and swearing he'd have her yet and didn't know when he was beat. And then, while she was all of a twitter as usual and night was drawing in, there came a market cart to her door and a woman alighted and walked up the path. She was very old, but full of life seemingly—a determined ancient creature with big eyes and brown face puckered up like a shrunk pippin.

"You'll be Jane Coode, I suppose," she said.

"I am," answered Jane. "And who might you be, ma'am?"

"Jane Coode is my name," answered the stranger, "and I've come to ax a few questions and to tell you something; and I hope you're a Christian woman and an honest one."

Jane hoped so, too, and bade her in and dusted a chair. Then the old creature went to the point.

"Was you ever a wet nurse?" she asked, and poor Jane felt her face go peony.

"My God! This is the limit!" she said. "How dare you ax me such a question? Me, a maiden woman!"

"I've come about this here thousand pound," went on Mother Jane Coode, "and I be going to put in my claim to it; and I'll tell you for why. Afore you was out of your long clothes—afore you was born, I dare say—I lived in this place and my name was Jane Bond. But I married the late Arthur Coode of Little Silver. And, just after my first child was born, the present lord of the manor was also born; and as my Lady Bassett couldn't nurse him, they looked round for a likely foster mother, and tney found me. And I was the apple of their eye up to Godbold's Leigh for a full year and more. And when I left them Sir George he said I should never be forgot and promised me I was to go in his will. That's more'n fifty years ago. Then my husband, and me, and my first child went to Chagford; but 'tis certain I was down in the will as belonging to Little Silver. And, in a word, that thousand pound weren't never meant for you at all. And if you're an honest woman I hope you'll grant it."

Well, Jane listened, and what she felt about it she told my wife the next day.

"For the first minute," said Miss Coode, "I got a feeling that the old lady was up to no good, and the usual human instinct rose in me that rises in everybody, when some one else wants their money. But that very quickly passed, I assure you, and I knew in my heart that Mrs. Coode from Chagford was the angel unawares. She'd surprised me a lot, no doubt, for my nerves ain't what they were; but I surprised her more than she did me—that's certain. In fact, old though she was, she got the astonishment of her life, and if she hadn't been so tough as a cast iron nail she'd have fainted, I expect, when she heard my opinions.

"For, as I turned it over, I very quickly saw the blessed side of it. I saw how my nephews and relations in general would cease from troubling; and how the sergeant would be at rest; and how I should never hear no more of the Rev. Valletort; and how my life would all slip back into the old way and everybody let me alone, and peace return, and my proper hope of salvation along with it. So I said to Mrs. Coode, I said, 'Without a grain of doubt you're in the right, ma'am. Only, since you've been gone from Little Silver for more'n half a century, you was forgot. But you go to Godbold's Leigh this instant moment, my dear, and tell 'em you're the Jane Coode set down in the will; and be sure I'll uphold you. The money's yours, and I only hope to God you'll get more fun out of it than what I have from the promise of it."

That's what Jane said to my wife, and she added that Mrs. Coode of Chagford was a good bit put about. She'd come for a fight to the death, you see, and when there weren't no fight, she was thrown out of her stride. But she got very nice about it, naturally, and went so far as to promise Jane £10 to heal her wounds and disappointment. And then Jane amazed the ancient creature yet again, by saying she didn't want a penny and that there weren't no wounds, nor yet disappointments.

So there it ended, and though Jane weren't wounded, there's no doubt her family was, and they had a tidy lot to say against her; and Coombstock declared she weren't no wife for a soldier after all. But their views didn't hurt Jane. She got quite friendly with the Chagford Coodes after that, and she found that they never had no sort of difficulty with their £1,000. Not a relation troubled them on the subject, and the vicar of Chagford knowed them far too well ever to raise the question of a tithe; because they weren't that sort of people.

Blue Ribbon Fiction

MICE AND MEN

THE STORY THUS FAR—Merrial Houlton's normally sunny outlook on life is clouded by two regrets. First, the estrangement between her dead mother's English family and her father, with whom Merrial's relatives have had nothing to do since her mother was married and went to live on a western ranch. And, second, the hurt she has inflicted on Tripp Hart, an old time playmate from the west, whom she has sorrowfully rejected as a suitor. When her father tells her he has failed in business, Merrial announces that she is going to England to visit her mother's people while he is getting on his feet again, and to carry out certain plans about which she will tell no one. The family in England—Alice and Winifred Beaufort, their mother, and Hubert, an invalid brother—receive her with mixed emotions, but she proceeds blithely to make friends in her own way. Things, she finds, are rather at sixes and sevens. Her own brother, Dick, who has been in England at school, turns out to be a hopeless expatriate, ashamed of his American origin, which he has kept a secret. Alice Beaufort has met him, without knowing that he is her first cousin, and has fallen in love with him. Winifred is unhappy over an affair with Kenneth Stanton, a young man who appears to be neglecting her. The pitiful plight of Hubert, the invalid, arouses Merrial to prompt action, and she enlists her father's aid in sending over an American specialist to examine the boy. Then she astonishes the Beauforts by moving, bag and baggage, over to the home of Aunt Jane Coke, another of the English relatives, poor but proud as Lucifer, and, to Miss Coke's consternation, calmly makes her kitchen the center of a flourishing neighborhood trade in quince preserve, cabling Tripp Hart meanwhile to find a purchaser for the recipe. While this venture is under way, Dick Houlton announces that he is coming to visit the Rivingtons, near by. Dismayed at the prospect of the Beauforts discovering his silly masquerade as an Englishman, Merrial tries to scare him away by sending him a copy of her quince preserve advertisement in a local paper. Dick comes, nevertheless, and angrily demands an explanation of his sister's unconventional goings on. While they are talking they unexpectedly encounter Lord Rivington, whereupon Dick makes a further mess of things by flatly denying his relationship to Merrial.

TENTH INSTALLMENT.

Dick Makes Amends.

IN PUNISHING Merrial, and striking the mockery out of her eyes, Dick had satisfied his anger. It began to cool rapidly as he rode home, and, in cooling, suddenly left him aware of his colossal folly. He had disclaimed any close connection with his own sister, and that in the presence of Lord Rivington. The utter meanness of it staggered Dick; the stupidity of it gave him a prickly sensation of dismay. For Merrial by now had probably told Rivington the truth, and, through the eyes of that cool and honorable gentleman, Dick saw his own action rather hideously.

"He will think I was ashamed to acknowledge her because of the quince stuff. He will never believe that I wasn't thinking of him nor of anything in life but of bringing her to her senses. Shall I go back and pretend it was a joke?"

But something in Merrial's face told her brother that this would be a poor amends. He rode on, with bent head and dangling eyeglass, feeling profoundly miserable and dreading the return to Rivington house and the eventual reappearance of Lord Rivington. With what face could he meet the man's contempt? It was quite hopeless to explain himself to such a fellow. Rivington had never had an uncontrollable impulse in his life. He had never been carried hot foot over his own barriers. If Rivington chose to leap he leapt with a full knowledge of consequences, a due regard for form, and a careful avoidance of inappropriate witnesses. As for Merrial, Dick was still very indignant with her—more indignant perhaps because he had on her account put himself so profoundly in the wrong.

But other feelings had begun to tug at him. The memory of her white, bewildered face had become a pain. Decidedly he had behaved in a most contemptible fashion. He would never be able to think well of himself again. And then there was Alice! This story, getting to her by chance, would finish him irretrievably in that direction.

In the fairly surprising pang of this consideration Dick realized first that he was altogether in love with Alice Beaufort, and under the sincerity of this conviction he became at once another Dick.

He drew his eyebrows together, and with tight lips he rode along, in a fury with himself and a determination to get out of his difficulty undisgraced in spite of every one. Of course he would have to take his "cuts" from Rivington. That was unavoidable. He must stand before the "cool and honorable" gentleman and confess himself a fool and suffer under the conviction that he thought him something considerably worse. So much for punishment. But Alice must never hear of it. He would go to her direct, mention his nationality, speak of Merrial and of the newly discovered relationship, and, braving Alice's contempt of the "farcical" race, begin anew under his own colors.

Rivington, thank heaven, was no mischief maker. He would keep the miserable little episode dark, if only out of consideration for Merrial. It was, of course, unfortunate that Rivington should be a relative of the Beauforts, but, after all, Alice had a mind of her own and would not be too greatly influenced by an ill opinion unbacked by any illuminating and specific cause. No, Dick had not much to fear—if only Alice loved him!

If she loved him! The tumult of conjecture into which this "if" threw Dick, occupied him during the rest of his ride home.

Dick put in a haggard appearance at the dinner table and endured some chaffing on the subject of lonely rides. He flashed out under it with surprising quickness. Miss Rivington found him "good fun" and permitted him to be her billiard partner that evening. Dick played viciously well without his eyeglass.

Rivington, sauntering in to watch the game, applauded Dick's play. Dick had been aware of a certain coolness from the gentleman since his reappearance, but of no contempt so crushing as his conduct, rightly understood, would have deserved. Evidently Merrial had not told tales. She had always been a little brick. He would somehow make her magnificent amends. He was no Houlton if he did not bring things round.

He avoided Rivington after the game, finding it, in fact, difficult to meet his eye, which seemed to stamp some ugly epithet of meanness over his whole person, and, throwing himself into a chair near Elfrida Rivington, he rattled away to her in an aimless, witty fashion that kept her pretty eyes sparkling at him.

"I'd never have believed, Mr. Houlton," she told him at last, "that you'd be half such good company. I'm almost afraid of you at Oxford. You have such a very wise, world-weary air up there."

Dick laughed and colored.

"I'll tell you a secret," said he. "I am not wise at all."

"But you think it more becoming to an Oxford man to appear so."

"You see, as a Rhodes scholar," answered Dick slowly, screwing in his eyeglass with a defiant air, "I have to keep up my national dignity. I am an American, you know."

Miss Rivington fell back in her chair with a face of amazement.

"You—an American! You're joking!"

"Not at all. I was born in Boston—had never seen England till I came over here a year ago. My mother, to be sure, was English. She came from this country. She was a Miss Coke!

"One of the Cokes! How extraordinary! Polly, did you hear that?"

Polly, a visiting friend, looked round.

"Mr. Houlton is a cousin of the Beauforts, and an American. Would you ever have thought it?"

"Never," said Polly, with no particular enthusiasm, and turned back to an interrupted flirtation. She had at first sight pronounced Dick an "absurd creature," and she had never cared for Miss Rivington's "dowdy" friends, the Beaufort girls. So the news left her profoundly indifferent. As a real American, Dick might have been interesting, but an American so overnaturalized would never pay Polly for the trouble of investigation.

And now, having set the ball rolling, Dick Houlton faced the morrow with a kind of zest born of courage, if not exactly with confidence.

On arrival next day at the Beauforts' tennis party with the other guests from Rivington house Dick's first move was to isolate Alice and get her ear before some less careful confidant imparted his news to her.

Alice was looking particularly stately this afternoon in a gown different from the usual awkward white affair. It was a dress of some dull blue Japanesey shade that brought out new tints in her honest eyes and gold threaded chestnut hair. Dick realized that he was somewhat in awe of his English love. She was talking with Lord Rivington. He hurried over to her. She was still at a sufficient distance from Miss Rivington to make a diversion possible.

"Miss Beaufort," stammered Dick ardently, while Miss Rivington's eyebrows lifted at the fellow's obvious excitement, "you'll let me speak to you a few moments, won't you? You'll excuse me, Rivington?"

Rivington, still with lifted brows, bowed and turned back to another group of tennis players. But Alice was less easily managed.

"I must speak to Elfrida first," she protested. "She will think it very odd."

"This is important—really. You are not very near. We can turn aside. You can show me the Japanese chrysanthemums. They are really glorious. Just for an instant, please. I assure you, no one will think it odd."

Alice, with a protest in every line and an impatient air, allowed herself to be diverted to the Japanese chrysanthemums, and there Dick, moistening his lips, made quick confession, blinking his eyelashes at her.

"I dare say Merrial and you have been having no end of fun with me all this time," said he. "I think it was hardly fair of you not to tell me yesterday that you knew me for a cousin. You see, I was quite unaware of the fact. I did not even know that Merrial had been staying with you."

Long before the end of this speech Dick saw that Alice was overwhelmed by astonished bewilderment. But he kept on. At the end her blue eyes fairly cried for an explanation.

"But, Mr. Houlton, what do you mean? Then you are a near relation of Merrial's!"

"Rather!" said Dick. "I am her brother, you know."

At which speech Alice turned her eyes slowly towards the distant Lord Rivington. When they came back to Dick's face, they found it white.

"Henry has just been telling me that he met you at Miss Coke's gate yesterday, and that you told him that you were very slightly connected with Merrial. He said"—Alice's eyes had never been more uncompromising—"he wondered what the connection was. I don't understand."

There was a short, dead stillness. Dick's eyes pursued Lord Rivington with maledictions. Then they came back like whipped dogs to Alice and fell before her look.

"I don't understand," she repeated, and as he still remained dumb she added, with a tremulous note in the usually steady voice, "Please will you explain it to me, Mr. Houlton?"

But Dick just then found it impossible to explain.

"She is my sister," he repeated stupidly.

"And yesterday?"

"I was rather worse than a fool," he muttered. "I was angry. I—I——"

"You told Lord Rivington purposely that she was not your sister?"

Alice, too, was pale.

"Yes," Dick admitted, "I was angry. I did not like what she was doing. She had laughed at me. I wanted to punish her. I meant it only for a temporary punishment—to bring her to her senses—to show her—I——"

He stopped, for Alice's choleric blue eyes were in a blaze, and he saw an elderly lady approaching, unobserved by his avenging angel.

"I am glad your are only half an Englishman," said Alice hotly.

Miss Jane Coke paused with astonishment as she heard her niece's rebuke.

"Alice, please, O, you don't understand! I love you—I must make you understand, and then you'll forgive me. I love you, want you to marry me!"

"Mr. Houlton, even if that were possible, you seem to forget that, in England, at least, first cousins do not marry."

And, turning away from Dick with a gesture that seemed to fling him out of her life, she found herself face to face with Aunt Jane.

"Perhaps you will introduce me, Alice," Miss Coke suggested, inevitably.

Alice hesitated. "Mr. Richard Houlton of Boston, Aunt Jane; my aunt, Miss Coke," she said coldly. "Aunt Jane, Hubert asked to see you. Will you come to him?" And she led Miss Coke away without another word.

Dick threw his eye glass down and ground it to pieces under his heel.

He felt himself an outcast, a man without a country.

That night Miss Jane Coke dropped a letter into the postoffice; it was addressed to James Houlton, in Boston, Mass., U. S. A. The envelope was further impressively inscribed: "Absolutely Private and Confidential."

While Miss Jane Coke in the privacy of her sitting room was inditing her mysterious and secret communication to James Houlton in America—the first letter she had ever written to her sister's husband—Merrial in her little bedroom upstairs was salving her bruised spirits, after the trials of the afternoon at the Beauforts' tennis party, by reading and rereading a long and characteristic epistle from her father.

He had that rare faculty of the unprofessed letter writer, as unconscious of producing effects as of possessing literary artistry, the ability to convey himself to the very presence of his reader on his page of pen and ink; he was there in the flesh, as if merely just outside the range of physical vision, and Merrial could hear the fine tones of his voice and see the keen play of expression on his face as she seemed to listen to, rather than read, his "long distance chat," as he called it.

This was balm to her soul, and she needed it.

He told her of his doings out west, in the slow initial process of the upbuilding of his plans for regaining the hold he had lost on his business interests; "thought aloud," for her benefit and his, the moves in the game which he contemplated making next, and through all his pages Merrial felt the unwavering determination of his persistence and self-confidence to accomplish what he had set before him. It was the very tonic which she needed for her own battle scarred spirit, and she thrilled in response to the inspiration flowing from the same source which, she realized, had given her the zest for the fight she was determined to win; the victory her mother would have striven for had she lived.

James Houlton asked no specific questions as to Merrial's doings. He knew, in general, what she was about; he had never qualified his disapproval of her insistence upon making the closer acquaintance of her English relatives. He feared the results for her, and he objected to them for himself. He was consistent in volunteering no aid in her quest, and he sought for no light upon its success.

He had, however, received Merrial's urgent plea that he write Dr. Reval, the famous surgical specialist in Boston, whose splendid work Houlton had encouraged and by financial backing had brought more expeditiously to the front.

"I like your cheek, young woman," wrote her father, "dragging me into your nefarious designs upon Reval. I warned you I wouldn't lift a finger to help you treat him to the kind of bad medicine you handed to Tripp. Your sudden and inexplicable descent upon his student classes at the clinic I objected to strenuously. So it's only in defense of Reval himself that I have, at last, obeyed your commands. Never believe it was for your beaux yeux, my daughter! 'I could not love thee, dear, so much, loved I not Reval's peace of mind more.' So I've followed your instructions to the letter, and have told him you have need of his professional interest in some wildcat scheme that you cherish, and should he find it possible to combine a few weeks' vacation with the fulfillment of your desires, will he drop you a line, and that you will then send him full particulars.

"May I suggest that you now forward him, without further parley, all that is in your head (and make it abundantly clear that nothing is in that queer engine we call your heart), anent this important matter. Good luck attend you—and protect Reval, if to oblige me, he falls for your blandishments!"

"O, dad, if you aren't the dearest, most a-dor-able father that ever was!" Merrial murmured, her eyes big and sparkling with the depth of her love of him, and of her hope.

And forthwith she proceeded to follow James Houlton's advice, and before she went to bed she had written Dr. Reval a full and most businesslike report of the case of Hubert Beaufort, inclosing certain technical addenda obtained in anticipation from her ally, Dr. Unwin. As she sealed and stamped the envelope, and gave it a final pat of smiling approval, she said herself that if ill results came of it, to Dr. Reval, it would not be any fault of hers.

"My whole heart is there, in between every line," she laughed, nodding mischievously at the letter, "but I defy him to detect a speck of it, with his strongest microscope. Still, he'll come: I know he will. And I do hope it will be soon!"

In her father's letter there was a very serious and even severe reminder of his warning to her before she left on her mission to England:

"I do insist, Merrial, and I repeat what I said to you at home with all the weight and urgency I can command, that you do not drag Dick within the Coke circles. Much as I hoped you would listen to my warnings against your own visit to them, I must demand of you—and you know how seldom I ever demand, dear girl—that you do nothing whatever to encourage Dick in any way to come in contact with them whatsoever. I respected your wish to keep secret the details of the plans you had in mind in connection with your stay in England; I cannot confide to you my reasons for desiring Dick to be kept from association with any members of the Coke family. I can only say that it is of vital importance to his happiness and yours and mine, and insist that in this matter my judgment must prevail."

Before she got up next morning Merrial gave herself the luxury of reading her father's letter again. She pondered this passage in it; her conscience was clear—she had done her utmost to put an end to Dick's unwitting entrance into the circle of their English relatives. The few words she had spoken with Alice yesterday afternoon, coupled with Dick's sudden disappearance from the party so soon after his arrival with the Rivingtons, assured her that his ill-starred and pitiful bit of "play acting" had received its coup de grace. Heaven send that the consequences upon his life and Alice's be permanently disastrous! Doubtless he had left the Rivingtons, and she felt sure that after he had recovered himself and found his equilibrium she would hear from him. Probably they would have a few days together in London, and they would come to an understanding with each other.

So Merrial's sky was clear and bright with hope as she ran out to mail her letter to Dr. Reval before breakfast. She returned to prepare the table before Aunt Jane's appearance.

Was it just the result of the strengthening draft of encouragement of her father's letter, or was it a fact that in Aunt Jane's morning kiss, always so prefunctory and impersonal hitherto, there was a hint of warmth, even of protective tenderness?

"You are riding this morning with that inveterate chess player, Henry Rivington," Aunt Jane remarked.

"Yes—but why chess player?" Merrial's eyes followed Miss Coke's whimsical gaze, which was fixed upon that bone of contention between her and Lord Rivington, the old oak chest.

"I think," said the old lady, grimly, "that Henry Rivington has not yet quite abandoned hope of getting the chest, in spite of his mysterious withdrawal from his financial bargain the other day. I await another proposition, less expensive to him and less profitable to me. He will seek to checkmate me by a move that will cost him none of his pieces."

Merrial recalled his remark that it was to become the heirloom of Aunt Jane's "favorite" niece, but blinked innocent ignorance of Rivington's indiscretion. Had Aunt Jane known that he had spoken of it she would never have embarked upon this little joke.

Merrial laughed. "You speak in riddles, Aunt Jane. What do you mean? You make him out a shrewd dealer in antiques. He said he wasn't in it for business reasons."

"Perhaps," remarked Miss Coke, "his connoisseurship extends beyond antiques. Who knows? I think Henry Rivington is a remarkably clever young man, of rare insight. Don't underrate him because he happens to suffer from a title. Look upon that as, from the American standpoint, a misfortune rather than a fault."

"Misfortune?" Merrial questioned, innocently. "Why I should just adore it, if I were he."

"I dare say, then, if you let him know it, that he will take you one of these days in his car and show you over the old hall. He dotes on it—the old family place, where he keeps all his treasures. His mother can't endure it, so when they're not in town they live at Rivington house, which is modern—only eighteenth century. The old hall, fifteen miles away, at the other end of the estate, is sixteenth century—a typical musty old show place, that gives one the creeps."

"And they never live in it?"

"No—now and then they spend Christmas there, but last Christmas they were in Paris. Ellen Rivington contrived it, to escape the ghosts of history. I suppose when Henry marries he'll live at the old hall, and leave his mother at Rivington house—provided that the new Lady Rivington approves."

"I should think she would insist on the old hall," commented Merrial, demurely. "Perhaps he will take me to see it one of these days," she added, in her best detached manner.

And so, when her noble cavalier arrived, he found Miss Coke's niece awaiting him with a particularly happy twinkle of keen anticipation in her eyes.

But, of course, they did not visit the old hall that day; it was too far for a horseback ride, and in any case that would not be according to the Rivington code. Lady Rivington had first to call upon Miss Houlton, and that move was already in Henry's brain, though as yet unmentioned. As Miss Coke had remarked, Henry Rivington was a very clever young man, with rare insight, and—she might have added—even rarer foresight.

As they again approached Miss Coke's little house on their return shortly before lunch, Rivington ejaculated—with un-Rivington-like impetuosity:

"This has been jolly, Miss Houlton; it was awfully good of you to come! I'm off to London for a few days tomorrow; do let's repeat this, when I get back."

"It's you who were good to ask me," said Merrial, radiantly. "I've loved every minute of our morning—it was such an ideal day for it; and he's such a dear," she added, patting her horse's neck. Was she including his owner in her appreciation?

"He's yours whenever you'll let him come to you," he smiled, with a touch of subtle ambiguity. "Hello, who's arrived at Miss Coke's?"

Outside the door stood a cab, piled with baggage, and as the riders came up to the gate, a figure, familiar, yet with a difference, hurried out from the house towards them.

It was a slight, young, keen faced fellow, clean shaven, and bright eyed, with an eager and impulsive air. It wasn't just the absence of the monocle, nor of the mustache, nor of the other little affectations of dress which never "belonged" to him; the change was in the man himself. It was Dick, the Dick Merrial loved, and he came gravely out, helped her from her horse, and, after a long, inquiring look into her blinking eyes, he kissed her on the mouth. Then, and not till then, did he turn to the astonished Rivington.

"She's my sister, Rivington," said he "Perhaps Miss Beaufort told you yesterday. And I believe I owe you an explanation, sir."

"Not at all," said Henry, who had also dismounted and was focusing him rather sternly through his eyeglass. "You've been masquerading—eh? On my word, I like your present cut better. But you're prepared, I hope, for a tremendous chaffing when you get back to Rivington house?"

"I am not going back to Rivington house," said Dick. "I'm on my way to the station now. But, I say, I must have a sort of settling with you, Rivington. Merrie is there any place where I can see Lord Rivington alone?"

"The sitting room," said Merrial, with anxious eyes on his face. "If Aunt Jane is out; but, Dick, please—let it rest."

She put her hand on his arm, but, finding it like a bundle of electric wires, she gave up all idea of interference and watched the two men disappear, Rivington following her brother with an air of suppressed embarrassment.

They went into the sitting room, and Henry, from force of habit, sought the chest and caressed its top with his hand, looking at Dick meanwhile with an expression of cool detachment. He found it difficult to recognize the "noveletty" Houlton in this erratic looking youngster, who was pacing the room jerkily and biting his under lip.

"He must have a remarkable talent for acting," Henry thought. "It only goes to show what a little get-up and affectation may do to spoil a man."

"You must think that my conduct to Merrial yesterday deserves some explanation, Rivington?" said Dick at last.

"None to me, you know," protested Henry. "It's none of my affair—your manner to your sister, you know. I should think, however, that she might require an explanation."

"Yes," said Dick. "It's for her sake that I'm getting this down with you."

Henry smiled slightly.

"I see. Perhaps you were ass enough to be ashamed"—he laughed shortly—"of quince preserve, of her taking money from the village doctor for his six dozen jars—eh?"

Then, as Dick held a mortified silence, the elder man went on, with an edge to his tone, for in spite of himself the memory of the "faery child's" dumb pallor and plucky animation was coming back to him and he found his blood grow hot.

"Before listening to your explanation, Houlton, I must tell you that I think you behaved like a cad—like a young cad, you know."

The speech to Dick was as keen as a blow. He wondered sickly how he had ever brought himself to the pass of deserving such a cut from such a gentleman.

"You are quite right, Lord Rivington," he said, quivering.

And there was a silence, during which Henry's eyebrows reflected the perplexity of his mind. That a chap with such a decent sort of face and such a more than decent sort of sister should have been guilty of such petty baseness!

"But, after all," he went on presently, "it's none of my affair. Only, as Alice Beaufort's cousin, I feel in fairness to her, somehow, I ought perhaps——"

"You need say nothing to Miss Beaufort," broke in Dick sharply. "She knows everything."

Henry's exquisite eyebrows made a straight dark line above his eyes.

"Ah, yes," he drawled; "at the Grange yesterday. I remember."

Dick swallowed and came a step nearer, holding his hands in his pockets. His eyes, miserable with anger and humiliation, were, Henry could not help but see, astonishingly like Merrial's.

"You do me less than justice if you imagine that I acted as I did that day at Miss Coke's gate because I was ashamed to own Merrial as my sister. I was angry because she had been making fun of me. And I had just one desire—to punish her. I wanted to hurt her—it seems hard to believe it now," he added in a dazed tone, "but I did. That's the truth."

"Really!" repeated Henry with added dryness.

One of Dick's hands came clenched out of his pocket.

"Do you suppose I was thinking of you that time?" he gasped. "I didn't care what you thought, otherwise should I have gone away and left Merrial to tell you the truth?"

"You knew very well she would not," said Henry quickly. "You knew she'd walk through fire before she'd give away your meanness."

"You are calling me a liar, Rivington!"

Henry shrugged his shoulders.

"I did not ask for this explanation," said he. "It was your own insistence that brought about this unfortunate interview. You must excuse me."

And Henry, without another word, went out and shut the door.

He would have preferred to leave without any further talk. He was profoundly uncomfortable at the turn affairs had taken, and was conscious, too, that he had been rather hard on a queer, overstrained youngster, who was evidently eating difficult mouthfuls of dust by way of amends. But Merrial was waiting for him in the little front garden. She was white, and her eyes were beacons of distress and pride.

"You are leaving for London tomorrow?" she said nervously, and Henry, with an astonishing pang, felt that because of this business she would be glad to have him go. She held out her hand with such an air.

"I believe I am, Miss Houlton. But that's no reason why you should be so final with me, is it? I should like to see you again. I should like to hear more of the fate of quince preserve."

"Ah! quince preserve!"

Her tone was pathetic. He could not help but see the sudden dew on her eyelashes as she slowly bent her face away.

"I hope you will tell your brother," said Henry slowly, "that I shall be glad if he will let me see him in London if he happens to be there. There's a club or two—I might make it more interesting for him, you see."

Then indeed Merrial's face came round, and the tears stood upon her cheeks, to make way for a look that thrilled him, shining from such cool, clear eyes.

"O, thank you," she said. "You are ad-o-orably kind!"

"I shall tell you everything about quince preserve," she called to him, running impulsively down to the gate when he was on his horse. "And I shall give you a jar all for your own. Would you like it?"

"Thank you," said Henry, sitting, bareheaded on his chestnut horse and looking not unworthy of his ancestors. "I should like nothing better. But let it be quince preserve 'in the pot, nine days old,' please, for that was quite the most delicious saucerful from an agent's standpoint, you know."

She turned back from the gate with shining eyes and a heart beating very warmly for her departing cavalier. And so she came to the sitting room, where Dick was waiting for her.

"You know just what a brute I am, Merrie, and I feel it—every bit," he said. "I'm going up to London and then down to Oxford to read, until I can pull myself together." He kissed her and moved towards the door. "I'm very, very sorry, dear."

She knew he was aching to speak of Alice, but felt he could ask no favors.

"I understand, Dick; it's all right with me—and in no time every one will forget it. I shall be going to stay with the Beauforts again soon; it will be all right, don't worry."

And knowing that he really wanted to be by himself, she did not delay him but waved him a cheery good-by as he got into his cab and was trundled off to the station with his baggage.

"Dear old Dick—he's a thoroughbred in the bone," she said to herself as she hastened back to get lunch ready for Aunt Jane's fortunately belated return.

MICE AND MEN

By Katherine Newlin Burt.

THE STORY THUS FAR.—Merrial Houlton's normally sunny outlook on life is clouded by two events. First, the estrangement between her dead mother's relatives and those with whom Merrial's relatives have had nothing to do; and, second, the discovery that her husband, whom she married and went to live on a western ranch with, has been writing to Alice Coke, a girl he knew before his marriage. Merrial, who has been ill, goes to the Coke home in Chicago for a visit. There she meets Dick Coke, Alice's brother, who is attracted to her. Merrial, however, is unaware of this. Dick, who has been away at college, returns home and finds Merrial there. He is puzzled by her attitude toward him, and by the fact that Alice has not written to her husband for months. Dick, who has been in love with Alice for years, is unaware of the fact that she is married. Merrial, who has been ill, goes to the Coke home in Chicago for a visit. He is puzzled by her attitude toward him, and by the fact that Alice has not written to her husband for months. Dick, who has been in love with Alice for years, is unaware of the fact that she is married.

If she loved him! The tumult of conjecture and specific cause. No. Dick had not much to fear—if only Alice loved him!

Before she got up next morning Merrial gave herself the luxury of reading her mother's letter which this "it" threw Dick on... "I dare say Merrial and you have

And so, when her noble cavalier arrived, he found Miss Coke's niece awaiting him with a particularly happy twinkle of keen anticipation in her eyes.

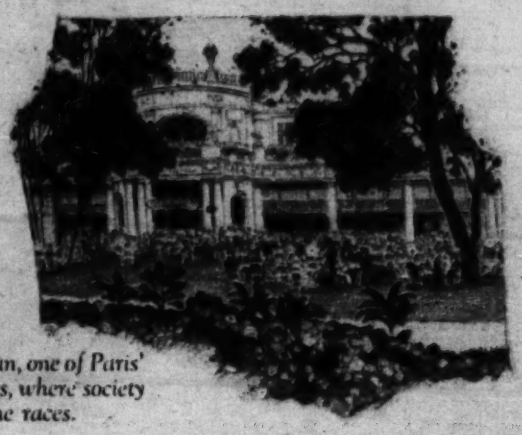
To the Wholesale Dress Buyer!



The Pré-Catalan, one of Paris' most noted cafés, where society gathers after the races.

On June 25 at the Races at Auteuil— To-morrow at our New York Showrooms!

AT the same event and on the same day that the Parisian dress silhouette for Fall first appeared... June 25, "Drag Day," at the races at Auteuil... mannequins from the Crown designing headquarters in Paris presented authentic versions of the new silhouette—already transposed to American needs!

Working in Paris, in the same fashion-channels, with the same inspiration as the Parisian couturiers, it was possible for the Crown designing staff to develop the same ideas in accord with American demands and to present correct American adaptations at the very debut of the Parisian dress mode.

These models now form part of the first Fall showing at our New York showrooms—a showing presenting the Parisian dress vogue, with such authority and so all-inclusively in range of styles, fabrics and price, that stores of representative style-influence in their communities regard it as not only the premier source for selecting their Fall dress displays, but as a guide for their dress selections throughout the market for Fall.

"After Lunch I'll start the Engine—Then Good-bye Carbon!"

Before you go in to lunch, pour an ounce of Johnson's Carbon Remover into each of your cylinders through the pet-cocks or spark plug openings. After lunch, drive your car ten or fifteen miles—and the carbon will be gone. Isn't that the easiest, cleanest and pleasantest method you ever heard of? You don't lose the use of your car—and it will save you $3.00 to $5.00.

JOHNSON'S CARBON REMOVER

You can easily apply Johnson's Carbon Remover yourself—in ten minutes—without even soiling your hands—and the cost is trifling. An occasional dose of this marvelous engine laxative will stop that knock—quiet your motor—save your batteries—and reduce your gasoline consumption 12% to 25%.

REDUCES THE H. C. OF MOTORING

As the price of gasoline mounts higher and higher, the mileage per gallon becomes a matter of more and more importance. It is generally admitted that clean cylinders reduce gasoline consumption. Don't wait until your motor is choked and caked with carbon. Use Johnson's Carbon Remover every 500 miles and remove the deposit while it is soft and powdery. Half-pints, 75c.

JOHNSON'S Car Savers

The depreciation your car suffers depends largely upon yourself. If you run it without any attention you sell at a big loss. But with a little time and care you can cut the depreciation in half.

We offer you Johnson's Car Savers—there's one for every purpose. No experience is required for their use—they can all be applied by the average motorist with perfect results.

Johnson's Black-Lac—the perfect top dressing. One coat imparts a rich, black finish just like new. Easy to apply—is permanent, waterproof and inexpensive. Half-pints, 75c

Johnson's Radiator Cement—in liquid form and easy to use. Will ordinarily seal leaks in two to ten minutes. All you have to do is remove the radiator cap and pour it in. Half-pints, 75c

Johnson's Stop Squeak Oil—penetrates between the spring leaves, thoroughly lubricating them. Simply paint it on with a brush or squirt it on with an oil can—you don't even need to jack up the car. Half-pints, 35c

Johnson's Auto-Lak—an automobile body varnish that amateurs can use successfully. Goes on easily and quickly—you can finish your car one day and drive it the next. A pint is sufficient for a roadster. Pints, $1.00

Johnson's Cleaner—for body, hood and fenders. It removes spots, stains, tar, alkali—preparing the surface for a polish. Contains no grit or acid. Half-pound cans, 45c

Johnson's Prepared Wax Liquid—the dustless polish for body, hood and fenders. Preserves the varnish and protects it from the weather. "Sheds water like a duck's back." Half-pints, 50c

Insist upon your dealer supplying you with Johnson's Car Savers. Don't stock or use unknown substitutes. Write for our booklet on Keeping Cars Young—it's free.

S. C. JOHNSON & SON, RACINE, WIS. DEPT. T.

Only for those who end corns

The pleasure of an evening at dancing is only for those who end corns.

The way is simple, quick and easy, and is sure. Millions of people employ it.

Apply Blue-jay, the liquid or the plaster. That touch will stop the pain.

Then wait a little and the corn will loosen and come out.

Then why does anybody suffer corns?

Just because they don't know. They pare corns and keep them. Or they pad them. Or they use a treatment harsh and ineffective.

Blue-jay is scientific. This world-famed laboratory created it.

Year after year, it is keeping millions entirely free from corns.

Perhaps half the corns that start are now ended by it.

GRAY HAIR TELLS TALES. As discordant as a costume of pink and orange, or as a precious jewel set in a tarnished mounting, is a youthful, piquant face framed in gray, faded hair. The failures of many women to win social recognition and advancement in the professions and in business is due to inattention to this important detail of the toilette. The woman who knows the advantage of an impeccable appearance keeps her hair well groomed with the aid of Brownatone. Absolutely harmless and instant in its results is the "Brownatone" method for restoring gray, mottled or streaked hair to its youthful beauty and exact original color—from light golden to black. Mail 11 cents to The Kenton Pharmacal Co., 499 Coppin Bldg., Covington, Ky., for a trial bottle of "Brownatone" and valuable booklet on the care of the hair. Two colors: "Light to Medium Brown" and "Dark Brown to Black." Two sizes: 50c and $1.50—at all druggists.

Those who prefer having their hair "Brownatoned" by a specialist or who desire special advice will call at the Brownatone Shop, 1033 Stevens Bldg.

Women say La-may stays on better than any other face powder.

UP TO the present time it has been almost impossible to get a face powder to stay on longer than it takes to put it on. You powder your nose nicely and the first gust of wind or the first puff of your handkerchief and away goes the powder, leaving your nose shiny and conspicuous, probably just when you would give anything to appear at your best. A specialist has perfected a pure powder that really stays on; that stays on until you wash it off. It does not contain white lead or rice powder to make it stay on. This improved formula contains a medicinal powder doctors prescribe to improve the complexion. In fact, this powder helps to prevent and reduce enlarged pores and irritations. This unusual powder is called La-may (French, Poudre L'Ame). Because La-may is so pure and because it stays on so well, it is already used by over a million American women. All dealers carry the large sixty-cent box and many dealers also carry the generous thirty-cent size. When you use this harmless powder and see how beautifully it improves your complexion you will understand why La-may so quickly became the most popular beauty powder sold in New York. Women who have tried all kinds of face powder say they cannot buy a better powder anywhere at any price. Herbert Roystone, 16 East 18th St., N. Y.

At last! A New Idea in Talcum Powder!

Women Everywhere Are Talking About a Wonderful New, Improved Kind of Talcum Powder

The specialist who created the popular La-may Face Powder has perfected a new kind of talcum. This new invention is two articles in one. It can be used for everything for which talcum is now used and it has double value in preventing the souring of perspiration. It is the souring of perspiration that people who perspire freely find so objectionable. Women who use this new talcum say it is wonderful for this purpose and that it is also an excellent, high grade toilet talcum. It is healing, soothing and delightfully fragrant. Of course, it is called La-may. It sells in the stores for only thirty cents. The package is also new. The box is so attractive that it makes a beautiful dressing table ornament. When you use this new La-may Talcum you will understand why it is almost impossible to get enough boxes to supply the great demand. If your local druggist has not got it yet he will cheerfully order it for you.

Beautify Your Hair with
"DANDERINE"

35c a bottle! Freshen your scalp! Stop falling hair! Remove dandruff! Have lots of wavy, glossy, beautiful hair! You can!

IF YOU care for heavy hair, that glistens with beauty and is radiant with life; has an incomparable softness and is fluffy and lustrous, try Danderine.

Just one application doubles the beauty of your hair; besides, it eradicates every particle of dandruff; you cannot have nice, heavy, healthy hair if you have dandruff. This destructive scruff robs the hair of its luster, its strength, and its very life, and if not overcome it produces a feverishness and itching of the scalp, the hair roots famish, loosen and die; then the hair falls out fast.

If your hair has been neglected and is thin, faded, dry, scraggy, or too oily, get a bottle of Knowlton's Danderine, apply a little as directed, and ten minutes after you will say this was the best investment you ever made.

We sincerely believe, regardless of everything else advertised, that if you desire soft, lustrous, beautiful hair and lots of it—no dandruff—no itching scalp and no more falling hair—you must use Knowlton's Danderine. If eventually, why not now?

Made to refresh you

when you need that moment's rest

TWENTY-FIVE years ago the great industrial leaders used to pride themselves on never taking a vacation. Ten years ago they came to realize that they could accomplish more by taking an occasional day's outing.

Today the men who produce most, plan their rest as carefully as they plan their work. They have found that a few minutes of relaxation snatched at frequent intervals is worth hours of recreation after exhaustion.

Theodore Roosevelt, in the midst of a tremendous day, could snatch five minutes' sleep at will. Steinmetz, the great inventor, gets the needed moment of relaxation by puffing a cigar.

There are a thousand ways of getting this instantaneous relief from tension.

Just washing the hands is one simple method of relaxation, for soap and water have an actual tonic effect on the system.

You can double the effectiveness of this simple act. Use Jergens Violet Soap the next time you wash your hands and see what a surprising amount of refreshment it gives you.

Jergens Violet Soap contains a special ingredient which is often prescribed by Physicians for its cooling and freshening effect. The mere enjoyment of washing with it intensifies its wonderfully refreshing quality. The instant it touches the water the fresh fragrance of living violets is released from its crystal depths. Its pure color, like clear emeralds, suggests refreshment. In the hardest water it lathers up rich and thick. The very qualities that give it its refreshing value make it particularly delightful for general use.

You can get Jergens Violet wherever soap is sold—15 cents a cake.

Send 6 cents—learn to double the refreshment of washing

For 6 cents we will mail you a small cake which will give you a new idea of how refreshing the simple act of washing your face and hands can be. The Andrew Jergens Co., 6532 Spring Grove Ave., Cincinnati, Ohio.

The dark Brunette Fascination

The care needed to keep its charm youthful

THIS warm, colorful type, with the deeper Oriental coloring of hair, skin and eyes, is given us here most charmingly by Mr. Desch.

Ah! Mademoiselle! Will you allow us to suggest? How better than by the use of Djer-Kiss Rouge and Djer-Kiss Face Powder!

That you may attain the natural charm which is your greatest charm—that you may find the natural brilliancy of coloring demanded by the beauty of your type—our artists recommend Djer-Kiss Princesse Jacqueline Rouge, toned and softened by Djer-Kiss Rachel Face Powder.

But you dark Brunettes will be on the watch ever, will you not, that you do not exaggerate this type by the over-use of coloring or powder? A delightful accent—a not-too-great accent—of your coloring is allowed. Yes. But you will use that accentuation of coloring naturally—wisely—always.

War's Most Lasting Victory

The new antiseptic which healed wounds like magic. Now used for infected gums, skin eruptions, dandruff, itching, etc.

Old standard antiseptics, used for centuries, had to be discarded completely, early in the war. Germ-infected wounds were causing more and more deaths among the wounded. American scientists solved the problem by producing the now famous chlorine antiseptic. It controlled blood-poison and lock-jaw, wounds often healing in one-fourth the usual time.

The public may now have this same wonderful healing agent, in the form of Kloria Tablets, used by dissolving in ordinary water, and very inexpensive.

Kloria doesn't smart, is soothing, harmless and not poisonous. Yet it destroys all germs on contact and heals more rapidly than was ever known before.

In tender, bleeding, shrinking gums, Kloria attacks the germ cause, with amazing results. All gum soreness and bleeding usually disappear in one week. It also makes the most effective mouth-wash for preventing tooth-decay, gum infections, tonsilitis and contagious diseases.

Kloria takes the place of all old-time healing salves and antiseptics. Cuts, sores, boils and burns often heal in one-fourth the usual time. Skin eruption and itching, eczema, dandruff, ivy poison, etc. promptly fade away. Kloria also destroys all offensive body odors instantly.

Sold by druggists or mailed prepaid for 50 cents. Money refunded if not entirely satisfied.

Package gives directions for making proper strength solutions for all uses. The liquid keeps perfectly in a bottle, ready for use.

YELLOW IS FAVORITE SUMMER COLOR by Corinne Lowe

[This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.]

NEW YORK.—(Special Correspondence.)—Walk down almost any country road in America just now, and, if the day is warm, you are fairly sure to see a vision in a yellow organdy frock and a yellow organdy hat. It doesn't make any difference whether she be brunette or blonde, or just sallow. She hasn't been able to withstand the yellow peril. For a certain bright, clear yellow is undoubtedly the most fashionable of summer shades, and it prevails in almost every type of wear.

A millinery salon nowadays looks something like an April field. It has come up in this dandelion tint, and nothing else seems to grow. Thus at the smartest of New York shops one finds, first, a citron straw, the short, straight brim of which is bound in yellow grosgrain ribbon. At the crown occurs a little cuff of straw, also bound in the inevitable color, and the crown itself is dented at one side to admit—guess what flower? Yes, yes, my bright child, it is buttercups. Near this occurs an organdy hat in primrose tint, trimmed with gold brocade ribbon, and beside this another yellow organdy is garlanded with buds and flowers in dark and pastel tints, both with the most fairylike frosting of silver.

For sports wear the felt hat is found in the most exclusive shops, and it, too, would rather be of yellow than any other shade. Thus, one of such sports hats which I saw the other day occurred in the bright, clear yellow of which I have spoken. It was mushroom in shape, and its only trimming was composed of smart little butterfly bows of gold ribbon that seemed to have alighted at haphazard over the crown and brim of the hat.

In the group of sports hats which we are showing today we begin at the left with a white velours de laine—which facric ries with felt for sports favoritism. It is effectively trimmed with grips of white patent leather stitched in lemon color and finally, confirming our pet thesis, by a quill of lemon color taffeta.

What was that little stanza Gilbert wrote in "Patience" about "the greenery, gallery young man"? Certainly we seem to be living up not only to the latter but to the greenery also. For more verdancy is located at the upper right, in both sports jacket and hat. The former is a stunning and unusual model in gray velours de laine, lined with green China silk and repeating this tint in the yarn embroidery. The hat accompanying is of white duck with green lining and green grosgrain ribbon.

In the matter of our summer frocks we have really two distinct choices. Our organdy, or batiste, or cotton voile may be made up in simple chemise style, with a big sash giving it a long-waisted and often a bloused effect. Or it may be of the basqued and wide skirted variety which takes us back to the times when we sat for daguerrotypes. The latter is really more charming, and, after all, our chances for being feminine these days, for living down the "ologies" within us, are so scant that it seems as if we ought to avail ourselves of the few avenues left to us.

And what could be more feminine than the two organdy frocks in the center of the page except three excuses for the same delinquency? At the left comes a charming Victorian creation of orchid organdy made up over taffeta of the same color. The quaint sleeves are of the unlined organdy, and the orchard taffeta bodice is trimmed with an applique of flat flowers in such tints as brown, blue, rose, and silver. Bias bands of organdy with hemstitched finish are applied to the skirt, and the fastening of the basque is by means of a temperate bow. The hat which goes with this is a film of orchid tulle and gray lace centered by one large, pink rose.

Another equally charming color arrangement is found in the second frock, which poises an overskirt of ash rose organdy over gray taffeta. The basque of gray taffeta is lined with cherry, and the skirt is appliqued with narrow satin ribbons punctuated by pompons. A hat of rose organdy is made to accompany this.

As a rule, the sash does not occur in a frock with a basque. There are, however, artful exceptions to this rule, and the fact of it is that sashes go as much with the summer of 1920 as they go with the toreador. Often these sashes are not of cut lengths of the material. They are of ribbon—wide ribbons that afford a balmy relief from the shoestring era—and there doesn't seem to be any kind of ribbon which the obliging manufacturer refuses to make up for us.

For example, the frock of plain color georgette may now engage the services of a printed georgette sash echoing precisely in its ground color the material of the dress. This, by the way, is a style of frock much encountered just now. Then, too, there are the foulard dresses with sashes of foulard ribbon to match, to say nothing of striped taffeta frocks with taffeta ribbon to coincide. just as somebody said the other day, every little material has a ribbon of its own.

The tulle sash is also much in evidence, and in this connection it may be mentioned that the white organdy with a sash of black tulle is exceedingly smart just now. Indeed, the white organdy embroidered in black is at present so correct that it is almost monotonous. More electrifying are the new white organdies with inset black tulle as a substitute for the ebon needlework.

Along with the sash we find the apron. This is often a real honest to kitchen one—a little thing tying in the back with strings—exactly like on the one which Mary wears to answer the front door. These aprons are saucy on the flowered voiles, in which case the apron as well as the fichu is of white organdy. And, of course, the apron is ruffled!

Third, a creation of orchid taffeta and orchid organdy receives as its final touch the flat flowers of harmonizing tones appliqued to the bodice. This is worn with a hat composed of gray tulle lace and orchid tulle finished by one pink rose. The fourth costume is ash rose organdy combined with gray taffeta, the skirt of which is adorned by narrow satin ribbons and pompoms.

Next is a riding cap of gray faille which shows black cord seams, and last is a sports jacket of gray velours de laine lined with green china silk and stitched in green wool and accompanied by a white duck hat lined with green.

The event for which discriminating women of Chicago have learned to wait.

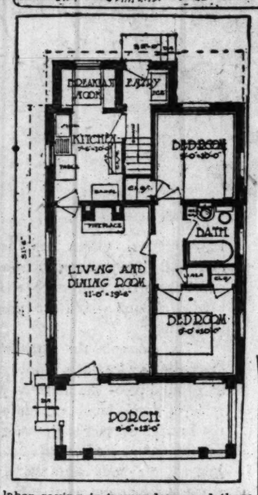
COURTESY PERMANENT BUILDING BUREAU



PRACTICAL AS A FLAT.

EDWARD CARPENTER says somewhere that man is the only animal whose dwelling is an offense to the landscape. The nests of birds and the burrows of beasts fit into the general scheme of things and seem part of the woodland or prairie. Only man's houses, with their stilted, artificial pretentiousness, break the harmony and introduce a jarring note.

The criticism is overdrawn, but it has a large measure of truth, and that truth helps to account for the popularity of the bungalow. Generally speaking, the bungalow fits into the landscape much better than the more formal or pretentious house. Unfortunately, in getting this artistic effect, too many builders have forgotten that the chief purpose of any home is to afford comfortable living quarters for a family. The bungles of the bungalow are not apparent from without, but far too frequently they show on the inside. Drafty rooms, lack of privacy, waste of space—these defects are lamentably common, and many a bungalow that is a joy to the eye is an offense to the housekeeper.

Not one item of that charge can be brought against the little dwelling shown here. Its beauty is obvious; it fits the landscape; it looks as natural as the trees that shade it; and when you get inside, you find it as practical as the most up to date city flat.

The entrance door leads directly into a living room 11 feet wide by 19 feet 6 inches long. The fireplace is at the farther end, in a sheltered, cozy spot that invites you to sit down and be comfortable. The room is well lighted, both from the porch end and from the left side, but there is no waste of wall space. Only a single door pierces the right hand wall; the rest of the space on that side and much on the other is available for the placing of pictures and furniture, a fact which makes the ample room seem larger still.

To the left of the fireplace is the entrance to the kitchen, a small room, with every inch of space utilized. Sink and table are on one side, cabinet on the other; the range is placed against the central chimney which cares for the living room fireplace. But at the farther end of the kitchen is a feature which explains how this little home can devote so much space to the main living quarters.

This feature is a breakfast nook, an alcove overlooking the garden, and equipped with a table and built-in seats. Not only breakfast but all informal meals can be taken in such a place, and five families out of six would prefer to have them so. The plate in shape to be eaten, not soggy with the long wait to save a long trip. The outlook over the garden while eating is not the least of the nook's attractions.

When entertaining, of course, the table will be set in the living room. By this simple device, by recognizing that a formal dining room is the least used part of the average small home and would be used still less if there were a substitute for it, the architect has contrived to give this little bungalow much of the spaciousness of a big house.

The rear entry has a place for the ice box, another labor saving device, and gives access to the basement stairs.

Coming back to the living room, the solitary door in the right hand wall as you face the fireplace opens on a small hall which leads to the two bedrooms, each 9 feet by 10, with a bathroom and linen closet between them. The privacy of this arrangement is as complete as could be secured by putting the bedrooms upstairs, while the saving of work effected by the one floor plan needs no comment.

The walls of this home are built of common brick. The informal, homelike quality of such brick fits the unpretentious architecture, and at the same time lends solidity to a dwelling that might look too slight if built of less substantial materials. Brick do not depreciate at all for years and then slowly; they need no paint; they are fireproof and time proof.

To carry out this enduring, fire resisting construction, the interior plaster is laid on metal lath, and the roof is covered with asphalt shingles.

For a family with one child or with two children of the same sex, this house will be entirely satisfactory.

labor saving is tremendous, and there are other gains to be considered. With the table only two or three steps from the range, pancakes may come to their own again, and waffles can reach the Gone for the Day.

My boss had given me some special work to do, and had departed, saying he would not return that day. It was exceedingly warm and to work was torture. Putting my books and papers away, I selected the most comfortable chair in his office and sat down to read a magazine which I found on his desk. You can imagine my chagrin when he returned in an hour and asked for the work. J. W.

A Bright Idea.

Being a bachelor and somewhat absent minded, I often experience considerable inconvenience by forgetting little things which I plan to do. Last Eastertime, however, I hit upon a plan which appeared to be a feasible solution of my difficulty. I had seen a clever, papier maché hen filled with eggs of candy which would make a suitable gift for a little niece of mine whose birthday chances to fall on Easter day, and I decided to inaugurate my plan. So I put a large pencil notation upon a good sized piece of paper and tucked it conspicuously in the ribbon band of my derby. Try to imagine my consternation and horror when, after riding sixty blocks on a crowded car, I arrived at the office and found on my hat, in glaring scribe, this auspicious legend: "Stop for that chicken on Main street tonight"! H. L.

Didn't Wait to be Asked.

A young man asked me to go to a dance. Wishing to go with another boy who I was quite sure intended to ask me, I thoughtlessly replied, "I'm sorry, but I am going with John." "That sounds good to me," said a voice behind me, and, looking around, I discovered John—he had heard the whole conversation. P. S.

A Disappearing Act.

I was standing in a grocery store, chatting to a clerk, and suddenly decided to be seated on a barrel—thinking the top of it was tightly nailed on

It was not, however, for down I went. I finally landed with nothing to be seen of me but my head and feet. Every one in the store had a good laugh before I was assisted out of the barrel. C. O. J.

Preferred to Motor.

I was waiting for a street car, which was about a block away, when I noticed a friend in his car. I was so intent trying to attract his attention that I did not realize the street car had reached the corner on which I was standing, and the motorman upon hearing me call to my friend, said: "Isn't my car good enough?" Of course every one standing on the front platform laughed at me. You may be sure I didn't take that car. E. K. V.

The Secret of their Flavor

Dyer's Pork and Beans have won their favor through their SEALED-IN flavor

We seal it in by packing the choicest beans and hermetically sealing them in the can before the final cooking.

In this way the beans, the generous portions of tomato sauce and the slice of tender pork are cooked together without an iota of the flavor escaping.

The result is a delicious, flavory, wholesome table need—and a real treat. Try them. At all good grocers.

Shoes men are buying for summer comfort

Many new types for outing and everyday wear

At the seashore or in the mountains—on the street or at the tennis court—wherever you go this summer you will see Keds.

These light, springy canvas shoes are ideal for work or play in warm weather. Their elastic rubber soles put new life in your step. Their soft, pliable fabric makes them always cool and comfortable.

Keds are just the thing for games or any kind of summer wear. They allow the foot full freedom with just the right support. They always give a perfect grip, whether you are playing a fast set of tennis or standing on the smooth deck of a motor boat. It is because of these features that Keds are so popular for every vacation need.

Other types of Keds

Besides these standard types Keds are made in many special models for different purposes—high shoes and low shoes, with or without heels, in many weights, shapes, and colors. There are sturdy work shoes, light gymnasium shoes, and heavy reinforced models for hiking and rough service.

Some of the latest models are made like leather shoes, with regular welt construction soles and firmly boxed toes. This means a more formal, dignified shoe—just the shoe you have needed to wear with your white flannels or Palm Beach suit.

With these additions, Keds are now a complete line of canvas summer shoes—ranging from the easy, less formal tennis shoe to the latest and most fashionable styles of footwear. Last year millions of pairs of Keds were worn by men, women and children.

Keds are made only by the United States Rubber Company—the oldest and largest rubber organization in the world. You will find them at every good shoe store. Ask to see the various models—notice how wonderfully light, cool and comfortable they are.

Look for the name Keds on the sole.

For men and women $1.50—$7.00
For children $1.15—$4.50

The Yeast Treatment

by Antoinette Donnelly

What's your beauty ill? Too fat? Too thin? Shy on hair? Oily hair, oily skin, freckles, pimples, or blackheads? Flat chested or flat footed? Write to me. I have a tonic, a diet, or a set of exercises for what ails you and you're welcome to mine and to all the advice I can give you. If you wish a personal reply send a stamped, addressed envelope. Address Antoinette Donnelly, the Chicago Sunday Tribune.

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

If one may judge from the mail received in this department the world of beauty ills is surrounded by fat folk trying to get thin, thin folk trying to get fat, folk trying to restore departing locks and the rest trying to recover the unblemished skin of youth. Many of the three former types are included in the clear skin hunters.

As a presidential candidate the man or woman who could reduce the high cost of heartaches over skin troubles would have the White House job without opposition from any other party.

Diet and Regular Habits.

But, seriously, what can be done for the ills referred to? First, they must be considered, in the average case, as emanating from internal disturbance and not of local origin. The diet and regular habits of living will regulate the condition of the skin. If these important items are abused the result is advertised by the blemished skin of the face. Excessive cleanliness is another item.

But the diet must be sane, wholesome, with a preponderance of fresh fruits and coarse vegetables and whole cereals and an avoidance of the rich, spicy or greasy foods. The bowels must be kept in regular condition, daily movements being absolutely necessary to a clear skin and bright eyes. Drink freely of water to keep the intestinal tract clean but not to wash down incompletely masticated food. And the daily bath—the warm bath at night and a cold shower or plunge in the morning.

Keep Pores Clean.

Sometimes the pimples on the skin are blackheads that have been allowed to remain until they fester. The oil glands become infected with pus producing germs present on the skin surface. So that the first care is to keep the pores free from dust and grime and that must be done by a correct cleansing of the face every night before retiring. The face brush is almost necessary where any trouble has begun and a scrubbing with a good bland soap and hot water, rinsed off in warm water and finished off with a cold rinse or an ice rub to close the pores.

Sometimes, however, the blackheads result from digestive disturbance and other internal functions gone wrong. And for such cases and cases of chronic breaking out of the skin an excellent and harmless remedy is one half of a compressed yeast cake or any good yeast used for baking taken with each meal from four to eight weeks. Mix the yeast with enough water, orange or other fruit juice to make it drinkable. Some people can take it in the cake as they eat a biscuit.

Known in Ancient Times.

That yeast possess curative properties was appreciated in the olden times, says the Journal of American Medical Association. Hippocrates recommended its use and the monks used it for treatment of the plague.

It was found in tests made recently by the medical profession that the yeast treatment gave the best results in acne and constipation. The laxative effect of the yeast was observed in cases other than those of constipation. In fact, in some instances the laxative effect was so pronounced that it was necessary to reduce the dosage.

It was found, too, that killed yeast [which means yeast killed by treating it with boiling water] was better for people with gas formation.

"Whether the success of yeast in acne vulgaris and acne rosacea is due alone to its laxative action or to some mixed effect on the intestinal tract, we are unable to say," further states the Journal. "In many cases which came under our observation, the yeast treatment caused an improvement in the general physical condition of the patient."

Has Fattening Tendency.

The person with a tendency to fat may find that if the yeast treatment promotes better assimilation of food it may fatten. But fat people as a general thing have less skin trouble than thin, so that the thin may accomplish some developing in the treatment. But even the fat may be removed after by a more abstemious diet. It is fattening only under certain conditions, however.

The popularity of the yeast cure has arrived at the point where many restaurants will supply the demand for their patrons.

To oppose constipation and improve digestion, therefore, the treatment is highly recommended. It is recommended also for "rum blossoms," a condition more often found in teetotalers than the opposite, where the nose and cheeks are red and covered with obstinate pimples and frequently oily skin.

I have received from readers a few letters advising the use of yeast as a paste to be applied externally, as a beautifier, and enthusiastic testimony as to its value.

S. V.: BLACKHEADS REQUIRE extra attention daily in the face washing process. Get a good soap. First, cleanse the face with a good cleansing cream (if you haven't knowledge of such I will send you a formula for a good one). Then with warm water and a camel's hair scrubbing brush scrub the face thoroughly. Rinse with warm water; then rinse off with ice cold water or rub ice over the face to close the pores. Before the cold rinse press out as many blackheads as you can. It takes time and patience to correct this kind of facial blemish. Drink three pints of water a day. And avoid rich, greasy and fat foods, substituting green vegetables and fruits as much as possible.

BUSINESS GIRL: HAIR, HEELS, and nails! Yes, with the addition of clean, clear skin and appropriate dress you have the requisites of a smart looking business girl. Cleanliness is the greatest of these virtues, for that being a dominating virtue the well kept hand, straight heels, and neat nails follow as surely as the night follows day. Appropriate dress will exclude temptation to lace stockings, to boudoir blouses, and to ballroom slippers.

ROMA: MARRIED OR SINGLE, rich or poor, work is the greatest blessing in the world. Why talk of work as a punishment? Think of how real a punishment it would be if you were robbed of the capacity to work! Empty hours, empty hands, empty hearts are the things which age women far more than the busiest moments of her life could do. Never grumble again because you must work. "For labor, the common lot of man, is part of a kind Creator's plan."

MRS. E.: DON'T USE AMMONIA on the hair. It is too brittling and drying. A little borax used occasionally won't do it any harm.

FOR AND BY BUSINESS GIRLS BY LORETTA KING

ON THE WRONG ROAD.

THE woman who enters the business world with no other qualifications than a charming manner and attractive appearance, expecting success on the strength of personality alone, is usually treated to a rude and unpleasant awakening.

It should be the aim of every business woman to take the utmost care of her personal appearance by keeping in good physical condition and dressing herself becomingly and in good taste and to promote a feeling of good fellowship from her associates to herself by a pleasant and normally sympathetic manner. But these qualifications alone cannot be counted upon as an "open sesame" to success.

I have a frank and interesting letter from a young woman who started out to charm her way to success in the business world as she had done in society. It is a good "get busy" story of the difficulties met and, by reason of her common sense, ultimately overcome:

"Dear Miss King: I don't know whether many girls start their business careers with the wild and impracticable ideas I had when I got my first job. I hope there aren't many as foolish as I was but, if there are, my experience might save them from exposing themselves to the humiliation I felt on several occasions.

"A chain of circumstances, one link of which was the accidental death of my young husband, made it necessary for me to think of earning my living. My ideas on the subject were very vague. I was pretty and had always been popular with a certain gay young crowd, and I foolishly believed that it was as simple to make one's way in business as in society.

"A friend of my father's got a position for me in a bank. It pleased me, as a bank seemed like a dignified and sort of exclusive place to earn one's living. My first great shock came with the small salary I was offered, but as I knew other women in the bank got big salaries I consoled myself with the thought that I would soon be one of the important members of the staff. I had absolutely no training. I was given the simplest tasks to do, and, not liking the work, did them badly. In spite of this fact I had visions of myself as head of one of the various departments.

"One of the girls in the office went to the trouble of warning me that I would have to be more careful about my work or my numerous mistakes would get me into trouble. I can feel myself blushing when I recall that I told this girl that I didn't have to bother about such details, as I was destined for one of the big jobs in the bank.

"It wasn't long after the above incident that I was told politely but firmly that I wasn't suited for work in a bank. That was a great blow to me, but when another friend kindly recommended me for a position with a large importing house I forgot my humiliation and was soon seeing new visions of myself in an important position.

"I had a gay time for a while, as I had many invitations from the men of the company to dinners, theaters, and dances. However, as I spent a great deal of time chatting with the men, or making arrangements for my numerous engagements, my work had to be taken care of by the other girls in the office. This didn't appeal to them, and a number of complaints found their way to the manager.

"In dismissing me the manager told me a few plain truths about myself and my ability for a business career.

"The interview was an extremely painful one for me, but it had the effect of stirring up a real ambition in me to equal the success of some of the women with whom I had been associated in my brief career.

"I determined to fit myself by study and training for a definite line of work. This I did, and when I felt myself ready for a job I got one without help from any one.

"I have been working three years and in that time have done some difficult and strenuous work. The way to success is just beginning to be visible to me, but it is not because I am the prettiest or best dressed girl in the office, but because I have learned to do my work thoroughly and efficiently that I can see the way clear before me.

Man, get this straight! Foot suffering is needless!

You don't have to endure any foot suffering. Science has made your escape so easy, so simple that you needn't endure it another day—not one

Do your feet tire easily — lose their "spring"—seem heavy when you've walked a short distance?

Are there pains in your insteps—tender spots on your heels?

Do your toes feel pinched in your shoes—your nerves seem to be tied in a knot so that you come home fagged—impatient to rest your aching feet and body?

Watch out! The arches in your feet are weak. They're sagging from their normal position—are flattening out under the strain of your body's weight. If you neglect them, the distressing condition known as "flat foot" is almost certainly ahead of you.

Dr. Scholl's Foot-Eazer holds the arch in its correct position. It eases the feet, body and nerves—puts the spring back into your step. For men, women and children

To avert this physicians and orthopedic specialists agree there's just one thing you can do wisely. As Dr. J. Madison Taylor, Professor of Applied Therapeutics, Temple University, puts it, "The obvious thing to do," he says, "is to brace up these sagging arches. Give them the proper support at once."

The "proper support" must be designed according to correct scientific principles and it must be selected for you and fitted to your foot by an expert.

How to make sure of the correct support

There is a support for weak or strained arch that's been proved correct by years of successful use—the Foot-Eazer invented by the internationally known foot specialist, Dr. Wm. M. Scholl of Chicago. It is a simple, scientific device that you can wear invisibly inside your regular shoes. It relieves your aching feet at once and in due time, by holding the arch in position until nature can take the job again, corrects the cause of the trouble.

Go, today, to the shoe or department store in your community that sells Dr. Scholl's Appliances and Remedies. There you will find a graduate Practipedist—a foot expert—trained in Dr. Scholl's own methods of giving foot comfort.

He'll gladly, without charge, demonstrate the Foot-Eazer and fit it snugly in your shoe. One step and you can prove its comfort! The cost—depending on the type you need—will be mighty small.

Get relief today—simple, easy, inexpensive

What ever your foot trouble, there's a proved Dr. Scholl's Appliance or Remedy for it—at that store.

With quick relief and permanent correction so easy, so inexpensive to obtain, don't, don't keep on suffering from foot troubles.

Thousands upon thousands of men, women and children have regained shapely, strong and comfortable feet with Dr. Scholl's Appliances and Remedies. And you can. See your dealer today.

How to Use the Patterns

JUST the sort of morning dress or apron that many housekeepers prefer is pattern No. 9684. It is cut in one piece and made to be slipped on over the head. Even though this is only a sort of apron, it is well worth while taking pains to make it well. Whatever material it is made of should be thoroughly shrunken and the color set. It will press more easily and smoothly if rolled up before it is dry, and be careful to pull the cloth straight and iron well.

Allow for a five or six inch hem around the bottom, and use French seams in putting together. Either set a two inch gusset in under the arm or reinforce the seam at that point by hemming a half-inch bias banding over the seam. The seam curves so under the arm it is apt to tear unless one of these precautions is used.

A rather coarse rickrack braid will be pretty to finish all edges with—such as the tops of the pockets, the belt and collar edges. It should be set on the wrong side, so that one-half of its width shows on the right side, and should be stitched twice—once on the edge of the surface to which it is to be attached and once at the proper distance to catch the lower points.

No. 9674 is a long-waisted dress for a young girl and is especially appropriate for thin materials. The crisp, sheer organdies or lovely flowered muslins will make up beautifully and the ruffles can be of the dress material plainly hemmed, or lace trimmed. If a plain colored organdie is used the ruffles could be finished with a picot edge.

If lace is used it should be sewed on by hand, and holding it towards you in the sewing makes it just right as to fullness.

Shrink the material for the band, wetting and drying it at least twice. And be sure and make it an "easy" measure. If it is at all tight it will have a tendency to "ride" up.

No. 9029 is a pretty design for a summer afternoon dress. Cotton crepe, gingham, cotton voile, organdie, muslin or in fact any wash material would make up attractively. If you wish to make it rather dressy, finish the lower edge of the skirt with scallops, bound in the same or some contrasting color. The skirt should have the bottom turned up in a hem first and then the scallops cut through the two thicknesses.

If scallops are used on the skirt, smaller ones could be made as a finish for the sash ends and the pocket laps. And if the sleeves are short, the scallops will make an attractive finish there.

Be sure before cutting out the skirt to apply your own length measures to the pattern, being especially careful about the side and back lengths. These lengths in a straight skirt are measured from the bottom, up; the lower edge of the skirt always being straight.

If the long sleeve is used, be sure the seam is basted together so there is no twist. After it is basted hold the sleeve up and see if the outside fold is smooth—if it is not rip the seam and put together so the outside fold is perfectly smooth.

Speaking of Blondes.

"Dear Miss Blake: Blonde haired people have always been a thorn in my sight and I have sworn many times that I would never become very intimate with any one bearing such a crown. But, as we all come to realize sooner or later, love cannot be controlled and it will have its way in spite of our shallow dislikes. Up until a month ago I pictured in my mind a blonde haired girl playing the rôle of the lowest character in plays and any crime committed by a woman I attributed to a blonde. Now, alas, these foolish, narrow views on a God created characteristic have been rudely upset by the charm of just such a woman—a blonde—and I'm powerless to maintain my former dislikes for that color hair. It seems like a whip over me as a punishment, and there's only one way to pacify me—marriage. Yes, she's willing and now I respect and almost love every one with light hair. Strange, isn't it, how ideas, nourished through years of contact with the hated object, come to such a sudden collapse and then reverse?

"CONVERTED TO BLONDISM."

How started the blonde antipathy? Some school day broken love dream? Restitution seems all mapped out for you, does it not? Being such an intense young person, I trust you will not go to the extreme of loving them all, though.

She Doubts Him.

"Dear Miss Blake: When a young lady with whom you have been keeping company for a length of time continually tells you that you lie when you always tell her the truth, what would you do in that case?

"A CONTINUOUS READER."

I would tell her she was not ladylike, at least. If that was not enough I would give her a good talking to and tell her it grieves you to have her express so little faith in you.

Why Not Ask Him?

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a girl 17 years old and like a fellow of 19. Every time we are alone he treats me nice, but when we are with others he doesn't seem to pay any attention to me at all. How can I get him to like me?

"M. M."

When you are alone you might inquire why he treats you so funny? Perhaps he does not realize his fault.

BIRD LORE by Doris Blake

THERE is an endless amount of lore woven around birds. Last week I gave you some general lore, but did not touch on doves or pigeons, about which there seems to be much meaning for the superstitious.

The appearance of a white dove at the window means in some countries a recovery, while in others it is interpreted to mean an angel has come to take away a soul.

In India a young woman whose husband is away reads a sign he will soon return if she sees a pair of doves.

If you hear the first notes of a dove in spring while you are lying down, you will have ill health for a year; if you are walking, good health; if sitting, just fair.

The pigeon is supposed to look well to its own stomach; hence pigeontoed people are said to be stingy.

Feed strange pigeons and they will bring you true friends.

The cooing of a strange dove in your window is the sign of coming glad intelligence.

In India pigeons are thought to bring good luck. They are carefully reared in houses, which they are believed to keep from decay.

Pigeons flying in a ring over a body of water give a sign of rain.

When the doves around the dovecote make a more than ordinary cooing and pass incessantly in and out of their cotes, it is a sure sign that there is to be a change of weather.

It is bad luck to drive a dove or pigeon out of the house.

When pigeons stand in a perfect row on the ridge pole of a house it is a sign of receiving a present within a week.

It is lucky to see a crow sitting on one leg.

When crows forsage a flock it is a sign of famine.

To see a crow flying alone is a sign of disappointment.

Rooks building in a house is a sign of prosperity.

There is a widespread belief in the ominous croaking of the crow.

When you see jim crows flying and crying in the early fall, prepare for winter, for it is a sign of cold weather.

If the first crow you see in the spring is flying, you will soon take a journey.

If rooks desert a rookery, it is a sign of the downfall of the family to whom it belongs.

My Funniest Childhood Adventure

What was the most amusing thing you did as a youngster? You must have been up to some tricks. We'd like to hear about it. Address Funniest Childhood Adventures, Chicago Tribune. Don't get this contest mixed with Bright Sayings. It's deeds we want to hear about. The Tribune will pay $1 for every letter published.

Wanted to Join the Circus.

Years ago my chum and I decided to become bare back riders. Fondly picturing ourselves as "Queens of the Arena" we practiced faithfully on our long suffering old "family" horse.

When circus day arrived we donned our best clothes, mounted our steed and unknown to our parents rode to the grounds. We found the manager superintending the raising of the big top and hastened to lay our plan before him.

He looked at us and our nag a long time then took a hard coughing spell. When he recovered his voice he explained carefully that he had plenty of performers at present; that we were younger than he usually hired—we were 10 and 11 respectively but that he would bear us in mind. He further added that we had a fine horse. Then he gave us "comps" for the afternoon performance and we rode home content. R. G.

Shocking the Neighbors.

My mother was a very well known figure in the neighborhood, clad in blue wrapper and blue sunbonnet. She was very prim and sedate and indulged in no worldly amusements. Our neighbor owned a kicking broncho. One day in the spirit of fun I donned my mother's wrapper and sunbonnet and mounted the broncho. Every time the broncho threw me I let out a wild whoop and soon the neighboring fences were lined with shocked women, who recognized the wrapper and bonnet and thought my mother had gone crazy and was trying to break the broncho. Wrong Kind of Wings.

I once attempted to fly from the roof of a chicken house with a pair of swimming wings under my arms. I did not succeed in soaring very far up in air, and the dull thud of the solid earth convinced me that I had not yet solved the problem of aerial navigation. F. W.

Her First Play.

At my first visit to a theater the play was "The Two Orphans." An older sister took me to a matinée and we occupied two seats in the front row of the balcony. The blind orphan had been hidden in the second story of the ramshackle hut by the horrid witch and her son. Her sister coming to find her, said: "Where is my blind sister?" I stood up, leaned over the balcony, and screamed out, "She's upstairs." I was so interested and excited, I was sure the play was real. The audience became vastly interested in me and my sister hastily arose and took me home. C. T.

Whole Town Heard It.

When I was a small boy I was much interested in a little maiden in my class at school. One day I wrote her a note, which read something like this:

"Dearest One: How are you? Under the said circumstances, I, under the name of King George, feel it my duty to wed you. Please consent."

Before I could pass the note, the teacher seized it and read it. After which she announced that I would read it before the whole town that night. At 9 o'clock everyone in town was assembled (including my family). I was compelled to read the note, and the laughter that greeted me when I finished cured me of note writing. The girl, however, is now my wife. A. W.

Under Great Provocation.

My father was a stockman in the Ozark region of Missouri. When a lad of 10 one of my onerous duties was to be on watch at the feeding racks and pick up the hay the wasteful animals threw to the ground. One big fellow was particularly greedy and managed to waste more than he ate. One evening by way of getting even with him I stood behind him prodding him lightly on the hind foot with my pitchfork. He stamped about uneasily for a while—then gave such a vicious kick that the fork lodged in his foot and the handle was flung out of my hands. After a mad scramble I extricated the fork, but the way that steer's foot bled paralyzed me with fear.

I must get the bleeding stopped before my stern father came on the scene. I grabbed a handfull of mud near the watering trough, crept cautiously up to the wounded foot, and just as I applied the mud the enraged steer registered his second kick. It came with such force that I landed against the rear wall of the shed—unconscious.

Father picked me up, and when I came to instead of the expected punishment, he assured me that he believed I had had great provocation, and if there had been a transgression the steer had administered sufficient punishment. M. C. M.

If We Couldn't Tell a Lie

Real Love Stories

Do you know a real love story—one that is stranger than fiction? It is the idea that is wanted. No attention will be paid to literary style. The Tribune will pay $5 for every story published. No manuscripts returned. Address Doris Blake, The Sunday Tribune, Chicago.

PATIENT GRISELDA.

IT is one of the oldest love stories in the world and has always been popular, but this generation is so far from it in spirit that I fear my heroine will have but little sympathy. For, as you will see, she was Patient Griselda in a New England town.

A man loved a maid in a New England village as men have loved maids since time began. But fair Huldah was the eldest of six children and her mother was dead. She refused to marry Henry because "father and the children "needed her."

Was it revenge or cruelty, stupidity, or just a longing to get as near Huldah as possible? Henry courted her younger sister, Elizabeth, who promptly accepted him. Did she rejoice, as girls have been known to do, over getting her sister's "beau" away from her? I think it more likely that Huldah and Henry had been so discreet in their affair that she never guessed that Henry had been, or had wished to be, more than a friend to Huldah.

Huldah helped to sew for Elizabeth and to mark her linen; she made the wedding cake and trimmed the house with wild flowers and "stood up" with her sister without ever betraying that it cost her a pang; and she went on, cooking, sewing, and keeping house for "father and the children" until father died and the children, children no longer, married.

Meanwhile Henry's home became full to overflowing. A modern woman shudders to hear that Elizabeth bore twelve children, four of whom died in infancy; but she is not surprised to hear that Elizabeth died before the age of 50. Thereupon, with an innocence or an impudence truly colossal, Henry returned to Huldah and again asked her to marry him. Which she did and brought up her sister's children, the most devoted aunt and stepmother who ever lived.

Did I not say she was Patient Griselda? What did she get out of it? Ah, women who loved had not then learned to ask that question; they gave. M. W.

Practical and Fancy Needlework By Clotilde

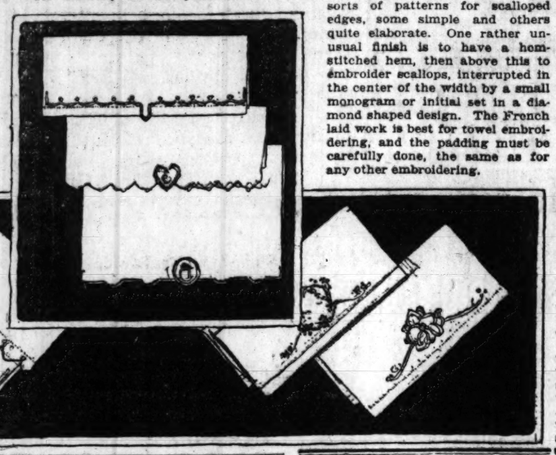
Questions on sewing will be answered if a stamped, addressed envelope is inclosed. Address Clotilde, Chicago Sunday Tribune.

TOWELS AN ACCEPTABLE GIFT.

A MOST acceptable gift to a prospective bride, a prospective mother, or, in fact, to any woman who keeps house would be a set of, say, six towels. They may be the small "guest" towel or the same or a smaller sized one for the baby's layette, or the ordinary sized hand towel for the bathroom.

Today such a gift is indeed an expensive one, for all linens are so high in price; but if you buy the toweling by the yard and make them up yourself there will be a considerable saving, and no more delightful pick-up work can be imagined.



Fine bird's-eye linen or huckaback is fine for the towels, three-fourths of an eighteen inch width being suitable for the baby and one yard of twenty-seven inch width for a regular sized towel. The guest towel may be the same size as that for the layette.

Beautifully hemstitched ends, with a single initial or a monogram embroidered in the center of the width, above the hem on one end, will make an attractive gift. Then there are all sorts of patterns for scalloped edges, some simple and others quite elaborate. One rather unusual finish is to have a hemstitched hem, then above this to embroider scallops, interrupted in the center of the width by a small monogram or initial set in a diamond shaped design. The French laid work is best for towel embroidering, and the padding must be carefully done, the same as for any other embroidering.

Bow knots, hearts, and other designs are pretty for framing the initial.

Designs in cross stitch done in one or several colors make an attractive decoration for towels.

Then any pretty hand made insertion, set in above a one inch hem, makes a pleasing variation, and the opposite end may be finished simply with a hemstitched hem.

In making a gift of six towels it is interesting to have the finish different on each, or, at least, to have not more than two the same.

Perhaps a few words about hemstitching may not come amiss, although it is work that many women are familiar with.

If worked from right to left, fasten the thread in the hem, beginning at the right hand side, taking up the desired number of threads, and draw the thread through. Put the needle back and take up the same number of threads, inserting the needle just above, in the fold of the hem.

"I have subscribed to three magazines, but find that I have no time to read them. If you know of any lonely shut-in who would like to read them, I would gladly have the publishers forward them direct to the applicant free of any obligations. My sister has also subscribed to two and would like to transfer them. I am trying to follow the Boy Scouts' motto, 'Do a good Turn Every Day.' R. J."

Needs Baby Clothes.

"I am the mother of three children and expecting the stork next month. My husband is in the hospital and I have no one to help me. I need baby clothes. Could you assist me, please? "MRS. A. D."

In such circumstances as this a mother needs all the help that can be spared for her. I hope to be asked for her address.

Asks for Tricycle.

"I wonder if your corner could do me a favor. My little girl was hurt and her right leg is very stiff at times. I would like to know if one of your kind readers has a tricycle that is not in use any more. It would keep her leg in action and thereby prevent paralysis. They are too expensive for me to even think of buying now. "MRS. W. K."

For an Amateur Photographer.

"Who would like to have trays and dark lantern for developing pictures? "MRS. G. S."

This will attract some amateur photographer, I know. Please make application soon.

Vessels for Fireless Cooker.

"I have a rather unusual request to present. A friend gave me a perfectly good fireless cooker, except that there are no utensils with it. I wonder if some of your wonder cornerites could help me out. Will gladly pay express or call. MRS. E. F."

Wheel Chair for Invalid.

"I am a constant reader of your valuable column, and as you have made so many people happy, I thought perhaps you could help me, too. I have had several operations and can get around a little on crutches. I have not been able to work for over nine months. The doctor tells me I ought to get out in the fresh air. To do that I must have a wheel chair. Do you think you could assist me in securing one? L. M."

It would be splendid if a wheel chair could be given or loaned to this invalid girl so that she might have the outdoor air.

Your Corset two months from now

IF ONLY one had a kind of "second sight" when it comes to buying a corset! When it's brand new, it looks well, and may fit well—then—but what of its appearance and condition after two months' wear?

With an ordinary corset it is impossible to tell, but with a Warner's Rust-Proof one knows that it will be fresh and well-shaped as new.

Fresh—because a Warner's Rust-Proof can be washed. Just slip into the bathroom and rinse it out.

Well-shaped—because a Warner's Rust-Proof is made right. It is double-boned, which means that it is flexible enough to yield with every motion of your body and firm enough to hold its shape. Yet this double-boning adds nothing to the weight.

The corset cloth will not split, no matter how tightly it is drawn.

Every stitch, hook, and steel of a Warner's Rust-Proof corset has been put in to stay. That's why it is guaranteed—GUARANTEED NOT TO RUST, BREAK, OR TEAR.

That's why a Warner's Rust-Proof corset is the most economical corset. Just figure the cost per day—divide the moderate price you pay for your Warner's Rust-Proof by the number of days you can wear it. Then you have the true basis for figuring corset cost.

When you buy a Warner's Rust-Proof you have the comfortable feeling that you have not only bought an economical corset but a corset of style as well. It brings out the good points of your figure and holds it to fashion's prevailing silhouette, especially if you have us fit them—for which no charge is made. Warner's corsets at

Because of the fact that all America will have its eyes on this sale the makers felt it imperative as a protection for their future business to remove their trade marks from the suits, for it is almost unbelievable to see such suits selling at the low prices we have made; fully a third of the suits are worth more indeed than the values we have placed on them.

Materials—Fast color all-wool unfinished worsteds, worsted flannels, cheviots, cassimeres, velours, homespuns and tweeds.

The Last Word in Paris Fashions

THROUGH A FRENCH SUMMER.

By Mary Brush Williams.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

PARIS.—[Special correspondence.]—Mannikins in satins, mannikins in spangles, mannikins in billows of tulle, and belted in jade, and sparkling in cut steel, and undulating in softly clinging metal tinsel draperies, mannikins dragging fairy trains—the whole procession of them passed and repassed, retraced their footsteps, stood patiently before the critical visitors to the salon, and disappeared out into their dressing-rooms. It was a ceaseless show without entr'acte acts or interludes, and in the midst of it, the tired little vendeuse with a gathering of brightly colored things flung over her arms approached her group of American girls. "Could you use any little wash dresses?" she asked, as if it were a familiar question in her day's work.

The girls allowed that they could, and she shook them out one by one over the chair where she had laid them. Holding them by their shoulder seams, she spread their skirts along the chair.

That is the way they show wash dresses in this country, and you can tell by the incident where wash dresses originated with the French. They never think of hanging them on the mannikins. I have always more or less agreed with the French that the place for the wash dress is in the wash. They are so pretty. After you have had them on for some fifteen minutes they seem to need attention. The French never show you their grand dresses for the first time except on the mannikins, and they never show the wash dresses that way.

This does not alter the sublime fact that we of America have a definite need for wash dresses if we spend our summers in our ain countree. And the French are making them. They have to provide them for Deauville, the country, and America.

This Dress Is of Billiard Table Green.

The four dresses shown would come near getting a Parisian belle through a French summer. In the first of them she plays tennis at her country club. This dress is of billiard table green, embellished in Moroccan embroidery.

White Organdie Gown with Black Bows.

with a design of little crosses white and a darker green. All of the trimming is eastern in conception. The reveres of the collar are modeled on the neck of the cape with which the native crosses the desert—the Burmoose, as the Englishman calls the cape. The reveres can be pulled up close round the throat and held in place with the ropes which hang from the point of each revere. They are of strands of straw and silk, twisted together, and they are finished, each of them, with a little straw tassel. The dress is bordered round sleeves and hem with a band of dark green.

White Organdie Dress and Taffeta Coat.

For the afternoons, when the tennis game is finished, the French girl returns to her country club for tea, and of course in quite a different frock. When she comes in her car the one herewith shown is highly appropriate. It is of white organdie, embroidered in a motif of black chenille round the hem and the sleeves—and the parasol. Down the front, and presumably serving to hold the dress together, are little black bows. The hat is of white leghorn, and is trimmed in huge black chenille flowers.

The third dress is appropriate for almost any summer occasion. It is of white organdie. The blouse is tucked, and the skirt flounced with tiny scallops of the material. It is not complete without its coat, which is of lavender taffeta. As we know, lavender is made up of pink and blue. The outside of this coat is of lavender silk in which the blue prevails, and the lining is of other taffeta dominated by the pinkish shade. Lucille made it.

Black Taffeta with Chantilly Lace Overdress.

When the French summer girl goes to her weekly country club dances sometimes she wears the evening dress shown herewith by Lanvin. It is of black taffeta, covered by an overdress long and wide, of Chantilly lace, which hangs almost to the ground and far below the foundation. Down the front of the lace a peacock spreads itself in mother of pearl. Straps hold this sleeveless bodice over the shoulders. When we say French "summer girl," we of course mean young married woman for no one unwed would display herself in a costume like this in France.

Mary Jane went to the barber shop to have her hair bobbed.

"How do you want your hair cut?" asked the barber.

"Please cut it bald headed, like grandpapa's," she replied, "then mamma won't have to comb out the snarls every morning."

Catherine was playing with one of the neighbor children about 3 years of age. They soon started to quarrel over a plaything and had to be corrected by Catherine's mother. After the neighbor child had gone home Catherine's mother admonished her saying, "Don't you know you must always give in to a younger child?" to which Catherine replied, "Well, I hope Sadie don't come back till she's growed up."

Ruth was the possessor of a savings bank made the shape of a little pig. The bank was full of nickels and dimes, and one day Ruth's aunt, needing some change, hurriedly shook out all the dimes, thinking she would have them replaced before Ruth had discovered her loss. Ruth was not long, however, in finding out that her bank was rather light in weight, and, holding it up to the light while she peered through the slit in the back, she exclaimed: "O, Aunt Mattie! the little pig eated up all my dimes."

My niece, who has always lived in a very small town, came to visit me. When she and her mother approached the apartment in which I live her mother said: "This is where Aunt Helen lives." Little Virginia looked at the big, imposing building with interest. Soon after they entered Virginia diligently went from room to room. After she had visited the six rooms of the apartment, including the bathroom and pantry, she asked: "Is this all?" Her mother said it was. "Well," she said, "this beats all; this is the biggest house outside and littlest house inside I ever saw."

The little girl next door, had come over to play with Goldie and, as usual, they were soon quarreling. Aunty was vexed at leaving her work to restore peace and angrily exclaimed: "I don't see why you want to play together when you do nothing but quarrel all day long!"

"We don't quarrel all day long, we has heaps of recesses in between scraps," earnestly corrected Goldie.

Like Walking on Grass

Cantilever Shoes give such perfect comfort and develop such an easy carriage that wearing them is like walking on the softest green.

In Cantilever Shoes, with their natural inner-sole line and slightly tilted heel, the toes are comfortable and point straight ahead, as they rightly should. In ordinary shoes, which turn the foot outward, the weight of the body falls on the inside of the foot, straining the arch. Cantilever Shoes distribute the weight over the heel, the ball of the big toe, and the outside of the foot. This perfect balance spares the arch.

When the Cantilever Shoe is laced the flexible shank is drawn up and it conforms to the arch of the foot. In ordinary shoes the foot must conform to the shoe. Cantilever Shoes support the arch without appliances and correct flat foot. The flexibility of the shank allows such freedom that with every step the muscles exercise and grow strong. A healthy foot is a comfortable foot.

Change this week to Cantilever Shoes. You will be amazed to realize how your foot troubles disappear, and how comfortable your feet will be.

A graceful shoe which we carry in dark brown kidskin, black kidskin, dark tan calfskin, and white Egyptian canvas. In all widths from AAAAA to EE. Write for booklet.

MADE WITH CHICKEN.

THE chemist calls water in which meat is cooked a "water bath," in opposition to the "fat bath," or basting liquid, used in roasting meat. When we make soup stock the water bath is an ample one, or often as much as a quart of water to a pound of meat or meat and bone. The extravagant cook or the chef working for glazes would use but a pint to a pound of meat.

In making stews we commonly use a small amount of water, hardly more than enough to cover the meat. But chicken stock made of a boiling chicken [old hen] will have so much flavor and savor that the meat, necessarily cooked for a long time and as gently as possible, served up in a part only of the large amount of cooking liquid, thickened, is a fair substitute for a stew, especially when a nice soup bunch or fagot of vegetables has been used to season stock and meat. This stew may be put in a crust and baked as a chicken pie, or it may be altered variously for such dishes as curry of chicken or chicken paprika. Chicken paprika is one of the newer dishes that threatens to supplatn chicken à la king.

The point is that we have now used only a portion of the cooking liquid. The remainder we have for various sorts of gravies. If this is heated up every twenty-four hours—a safer way to keep it than in an ice box of varying temperatures—it will be good for nearly a week. Any part of the meat thriftily held out of the first dish made is better for remaining in the cooking liquid and being gently scalded in it. On every second or third day we may have a chicken flavored dish, or, if we vary the whole enough, one every day until our supply of stock is exhausted.

We can begin with chicken fricassee or stew or pie the first day, then have chicken noodles some time, and with a surprisingly small amount of meat we can make a chicken salad. Ah, but that takes the expensive celery, you say. Yes, but there is a way of reducing the amount of celery to a minimum.

Now that we city folk have to pay almost 50 cents a pound for old hens for the pot it behooves us to modify our methods of cooking this fowl. People who have but to step out in the back yard and wring the neck of a member of their flock can still go on having the richer gravies. We can soon accustom ourselves to the more extended effects.

But chiefly it behooves us to know so well what we are doing in order that the meat of the fowl may yield its full per cent of nutriment. The body will not tell us until it is far too late that it has been cheated of full 50 per cent, if not more, of what it was supposed to get.

One of a group of women who took some lessons recently told me she thought the best thing learned was how to cook protein, which is the principal solid of meat, in the right way. Cooked with strong heat you can eat it, but you cannot digest it. A great many steaks have been called tough when they were simply overcooked or cooked with too much heat.

One of the greatest of cooks, discussing chicken supremes, which are halves of the breast, cut lengthwise, says they "are always cooked without liquor, or almost so; for should any moistening liquid even approach the boil it would immediately harden them."

Only a few people in the world know how dainty the breast of chicken can be. When correctly roasted, with basting, the fat protects it from too great heat, but in what we call boiling it nothing can protect it if we have enough fire under it to make the water bubble. Poach it; poach it!

Economical Fricassee of Chicken.

Get a four pound dry picked boiling chicken, singe and prepare for disjointing. Disjoint as nicely as you are able, beginning by taking off the legs with second joint, then separate the two. Full and explicit directions for disjointing a chicken are long and worth learning. Have ready three quarts of boiling water and drop the prepared chicken into it, the breast pieces last, and try to keep the water at about a temperature of 200 for four hours.

Actual boiling temperature hardens the chicken and you will have to cook it longer or until connective tissues are dissolved. You then get a spurious tenderness; a real tenderness only by not allowing the water to boil, but be always near boiling.

Add two or three sliced carrots, two onions, some celery leaves or coarser parts of a stalk of celery cut fine, some parsley and any other seasoning you choose. Do not add salt until chicken is almost done, or tender.

For the fricassee take out a pint or more of the liquid and thicken as in making white sauce. For a pint melt two tablespoons of butter, stir into it until smooth four level tablespoons of flour, add chicken liquid, and cook with constant stirring until it thickens.

If the fricassee is to be served with mashed potato leave drumstick, second joint, etc., whole, allowing one such portion for each individual served. If to be served with rice, which is most economical, the chicken meat used may be shredded.

Chicken Pie.

Prepare chicken as for fricassee and make a gravy in the same way, but shred the chicken, not putting any bones into the pie. To extend the chicken or make it go farther you may allow about one cup of cooked rice to each pint of chicken in gravy, putting in a layer of chicken, then of rice, then of chicken. There may be an under and an upper crust for your pie or just an upper. Made exactly like baking powder biscuit it is most wholesome. Holes should be left in the top for steam to escape. A cup of nice gravy may be poured in after the pie is baked, to take the place of what will be absorbed.

In making small pies with some rice or potato this is more necessary than in the case of large ones. In making chicken pie economically use only the dark meat, saving the white for other purposes.

Ramequins of Chicken.

Shredded chicken in the nice smooth gravy described in chicken fricassee recipe may be served in little table ramequins with a small baking powder biscuit on top of each.

Curry of Chicken.

One of the old American adaptations of the curry recipes was to allow one teaspoon of curry to each pint of thickened gravy. The chicken served in the gravy may be whole joints, or shredded to go farther. The curry should be mixed with the flour which is dissolved in a small amount of water and then thinned to pour into to thicken a large amount of gravy. But the butter should be added, as in thickening gravy with a roux of butter and flour, since it improves the flavor of a chicken gravy, whether it is seasoned with curry or not. A little cream at the end does as much for the gravy.

The good old American way of serving curry of chicken thus prepared was to put it in the middle of a large platter with a wall of boiled rice all around it. The oriental way would be to have the rice in a mound in the middle. In some descriptions of chicken so served in the orient the chicken was quite buried in the mound of rice. I think it is Bayard Taylor in describing his travels in Palestine who tells of chicken curry so served.

Chicken Paprika.

The chefs of the hotels of the country seem to be making chicken paprika. Perhaps that colossal favorite, Thousand Island dressing, has prepared people for favoring chicken in a reddish gravy. Now to taste paprika is not pleasant, therefore we must try to make a gravy that gets full color from it while at the same time modifying its flavor. Cream does it best, but onion helps, and loses its identity if prepared as follows:

Cut up fine enough onion to make three tablespoons and put this to cook in a small covered frying pan in a tablespoon of butter for five minutes. It should be tender by that time, over a tiny bit of fire. Do not allow to brown. This process is sometimes called sweating. In the meantime melt another tablespoon of butter in a saucepan and stir into it until smooth two level tablespoons of flour and one scant teaspoon of paprika, cooking it for five minutes or so before adding one cup of chicken stock, stirring and

How Miss Jackson secured a better position—

I met her coming home one night on the car. She was in such good spirits that I commented on it.

"What makes you so happy, Mary!" I asked. "Why, you seem like an altogether different girl."

Mary smiled. "I really believe that I am. For once in my life I am gloriously happy with my work. I feel that I am of some importance—that I am actually doing something worth-while.

"One year ago I was just one of a dozen girls in the office. I did one thing one day and another the next. I didn't seem to be getting anywhere I was drifting.

"Then one day I got interested in a book on filing. It was a revelation. I had never realized before that filing is such an important part of business.

"I wanted to learn more about it, so I wrote to Miss Gladys C. Bridges, the principal of the Illinois School of Filing.

"Two or three days before I finished the course, Miss Bridges came to me and said she already had a position for me.

"It is a real position, too. The work is pleasant and interesting and I meet nice people. As I said before, I feel that I am doing something worth while. I am making $22.50 a week and just starting."

Mary stopped a minute to arrange her new and very becoming hat. Then she asked me if I had ever read the book called "Filing as a profession for women."

I said I had not.

Mary wrote the address of the Illinois School of Filing on a piece of paper and handed it to me.

"Write for it tomorrow," she said earnestly, "and see if it doesn't appeal to you. Or if you get a chance, drop in to see Miss Gladys C. Bridges personally at 116 S. Michigan Ave. She will be glad to tell you about the work and its opportunities."

Is an unshapely foot marring your appearance

A soft, summery frock may fall ever so charmingly from a graceful waistline

—but how often is its admirable effect cruelly destroyed by a homely, unshapely foot.

You are so conscious of it—instinctively, almost, you draw it back—away from the dreaded casual glance.

And that is so unnecessary a humiliation. You can have a shapely foot—you can wear just such style shoe as pleases your fancy, with perfect comfort and lasting shapeliness.

Dr. Wilms, nationally known specialist in Foot Science, can unquestionably improve the appearance of your foot, by treating your case individually to achieve a permanent correction of the irregularity.

Dr. Wilms' methods are universally recognized, and have been adopted by leading physicians and Podiatrists. Not only are his treatments scientifically correct, but absolutely painless, convenient and nominal in cost.

Appointments may be made personally, by telephone or letter. Men, women and children accepted for treatment. Deformities under the supervision of specialists, as is all Chiropody work. Special attendant for women.

If you have an unshapely foot, decide today to correct this imperfection that is so fatal to your good appearance. Come this week—any day—Saturday afternoon if convenient. Perhaps only a suggestion will be sufficient to transform your foot to a new charm and beauty.

The Thumbprint

Unmistakably identifies an individual, since all members of the human form differ both in proportion and shape. It is proof that "stock" remedies applied promiscuously cannot effectively relieve or cure foot ailments—they must be treated INDIVIDUALLY.

Have You Any of These Ailments:

Twenty-six bones form the human foot anatomy. The displacement of one affects all, eventually causing "flat feet" or "fallen arches." This condition develops cramped, under and overlapping toes, bunions, corns, severe callouses, OFFENSIVE PERSPIRATION and ingrown nails, even extreme nervousness, headache and backache. These conditions are always effectually relieved by Dr. Wilms' methods and frequently corrected permanently.

FINAL NOTICE to JUNE BRIDES

Our Big Home-Outfit Sale Has Only 3 More Days To Run

The sensational reductions that have prevailed and the wonderful values offered during this great sale have won thousands of new customers and clinched our claim to the title of the people's bargain center of Chicago.

CHICAGO'S GREATEST CHAIN of FURNITURE STORES

EST. 1892 — EST. 1892

Extraordinary Bargains in Complete Home Outfits

We have supplied more June Brides with complete home outfits during the present month than at any other time in the twenty-eight years that we have been in business. Our eight big stores have been taxed to the limit to meet the demands for outfits. There is a reason for this generous patronage. We believe it reflects the people's confidence in our merchandise, in our service and in the fairness of our prices.

Watch for the opening of our ninth store at 3910-12-14 W. 26th street. This big store represents an expenditure of $200,000.00. It has a 75-foot frontage and is built of white terra cotta.

Ask About Our Free Savings Bank Account Plan

You can save 10% of the purchase price of your home outfit by making your selection here and getting the benefits of our Free Savings Bank Account Plan. Through this plan we deposit 10% of the amount of your bill in your own name with the Chicago City Bank & Trust Co. The bank turns this money over to you as soon as you have made six monthly payments on your account. It, really, gives you the privilege of buying on time with the same advantages that you ordinarily receive by paying cash.

KODAK

The TRIBUNE Cook Book

thickening it. Add the cooked onion and finally at least three tablespoons of cream, or more if needed.

You must taste it and not forget the salt. Do not add too much salt, but if the gravy seems flat try a little more than what you have already added. If that does not do the work try a few drops of lemon juice.

Perhaps the chefs will soon be telling us how they do it, but as yet I have not seen a recipe.

Of course you finally put in your chicken and let the two stand together until the chicken is seasoned by the paprika gravy.

Chicken Noodles.

Good home made noodles in a chicken gravy have highly delicious possibilities. After being put into the gravy they are all the better for being sprinkled with bread crumbs and bits of butter and baked in a hot oven fifteen or twenty minutes—noodles au gratin. The gravy may be like that for the fricassee or of the chicken paprika. The latter is a newer way, but the first may be compared to plain vanilla ice cream. It is always staple, and many additions to it can be made. As to making noodles, recipes are highly contradictory, but try this:

Sift one-half cup of bread flour in a mound on a bread board. Break an egg into a little crater made in the top, and with a fork flour that egg as it starts to break down the barriers, and work it into the flour until the mixture is uniform. Some women use a tablespoon of water. You will need to work in more flour, making about two-thirds of a cup in all. Divide dough into three parts and roll each part into as thin a sheet as possible, hang up to dry, but before too dry roll like a jelly roll and cut so as to make fine ribbons. Dry, put away for use when needed. To cook drop into boiling water, which will swell them to double. Cook at least ten minutes, drain, and put in gravy. They may be fixed up for a dessert.

Learn to make noodles in these sugarless times.

Chicken Salad.

When celery costs 20 cents a stock we may get along with one more or less indispensable stock in making a considerable quantity of salad. Substitute for it raw carrot put through the meat chopper, using about four parts carrot to one of celery, and as much chicken cut in small dices as of carrot and celery combined. Mix with a generous amount of mayonnaise dressing. A small mold of this salad on a lettuce base, with a blob of mayonnaise at one side, will look like shrimp salad, on account of the carrot, or you may mask it in mayonnaise with a garnish on the top. Fresh green peas make an excellent garnish.

Gingerbread.

A so-called boiling chicken is fat. Save and try out the fat and use it in making gingerbread by the following recipe: Mix together one-half cup of corn sirup, one-fourth cup of molasses (you may use more molasses and less corn sirup), one-third cup of chicken fat or more if you have it, one-half cup of hot water. Sift and fold and stir into this two cups of flour which have been sifted with one-half teaspoon of soda, two teaspoons of cinnamon, one teaspoon of ginger, and one teaspoon or a little more of salt. Beat two eggs and fold in at the last. Dust the pan with flour and bake in a sheet. Serve with whipped cream over each square. A few chopped raisins, about half a cup, will improve this cake.

"Quality That Gratifies—Vanity That Satisfies"

YOU will be happy to know that the LURA Combination Vanity, carried in your purse, contains powder and rouge of the same pure, fine quality as those you use at your dressing table!

The powder compact is of LURA Rose Oil Complexion Powder, widely known for its clinging and blending qualities. The fragrant rose oil holds the powder and forms a perfect base. You need no cream of any sort beneath it.

LURA Waterproof Rouge stays on through heat and cold because it is more than a colored powder. Blending with the natural oils of the skin, it holds until removed with cold cream.

Complete-Dainty-Durable

The Combination Vanity box is adorably dainty—no bigger than a silver dollar, and designed of metal, delicately tinted. It is fitted with two soft, little puffs and a convenient mirror.

Of course the rouge outlasts the powder many weeks, but you can readily renew the powder. Push up on the mirror and the empty powder case slips out. In an instant you can fit a new powder compact into place—the fresh compact, together with a new puff, costs only 25 cents.

Be Sure to See It!

The Combination Vanity is for sale at drug and department stores. If your store does not have it, order from us direct, sending 50c in stamps or money order.

Another $25 Prize Next Week—Watch for It

$25.00 Cash Prize

Have you tried for a Cash Prize In the "Headline" Contest?

Today's headline, at the top of this advertisement, was submitted by Mrs. Thomas Wrigley of 700 S. Kostner Ave., Chicago. We thought it well worth $25. You can probably write another just as good.

Our offer of $25 in cash for a headline of seven words or less, is again renewed. The next subject will be which are contained in the Combination Vanity.

LURA Rose Oil Powder
LURA Waterproof Rouge

In the advertisement on this subject, which will appear in this space on Sunday, July 11th, we will talk about the clinging quality of the powder, and the rose oil which forms a foundation so that you do not need a cream beneath it. We will also explain that the rouge is really waterproof because it blends with the natural oils of the skin and cannot be blown off by the wind or affected by a shower. The rouge and powder are blended to be used together.

Write a headline suggestion for the advertisement, and win the $25 cash prize. You can do it!

Duplicate prizes will be awarded to those who submit the same winning headlines. You do not have to purchase a Combination Vanity to enter this contest. But get your headline suggestion into the mail at once. It must be in this office before noon, July 6th. Address Advertising Dept., Ideal Laboratories Co., 533 South Wabash Avenue, Chicago.

THE WORLD'S GREATEST NEWSPAPER

Theaters 1, 2 Movies 2
Music 3
Society 5, 6, 7, 8 Churches 10

JUNE 27, 1920.

The Theaters

"A LITTLE JOURNEY," which docks at the Princess tonight, begins in a Pullman car, bound west and carrying among its passengers a philosopher, a callous materialist, a cynic, an elderly ass, and an unsophisticated youth. Other acts take place upon the plains. Cyril Keightley and Miss Ethel Martin are among the play's interpreters. It appeared last year in New York at the Little theater.

William Boyd drew to his final fourteenth last night in "Poker Ranch." Tonight at the Olympic Karl Way will act the gaming cattleman in Mr. Mack's melodrama. Mr. Way was leading man last season in the National stock company.

These columns erred last Sunday in booking "Aphrodite" for ten weeks at the Auditorium beginning Sept. 11. Four weeks are all that are available, Mr. Gest writes from New York, and he adds that his producing entourage is now in the throes of preparing the next season's exhibitions of the three world's greatest hall-shows—"Chu Chin Chow," "Aphrodite," and "Mecca."

John Barrymore, returned from the mending processes of Mr. Muldoon's health farm, is said to be regarding with approval the manuscript of a new play by St. John Irvine. It is a dramatization of H. G. Wells' "The Wonderful Visit," and the story is about an angel's trip to the earth. Mr. Barrymore, of course, will play the winged one. The suggestion is made that Mr. Barrymore next season will alternate his performances of "King Richard III." with a play less vigorous in its demands on his strength, and "The Wonderful Visit" may offer him the opportunity.

The London Times' account of "Tiger! Tiger!" indicates that Miss Kyrie Bellew acted the rôle of Sally, the cook, much in the fashion that Miss Frances Starr did in America. "She made it difficult to account for the man's sudden and violent passion for her," says Mr. Walkley, "and was hardly what men, in or out of the House of Commons, look for in a mistress." Miss Stella Campbell, Leon Quartermaine, and Gilbert Hare are in the London cast.

Jay Gould, a bright comedian in the "Century Midnight Whirl" at the La Salle, is assigned for next season to "Hitchy-Koo," with Raymond Hitchcock, Miss Julia Sanderson, G. P. Huntley, Douglas Stevenson, and others. The costumes and scenery of the play will be designed by Mme. Rasimi of Paris, a director of the Theater Ba Ta Clan, whose shows are so shabby they couldn't get into a Chicago burlesque house with a letter from Erlanger.

Miss Juliette Day, recently of "Oh, My Dear!" has been engaged by Adolph Klauber for the leading rôle in "Scrambled Wives," by Adelaide Matthews and Martha Stanley. Roland Young will also be in the cast.

Maurice Brown and Miss Ellen Van Volkenburg, missioners of Little theaters and the classics, sailed for Europe yesterday to explore the drama of Italy, France, and England.

Miss Grace Valentine, after many flourishing years with Leo Carillo in the Hattons' dress-making play, title forgot, appeared last week in Washington in "The Cave Girl," by George Middleton and Guy Bolton, authors of "Adam and Eva." Assisting her were Robert McWade, Saxon Kling, Eleanor Gordon, Mark Smith, and others. The critics liked Miss Valentine better than they did the play.

Miss Hazel Dawn's stellar expedition in Crane Wilbur's "The Winged God" is about to begin, under the direction of A. H. Woods. James Gleason, Howard Lang, and Sister Eleanor are in the attending troupe.

Guy Standing, before the war a prominent English actor operating in America, has been knighted by King George for his services to his country. Mr. Standing was a commander in the Royal naval reserve, but the achievements for which he was honored were in the secret service.

In "The Lights of Duxbury," Miss Claire Kummer's latest comedy, the youthful daughter of the author appears as one of the leading characters under the name of Ann Nevil. The play is a sequel to "The Choir Rehearsal," which Miss Sallie Fisher used to play in vaudeville.

"The Girl in the Spotlight" is the new name of "The Miracle Maid," with which next Sunday at the Colonial Mr. Lederer will again make Chicago a producing center. Miss Mary Milburn will have the title rôle; Hal Skelly will be the leading comedian; and Miss June Elvidge of the movies will be present. Miss Elvidge used to adorn the runways of Shubert extravaganza before she took to the films.

"The Meanest Man in the World," a sketch once played in vaudeville by Alan Dinehart, has been enlarged by Augustin McHugh, author of "Officer 666," and Mr. Cohan will soon experiment with it in Atlantic City.

The rôle of the late Clifton Crawford in "My Lady Friends" will be played by Frank Craven during its journeys to cities other than New York.

Edward Sheldon's "Romance," having served the drama and the movies, is to be changed into a musical comedy.

A benefit performance will be given next Sunday afternoon at the Colonial for Miss Nellie Revell, a picturesque figure of the theaters, and for many years the press representative for various well known managers. Miss Revell is critically ill and in need of funds in New York. A similar testimonial will be given in that city July 11 at the Cohan and Harris theater. Dr. Max Thorek of the American hospital, Chicago, in response to a plea from Miss Revell, has contributed a journey to New York and his medical services in her behalf.

From the column of George S. Kaufman, dramatic editor, in this morning's New York Times:

Probably no phase of the amusement business has undergone a more remarkable development within the last year or so than that concerned with the sale of plays to the motion picture people. In the beginning, seven or eight or nine years ago, the motion picture producers paid about $1,000 for the film rights to a successful play—if, indeed, they bought it at all—and all hands were more than satisfied.

About a year ago they had reached the stage when $50,000 was being offered for some of the most successful of the season's plays, but today $50,000 is anything but an exceptional price. A week ago it was recorded in these columns that $110,000 had been refused for the motion picture rights to "The Storm," but there are half a dozen or more instances where even that figure has been beaten.

According to those who are in position to know, a bona fide offer of $250,000 has been received for the film rights to "East Is West." The offer was rejected—not necessarily because the amount was considered too low, but because the producer of "East Is West" is beginning to hope that that play will duplicate the career of "The Bird of Paradise," which is at present in its ninth or tenth year.

For "Lightnin'," finishing its second year in New York, the movie men have offered $200,000, but it has not yet been accepted. The part of "Lightnin'," which will eventually reach the screen —to-wit:, the story—is ordinary at best. The play has made its success on the characterization of the leading rôle. But when they buy a successful play, the picture men seem to consider the story last of all. "39 East," with a mere shell of a story, brought $50,000 for pictures, but it was the title for which $45,000 was paid.

A classic example of this is contained in the case of "Clarence." Following a season's run in New York and Chicago, $100,000 has been offered for the film rights to this piece, although the story of the play amounts to nothing and there is no reason to believe that it will make a good picture.

Apparently a season's run automatically makes a play worth about $100,000 to the film producers. Douglas Fairbanks has offered $125,000 for the rights to "A Tailor-Made Man," and the rotund Mr. Arbuckle is willing to pay $75,000 for "As You Were," a musical comedy. Neither of these offers has been accepted as yet. The highest price actually paid to date is $175,000 given by David W. Griffith to William A. Brady for the motion picture rights to "Way Down East." The same amount has been offered for "Ben Hur," but has not been accepted.

The producers of "Baby Mine" wisely waited for the golden era and were rewarded about six weeks ago with $87,000. "Common Clay" was sold a year or more ago on a royalty basis and has already yielded the producer and the playwright some $90,000. "The Sign on the Door" has just been sold to Norma Talmadge for $75,000, and "Wedding Bells" went to her sister, Constance, not long ago for $50,000.

When "Within the Law" brought $50,000 nearly two years ago that figure was considered sensational. But $75,00 0 has now been offered for "Friendly Enemies," and its producer is holding out for $100,000. "Pollyanna," sold to Mary Pickford, brought about $80,000, and "Tillie," a failure in New York, but successful in Chicago, brought about $40,000. "The Country Cousin" was let go just before the era of plenty was ushered in, and, accordingly, brought only $35,000. "In Old Kentucky" also sold for $35,000. Consider, then, the feelings of the Messrs. Wagenhals and Klemper, who, back in 1912, sold "Paid in Full" for $1,000 and then "Seven Days" for $2,000, and never got the money in either case. Alf Heyman, it is said, was offering Pineros' plays en bloc in those days for $500 apiece, but there were no takers. Today the same plays are going at about $25,000 each.

is a familiar saying which again proves that MONEY, coupled with a wee bit of love, is the most important factor in this young life. "THE LADDER OF LIES."

Produced by Paramount. Directed by Tom Forman.

THE CAST.

Edith Parrish ..... Ethl Clayton
Peter Gordon ..... Cyde Fillmore
Dora ..... Jane Acker
Ralph Bond ..... Irving Cummings
Blaine ..... Charles Meredith
Maid ..... Ruth Ashby

By Mae Tinée.

THERE may be women in this world who will risk happiness and reputation for other women, who are not relatives and could hardly be called friends—and are most unworthy in the bargain. And it may be a noble thing to do. One doubts it, however. Why on earth should the righteous be doleful and the wicked rejoice?

"The Ladder of Lies" did not impress me as being either a strong or an interesting picture. The situations are rather forced. The acting is by no means convincing on the part of any of the players. Miss Clayton does better work toward the last of the picture. She also looks better, for she gets rid of the too much makeup on her lips, which disfigures her during the first reel or so. It is rather surprising to see her overdo this way, for she is usually so lovely and so wise in this regard.

In "The Ladder of Lies" she is Edith Parrish, an artist. A man friend of hers marries a girl of whom she disapproves and whom she knows to be unworthy. The bride turns out even worse than was expected, continuing an affair with a town roue which had been begun before her wedding. Incriminating episodes follow in which the young artist permits herself to be considered the woman in the case, that her friend the man may not become aware of his wife's delinquency.

Incidentally be it mentioned the husband later becomes a righteous buttinsky and because he thinks the girl who has protected him was "the woman in the case" insists on telling the man she intends to marry all about her dark past. [I ask you, doesn't self-sacrifice often meet with such reward?]

Clyde Fillmore, as the friend, is all right, and Jane Acker as the giddy wife is quite real. Irving Cummings makes a better villain than a hero. Charles Meredith as the man the artist loves makes you wonder why.

The production is well staged—but then Paramount pictures do not often fall down in matters of this kind.

MISS MAUDE HANNAFORD in "Tomorrow's Price"—Woods

Miss Hannaford has succeeded Miss Ann Davis in the leading woman's rôle in "Tomorrow's Price." Her last previous appearance here was, perhaps, in "A Pair of Petticoats," at the Studebaker.

Ask Me! Ask Me! Ask Me!

MRS. E. D. S.: Sure, I know where you can reach Mr. Hart. Hollywood, Cal. Priscilla Dean is with Universal, Universal City, Cal. I hope you get the pictures you desire so much.

M. L.: You think so, do you! Dash hish. I guess you'd better write to Mr. Tearle, in care of the Friars club, New York City. Bryant Washburn may still be reached in care of Paramount, Hollywood, Cal., though I understand he is to leave them. Leonard Clapham is at 1535 Edgemont avenue, Los Angeles; Harrison Ford is at Hollywood, doing freelance playing, and Charles Meredith may be reached at 1919 Van Ness avenue, Hollywood. I'm never glad when you say goodbye. My dear, I have so many favorites!

A. B. C.: It's a shame you missed the picture of Mr. Roberts! Thanks so much for the added information.

Sahara Sleuths Eye Coney Islanders with Suspicion

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—They are having more or less trouble at Coney Island this summer with those persons who refuse to take prohibition seriously. The regular Coney Islander fairly revels in humor, but not dry humor. His jokes must have a kick.

Yesterday, as nearly as the experts could estimate the number, which they do by looking at the sun and multiplying by ten, there were 250,000 visitors at Coney. And a third of these, by the same reckoning, were connected with one or the other of the flying squadrons detailed to round up violators of the Volstead act, a snoopy set of individuals determined upon taking the joy out of life, whether it be represented by case goods or home brew.

If it happened the lunch hamper was a little too heavy for one to carry, and the weight was divided between two, it invariably suggested something to the Sahara sleuths, and the luncheon party was forthwith trailed to its bit of shade under the board walk. If a perfectly innocent young man so much as turned the ferrule of his obese malacca skyward the while the handle was still in his mouth he was in danger of being set upon by a quartet of suspicious individuals with long, dry, drooping mustaches, and put through the third degree.

One poor little druggist sold a quart of alcohol, just pure alcohol, according to the label, and half an hour afterward found himself under a $1,000 bond to appear in court and explain. And the sidewalk restaurant, in the shade of whose sheltering rubber plants the honest toilers formerly sat and sipped their 2.75, while the children played house with Panama hats and walking sticks of those too intent on the free moving picture show to keep track of their property, were sad places. Coney is not what it used to be.

And yet, as noted, the crowd was as huge and unwieldly as ever. Up and down Surf avenue thousands and thousands milled in and out of the roadway, and along the beach other thousands lolled upon the still damp sands. The concessionaires had a profitable season last summer, and have spent liberally of their profits in repainting the fronts of their show places. Luna park has a million or two new electric bulbs, and several new rides that are guaranteed to be faster and more thrilling than any heretofore built are in noisy operation.

MISS MARJORIE DRURY
Marigold Gardens

It is not often that the farce that springs from an outrageously improbable premise ever gets very far, but neither playwrights nor producers ever seem to learn much from their experiences with the type. Even as wise a firm as Wagenhals & Kemper, who cashed in a fortune with "Seven Days" some years ago because it was at least farcically plausible, made their reentry into the field of play producing this week with one of these frail and mechanical affairs that has little excuse for existence.

"Seeing Things" this one is called, and it relates the experience of one of those chuckleheaded ingénue wives who wonders what her husband would be up to if she were suddenly to pass out. She is sure he would break his promise and marry again, and morally certain he would marry that obviously vampirish widow, Mrs. Bingham. So she determines to test him. Leaving her pink evening gown on the shore of a lake, she forces a comic friend of the family to report that she has committed suicide. Then she hides behind the portières and behind the doors for two acts to see what happens.

The things that do happen are supposed to be highly diverting and laugh provoking, but, being rather laboriously made up, they do no more than test the patience of the audience, even when it laughs at the lines and situations involved. At 10:45 the wife comes out of hiding convinced that her fears were groundless, and the widow marries the comic friend.

The cast is capable and hard working, being headed by fat Frank McIntyre and including Dorothy Mackaye, John Westley, and Marion Vantine. Margaret Mayo and Aubrey Kennedy wrote "Seeing Things."

The story is that when George White, the dancer, was a member of the Ziegfeld "Follies" some seasons back the proprietor of that troupe referred to him slightingly on one occasion as a 'hoofer and nothing more." At which young Mr. White took umbrage and determined to become a Ziegfeld competitor in place of an employé.

Last season, as is well remembered by those who saw the "George White Scandals of 1919," he acquired the necessary backing and entered the field. His start in New York was not propitious, but he built up his entertainment until it was good enough to return a profit of something like $200,000 on its road tour.

This season Mr. White came back with a more elaborate and a much more expensive revue, and duplicated his first success, with the result that he is now taking profits of something like $5,000 a week at the Globe and continuing as a thorn in the Ziegfeld flesh. Also, just to prove his versatility, he has gone in for horse racing, and his luck was so good last week and the week before that he is credited with winnings of $125,000 at the track. Becoming more and more deeply interested in the new sport, White last week bought a string of race horses. Five of these animals, he insists, are so fleet of foot that he expects to win at least another $125,000 with them before the racing season is finished. The sixth, however, he admits, is of doubtful speed.

"He only cost me $600," said George the other day, "and I expect he'll lose a lot. But I've got a great name for him. I'm going to call him Ziegfeld's Goat."

Opera and Concert Program for Coming Week at Ravinia

By Charles H. Gabriel, Jr.

OPERA every night except Monday and concerts on Monday night, and Thursday, Saturday and Sunday afternoons, are scheduled for Ravinia during the coming week. Some confusion exists among patrons as to the exact hour at which the opera performances begin. Ravinia is not within the city limits, but it is observing the daylight saving ordinance. Therefore the curtain will rise at 8:15 p. m. by your watch, although the railroad time tables will show your arrival around 7 o'clock. The most popular Ravinia train, via the Northwestern railroad, leaves the city at 7:38 p. m. by your timepiece, although scheduled by the station clock to leave at 6:35.

Tonight Charles Hackett and Edith Mason will lead a second sensational cast in presentation of Massenet's "Manon." The full cast, followed by the schedule for the remainder of the week, is appended:

THE HOUSEBOAT ON THE HUISNE

BY CAPT. KARL W. DETZER
(Chief of the D. C. I., American Embarkation Center.)

A Story of the "D. C. I.," the American Secret Police in France, After the Troops Started Home

IN the receiving ward of Camp Hospital 52, American E. F., Detective Sergeant Logan, American Secret Police, watched the doctors struggling over a patient. While army nurses cut the clothing from the shoulders of a husky young American, doctors examined his wounds. Logan stood back of them, watching, listening.

"What's his condition, doctor?" asked the young detective.

"Bad." The doctor was laconic.

"Can he talk?"

"No."

"When can he talk?"

"Perhaps tomorrow—if he lives." The doctor was intent upon his work. So all night by the cot of the wounded American, Sergeant Logan kept his vigil. Sometimes the boy on the bed mumbled and moved a bit, and the investigator leaned close to catch a word of the muttered speech fragments.

They had found this boy—an American soldier of probably 21—with a hole through his cheek and a dent in his skull—on the bank of the river, early in the evening. A French woman, passing along the road by the side of the Huisne, had stumbled across his body. The French police, who were called, notified the American office.

It was the second similar case in a week. However, the other lad had been dead when he was discovered at daybreak, scarce fifty yards from the scene of the tragedy that interested Logan.

Five of the most skillful operators of the American division of criminal investigation had labored without ceasing on the case, since the discovery of the first body four nights previous. But not one tiny thread of evidence with which to spin a theory did they uncover. Logan had worked as hard as any of them. And now while the other four searched the streets and houses and steep stairs passageways along the water front, with a squad of French secret police, Logan sat by the one promise of explanation. He had not slept for two nights. That was a habit of the D. C. I. The French called it the "sleepless watch."

Just as morning began to push its way through the clouds banked in the east, the boy on the hospital cot moved, and threw an arm over his head. He opened his eyes.

"You're all right, buddy," Logan whispered; "you're in an American barracks."

"The cab," whispered the boy on the cot. "The driver? Where is Marie?"

"You are too tired to talk," was the quiet answer, but Logan had made three mental notes. Marie—driver—cab. There at least was a foundation. Again the boy slept, and Logan kicked the feet of the sleeping ward orderly.

"Telephone 308," he said, "and tell whoever answers that the man at the hospital has said three words—'Marie,' 'driver,' and 'cab.'"

The sun was climbing the roof tops of the city when Logan again saw that the eyes of the injured boy were wide open. The lad could talk a little, but still his mind was clouded. The heavy instrument that had crashed across his head had snapped the cord that is continuity in thought.

"The driver said he would take me to a hotel," he mumbled. "Down the steps—Marie, she said, was her name—a pretty name, Marie—down the steps—a funny little hand—Marie, oh, pretty girl—a good girl, Marie—what a funny hand—a little hand—her glove was black—how—did—such—a—little—hand—" the voice trailed off in broken, incoherent rambling. Logan roused him for a moment. And the voice mumbled again in answer to the detective's question.

"My name—oh, yes—my name—Dykes, of Kansas."

Those were the last words the voice ever uttered, for at 5, when the doctor came through the ward, he looked at Dykes of Kansas and pulled the sheet over the blue face.

Logan walked to the office of the secret police and made his report. Then he slept, and new operators were assigned to the short trail of fact he had stumbled across in the dying whispers of a young soldier.

The trail now split three ways. One ran to the mysterious Marie, one to some cab and its driver—the third to the place "down the steps." Surely there was something peculiar about the steps—at least they had impressed the flickering memory of Dykes of Kansas.

It was noon when M. Legal, inspector of police of the French bureau, called at the American office. Logan, who had slept on a cot in the identification room, awaited him. Together they compared their results.

The Frenchman spread his long arms across the desk, and Logan hunched over with his eyes close to the complicated "proces verbal" of the French police system, that cover-all report blank that tells the entire story of any case on which police are at work.

Legal was one of the old school of French detectives. Probably 6 feet tall, his great blond head bristled with short cut hair, his mustache was spiked, his nose was a great angular beak, his eyebrows were tangled thickets. Eyes that were pale and flickering at times, and again became piercing points, and a voice that lifted and fell like rollers on the sea, gave him a human touch one felt he lacked on first meeting him. For twenty years he had struggled with the intricate criminal situations of interior France, in twenty years he had put by a vast store of knowledge of things criminal. He was a man respected by the clergy and feared by the evildoer.

So it was Inspector Legal himself who had come to work on this case, and Logan felt a thrill at the presence of this world famed tracker of crime.

"It is a difficult case, to be sure," Legal was saying, "an extremely difficult case, but we shall work, and we shall see." He whistled softly as he glanced through the American report sheet.

"You Americans are up to date," he said, "your system is splendid, but, like all things American, it is so young. Your record is perfect for the last year, but in this work you need records of fifty years, O yes."

"I have written," said Logan, "what Dykes told me before he died, you see the name 'Marie'——"

"Yes, yes, yes, Marie—if it were not Marie it would be Yvonne. There are but two names in France. But at least we know now that it is not an Yvonne in the case, which eliminates half the women of France. Much more interesting is the 'hand' he spoke of. That was a peculiar hand—or why did he mention it? Not because he held it, that is not unusual among your Americans! Ah, yes, we shall see, we shall see. Let us look at the spot where the boy was found."

Through narrow streets, with houses that swung far out over the curb, and overhung the passageway, over the rough cobbles of the old town, walked Logan and Legal. A queer pair they made, the young detective, whose first training had been that of a road patrolman out of Waukegan, Ill., and the veteran of the old French bureau.

They came at last to the quays of the River Huisne, where Grande Rue dropped abruptly and ended at the wall by the water's edge.

"Here," said Logan, "we found the body and up there four nights ago the other soldier—dead."

"And the blood trail—which way did it lead?"

"Toward the river, over that way—for twenty yards—and stopped this side of the wall."

"Very well," grunted the Frenchman, his eyes becoming the pin points that signified action, "you need not remain, come to my office at 5 tonight. I await you, perhaps with news—perhaps not. Who knows?"

They parted. A little before 8 Logan stood before the desk.

"Good evening. It has been a busy afternoon, so many details you know"—Legal was talkative. But "tonight there is nothing you can do. However, tomorrow you send a man—don't you go—to Connerré and have him spend the evening in the cafes and look at the girls carefully. So he would know them again. Then bring him here the next morning. That is all—good night." And M. Legal stood, bowed, and then dived into his papers.

Two mornings later Logan led Detective Sergeant Carse to the office of M. Legal. Carse had spent the previous night at Connerré.

"So you saw the girls, eh? And you will not forget the faces by tonight? Very good! Tonight you shall appear on the Place de la Republique, about 9 o'clock and look into all the cafés. When you see a girl you saw at Connerré last night come to the kiosk by the car track and notify Mr. Logan and me. Mr. Logan—you meet me at the kiosk at 9. Good night!"

He never left one in doubt as to the end of an interview.

At 9 Logan and Legal waited by the kiosk. At 9:30 Carse sauntered toward them.

"In Café Gruber," he said, "alone, third table to the right, from the door. The girl with the elbow gloved. Very pretty."

Legal issued his orders.

"You, Mr. Logan, are very, very drunk. Go in that café, sit by that girl, and buy her a drink. Give her a 5 franc note for a souvenir, tell her you have much money. But, pay attention, don't drink anything with her. Tell her you cannot find a hotel. She may offer to guide you. Go where she takes you, anywhere—except down the steps."

The horror of the phrase "down the steps" dazed Logan for a second or two. He remembered the dying words of Dykes of Kansas on his hospital cot.

"If—if I should come to the steps, what then?"

"Be patient for, let us say, a quarter of a minute, and I shall be with you, and so will our friend," he nodded toward Carse, "and several other of my friends you have not noticed." The two Americans then saw a little group hot in a political discussion at the curb, and recognized them as detectives on M. Legal's staff.

Logan leaned for a moment against the kiosk, then staggered off across the square toward the brilliantly lighted Café Gruber. Legal looked after him. "Those Americans—O, O,—those drunken Americans!" He grinned through the dark at Carse.

"And now, sir, you know where the body of the American Dykes was found, yes? Good. Go there, in the dark shadows, and wait. Watch for a cab, and when Mr. Logan and a girl descend, remain quiet, but be ready to follow them rapidly when you hear my whistle. It will be this way," and he whistled the low, soft, bird-like note of the French police. "Do not pay attention to prowlers. I shall be there, and my men, too."

They parted. When he came close to the place where Grande Rue dropped abruptly into the river—where Dykes had been found four nights previous, Carse felt that he had lost his way. No, that was the house on the corner, there was where the body lay—but something had changed! Instead of running out flush with the river and dropping off below the stone stair, Grande Rue halted abruptly, with a low, dark house instead of the water at the end. Before he had decided whether or not to investigate, a sharp, short, low cough sounded in the darkness to his left. He sank down behind a two wheel cart. It was M. Legal's cough. It was a command. Carse obeyed.

Back in the Cafe Gruber the patrons saw a very drunken soldier who evidently had rolled in the mud just before entering, stagger blindly to a table—the third to the right of the door. A girl sat at the table, a very pretty girl in black elbow gloves. The soldier talked and the girl listened.

"Sure I'll buy you a drink," they heard him say, and he passed something across, and the girl slipped it into her pocket, "got lots more. Pay day, a thousan' francs."

"Ah, you no kip so money wizz you?"

"Sure I do, in my pocket here." He tapped his breast. "I want to spend it tonight."

Then the conversation was less noisy or the orchestra played more wildly, or the interest of onlokers fagged, for no more of the discussion reached the ears at other tables. Then a pretty girl and a drunken soldier left the cafe together. The girl hailed a cab.

The clank of loose horseshoes and the rattle of an ancient vehicle sounded far up Grande Rue. Nearer and nearer, the lantern swinging between the wheels, it crept, and stopped opposite Carse as he crouched in his hiding place. Logan flopped out, followed by the girl. The cab moved away. Down toward the end of the street, where the river should be, went the couple.

Carse stood erect behind the cart. Silently out of the black night glided a blacker patch, and as it slipped past him Carse sensed that it was M. Legal. Then there was silence.

For thirty seconds—a minute—a minute and a half the stillness hung cloud-like over the narrow street. Then low, and seemingly far away, like the hiss of escaping steam or the hum of the black fly, sounded the danger whistle of the French police. Carse leaped forward. He ran.

Before and behind him and to his left padded other soft soled feet. Legal had come prepared. Down to the end of the little street they swept. Ahead loomed the mysterious house.

A crash of splintered wood sounded close in front, a door swung back, and candle light came out to greet the runners. In the door stood Logan and Legal. Behind a little table on which the candle stood, a pretty girl held her gloved left hand before her eyes, and two filthy little Frenchmen crouched, their hands above their heads.

Carse stumbled, regained his balance, and then ran down the steps. A houseboat, moored to the end of the street, had changed the entire aspect of the scene in the dark.

Legal searched the men while half a dozen of his alert companions hunted about the room. Then the inspector turned to the little girl.

"Take off your gloves!" his words were barked.

The girl did not move. Then the big Frenchman leaned far across the table, and, grasping the frail right arm, he ripped the glove from elbow to finger tips.

A scarred white stub of an arm ended at the wrist. Attached by many bands and braces to the stub hung an artificial hand.

It was made of hammered brass.

"The hand that patted Dykes," he grunted, "you remember, a little hand!"

Back in the headquarters of the French secret police M. Legal explained:

"That first morning I visited every house in the street near the river, and I found that all the neighbors were good, law respecting people. But one told me of the houseboat—she is gasoline power—that comes down from Connerre every fourth night with wool for the market. The boat was owned, they said, by Rene Miribot. A bad record that Miribot had, and I felt that he must have something to do with the case. Then I compared dates and found that the boat had been at the landing the nights of both the murders and had been gone before daybreak. We could have gone there and arrested them tonight—but we needed proof—and that is my reason for planning this coup tonight. Yes, successful, very!"

The telephone rang.

Into the voice of Legal as he answered it came a note the Americans never had heard there before. He spoke but a few words, softly, musically—a coddling voice, such as a big man uses with a child. He hung the receiver gently.

"My wife," he explained. "She calls twice each night to know that I am safe. Every night for many years."

Below, far down among the cells, a voice broke out in song, the lewd, wicked song of the Paris underworld. Marie, the girl of the houseboat, sang. Legal winced. He turned over and over on his desk a queer object, but he did not seem to see it. He stared at a brass hand.

"I don't understand—perhaps I never shall," he mused.

"Understand what?" Logan felt the detective understood everything.

"Women," he answered, "and women."

Another story by Capt. Detzer will appear in an early issue.

There's All Kinds of Time Out in Chicago Suburbs

By Mme. X.

If you observe a wild, distraught aspect on the part of suburbanites these days, do not lay it to sudden dementia praecox (whatever that may be), or to access to a hidden supply of Bacchus' favorite brew. It is merely the outward effect of a cerebration brought on by attempts to make a happy union between recent time tables with their "central" standard, time tables of May 30 with their former schedule and watches set in Chicago.

With a sense of elegant leisure we arranged a fifteen minutes' leeway a few days ago in setting forth for that delightfully rapid through 4 o'clock afternoon train, which lands Lake Foresters at their destination in forty-four minutes. We arrived at the Northwestern station to find that we had twenty-nine minutes to wait for the 124 which, being a slow train, takes fifty-nine minutes to reach Lake Forest where we arrived at 5:20 new time, the train being even slower than its schedule.

Changes Cause Confusion.

The old 4 o'clock is now a 5 o'clock train, while the famous 5:10, the millionaire's pet train, still is doing business at the old time and place and runs ten minutes later. All of which spells confusion for the average habit bound suburbanite, for similar conditions and complications prevail on all lines of railway travel.

Of course people will get used to the conflict of clocks, but until order is established, it would be a fine thing if some one would organize courses of instructive lectures which could be attended by the many of us who arrive at the station with an unexpected hour to wait for a train. This unemployed interval might even be made use of by those conducting the approaching presidential campaigns to secure the address of weary waiting ones on the promise of coinciding clocks and time tables.

Ever Present Servant Question.

Ill mated timepieces and time tables are not the only trials of those dwelling in outlying districts. There's that ancient problem, the domestic servant question, anent which, on that same leisurely 3:14 train, these two gems were culled.

At a lunch party the guests were puzzled by the fact that the maid who cleared the dishes wore a hat. Their hostess explained that as the aforesaid damsel had only arrived just before luncheon and wasn't sure whether the place suited her, she wouldn't take off her hat, so as to be ready for a possible instant flight.

The other tale is an illustration of the time worn adage, "The crushed worm will turn." At an employment bureau a mistress of a household was being interviewed by a candidate for the high office of cook. "Have yez a bath room for yer help?"

"Yes, indeed!" responded the eager employer.

"Have yez curtains in it?"

"Of course," cooed the lady.

"And a pianny?" continued the inquisitive one.

Here something broke loose, for this was the quite impromptu answer: "I have a piano in the maid's parlor, and I never engage a cook who doesn't promise to play on that piano at least two or three hours a day." Denouement!

General Departure from Town.

But neither trains, nor domestics can spoil life for those fortunate enough to be dwellers outside of the city these days, when gardens, groves, and fields are all in that fresh and early perfection which June alone of all the twelve months seems to achieve. Society has transferred its activities from town drawing rooms to country verandas and lawns. On Wednesday afternoon Miss Katherine McCormick, daughter of Alexander A. McCormick, was presented to society at a tea given by her mother and her aunt, Mrs. Ezra J. Warner, at the latter's Lake Forest residence. The McCormicks, who have taken Mrs. Clark Morton's house in Lake Forest, will not move into it until July 1.

Miss Sylvia Shaw, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Van Doren Shaw of 305 Fullerton parkway and Lake Forest, will sail early in August for Europe, where she will spend a year furthering her study in sculpture. Miss Shaw, who is one of the most charming and popular young women in society, already has attracted considerable attention both here and in New York by her work, and it is expected that with a little more study she will rank high in the list of modern sculptors. She will be greatly missed during her absence for, although she has been devoting much of her time to her work for the past few years, she also has been prominent in the social life of the city and is one of the belles of the younger set. She probably will be accompanied abroad by her parents and by Miss Janet Pauling, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward G. Pauling of 1248 Astor street.

The first of the summer debutantes is Miss Katherine McCormick, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander A. McCormick of 5816 Blackstone avenue and Lake Forest, who was introduced to society last Wednesday at a reception given by her mother and aunt, Mrs. Ezra J. Warner, at the latter's residence in Lake Forest. Miss McCormick, who is an unusually attractive young girl, was graduated from Vassar college this year.

The engagement of Miss Margaret Graham Fitch, daughetr of Mr. and Mrs. William Brewster Fitch of Kenilworth, to William Wood McCarthy, son of Mr. and Mrs. John McCarthy of Evanston, was announced at a tea a week ago today. Miss Fitch is a graduate of Miss Hall's school in Pittsfield, Mass., and of the Emma Willard school in Troy, N. Y. She was prominent in war activities and was a pupil at Miss Hickox's studio for art of expression in 1918 and 1919. Last winter she understudied Peggy Wood in the Broadway production of "Buddies," and then played in "Three Showers." Mr. McCarthy is a graduate of Wesleyan college and served for twenty-one months in France with the ambulance corps.

On Thursday afternoon Mrs. Hugh J. McBirney entertained the Garden club of Illinois in her lovely rose garden, now in its prime. A beautiful new rose of hers, the "Juliette," a pink and yellow bloom of wonderful quality, took first prize a week ago at the North Shore Horticultural show at Lake Forest. Her garden is modeled on the lovely Generalife gardens at the Alhambra at Granada, Spain, with long pools dripping from terrace to terrace, and bordered with masses of standard roses.

Caryl Dunham Married.

Very gay was the reception given by Mr. and Mrs. Robert James Dunham yesterday, following the marriage of their daughter, Caryl, to Williams Evans Casselberry. The Dunham place, while not large, is a charming bit of informal gardening.

Their swimming pool, which is one of the most popular rendezvous for the youth of the community, is as pretty a place of its kind as could be designed. Sloping grassy banks are on one side and moss and vine covered rocks on the other, while a classic little pergola at one end connects the two dressing rooms, which accommodate the robing and disrobing bathers. Beyond this portico or pergola lies the flower garden, a space of lawn surrounded by an informal wall of blossoms.

With their talent for "gilding the pill," and making charity a festive affair the women interested in running the Rummage Shop (whose profits help support the Children's Memorial hospital) gave a tea on Friday of last week at the residence of Mrs. Mark Cummings to which each guest was asked to bring a gift to be sold at the shop. As the verse, fruit of Mrs. S. T. Chase's facile pen, put the matter one couldn't fail to be moved to contribute something.

We beg of you, don't save that lamp:
That hat will not be worn,
And moths will eat that overcoat,
As sure as you are born!

So the north shore combined tea and charity that afternoon. The charity, however, was a double ended affair; it blessed those who gave even more than the recipients, as it probably removed superfluous articles from glutted homes. As the wise old Lama in Kipling's "Kim" said, most of us are bound on the wheel of things, and so bound, who can be free?

Favill School Closed for Summer.

It is with a sense of poignant regret that the writer learns of the forced closing for the summer for lack of funds of the Favill school. This is an enterprise which has been sheltered under the hospitable roof of Hull House for many years and which has undertaken to teach the handicapped, those crippled bodily or mentally, how to support themselves by various kinds of handicraft. To many a drab, somber life this school has brought light and hope and even a measure of happiness, and its pupils, hopeless, helpless men and women, learned to make such pretty, useful things!

Faded, elderly, feeble spinsters made charming toys for the children of the prosperous. Men with clouded minds made pretty card holders, scorecards, and smokers' outfits for their nimble minded fellow mortals who like to rest their alert brains with the intricacies of "auction bridge." Those who have known cold, hard beds made soft, beautiful quilts for the owners of comfortable homes. These heart breakingly eager workers, to whom enforced leisure means more than to any other because with it come mental clouds, ask the public at least to take the rest of their last winter's work off their hands so that they may have some money to buy more materials in the autumn to resume their soul saving labors then. At their shop, 2816 South Michigan avenue, these things are on sale until July 1. The sale is under the especial guardianship of Mrs. William S. Monroe, the protector and champion of these handicapped.

A Remarkable Chicagoan.

Age has no terrors for that truly remarkable Chicagoan, Mrs. Selfridge, the mother of Harry Gordon Selfridge. Although over 90 years old, she is as alert and energetic as women half her age. She is planning to take two of the Selfridge children—they're all grown up now—on a South American trip for this summer and to end her foreign tour by coming to Chicago next autumn and presenting the youngest Miss Selfridge to Chicago society.

How is that for spirit and courage on the part of one who was born before railways opened up the land, and steamships plowed the sea; before the telegraph united continents, or the reaper made possible the feeding of vast multitudes?

Two Recent Betts' Portraits.

In a recent sojourn in Chicago Louis Betts, our ex-Chicago portrait painter who has become famous in New York, accomplished two portraits of noted Chicago men which he has taken east to finish. One is a likeness of Watson Blair and is intended to join that famous collection of portraits of its presidents now adorning the walls of the Chicago club.

The most distinguished canvas in this club gathering is Anders Zorn's portrait of the late Arthur Caton, a piece of work by many considered the finest example of modern portraiture in this country. It is a life size, full length presentment of Mr. Caton in evening dress. He was an unusually distinguished looking man, tall, handsome, well bred and well dressed, and the artist has caught all of this and transferred it to canvas with a splendor of technique which puts the portrait in the rank of the great canvases of Rembrandt, Velasques, Whistler, and Sargent.

Mr. Caton's widow, now Mrs. Marshall Field, and the late Mrs. Franklin MacVeagh are said to be the only women, bar possible scrub ladies, whoever entered the sacred portals of the Chicago club. They were smuggled in by an influential member so that they might have a last glimpse of this portrait, for after it was finally hung on the club walls it was never to be permitted to leave there.

Mr. Betts' other piece of painting achieved this month here was a likeness of James Forgan, the veteran financier.

Garden Club Gathering in Boston.

To the great annual gathering of the Garden Clubs of America on Boston's north shore, which opens tomorrow, have gone several representatives of the Garden Club of Illinois. Among them Mrs. Horace Martin, president of the Illinois club, Mrs. T. C. Farwell, Mrs. Tiffany Blake, Mrs. Walter Brewster, and Mrs. Edward L. Ryerson.

An Amiable Teuton.

Those of Chicago's gay world whose memories go back seven or eight years will recall the German vice consul here, Auguste Schillinger, a cheerful, well educated Teuton, whose suave and friendly manners made him many friends here. In 1913 he was transferred to the Philippines, the war came and with it the report, a couple of years later, that he had fallen in battle. Even his parents in Munich believed this. So firmly was this demise established in the minds of his former Chicago friends that when a much older, leaner Schillinger hailed Arthur Aldis on a Paris boulevard in May it was a distinct shock to the latter.

NEWS OF CHICAGO SOCIETY

It was no ghost, however. The amiable Bavarian had fought on the Russian front and been lost sight of in the terrible confusion of that bloody wilderness. Now he is in the German embassy at Paris, second in command, though what the title of his office is I don't know, as I don't think that an ambassador has yet been sent there from Berlin.

He inquired eagerly about his Chicago acquaintances and received with incredulity the news that there were many German war manners we didn't like and hadn't yet forgotten. He himself was ready to forget them and bury the war hatchet.

When cream is added to coffee the flavor of the cup varies greatly in proportion to the quality and quantity of the cream. Careful tests, however, have established with great nicety the correct proportions of highest quality cream to best quality coffee, and that is why the cream served with coffee at Henrici's is in the exact quantity that is supplied.

Some night when you drop in at Henrici's for late supper you will perhaps think of this statement as you pour cream into your coffee. But this is only one small detail of the many that have been worked out to the benefit of Henrici's patrons.

What I Have Found Out

I am just a girl as young and ambitious. But I the University and already stenography. Yes, and would give up the knowledge for anyth

Typewriting Is a Universal Need

Thanks to stenography, I able, not alone to go back to lege, but also to do extra which pays well. The boys at my College who have typew and shorthand are the ones good by the outside. You see, can do some one thing that is wanted.

Please Heed My Message

If you are about to leave H School and are thinking, not of business course, but of a colleg university, learn stenography how.

Either treat it as an extra subje to be taken at night, or take it as during the Summer term. I regretted the time given over learning it—nor will you. And t fact that the money you can earn you want to leaves an independ feeling that can be described onl by those who possess it. It is w you surely must have craved a least once, haven't you?

The Best Is None Too Good

For your business training, l wise an old, established institu such as Bryant & Stratton. T classroom atmosphere, location a specialist instructors, it is a sch unequaled. Why not visit it and let your judgment decide?

This is Not a Mere Advertisement

I want girls to know what I h found out—that the present is a guarantee of the future, and t one may often be glad of ste raphy, even at College. Think over!

BRYANT & STRATTON BUSINESS COLLEGE

Lake View Building, CHICAGO

* This Business College, through its Advertising Agents, will be glad to verify the facts of the above statements.

A Message to You from Your Future

Occasionally there comes a time of decision in your life; a time fraught with numerous possibilities, a time for wise choice.

Occasionally you seek the advice of friends and are glad to let their judgment guide you.

Occasionally you hear of women left helpless on the mercy of the world, and then you resolve to run no risk thru unpreparedness.

Gregg School, with its intensive, comprehensive, resultful courses, is more than occasionally suggested.

We say the curriculum is resultful because of the attitude of business men toward our graduates, because of the demand exceeding our enrollment.

We say comprehensive because in addition to Gregg shorthand and touch typewriting a rigid training in office practice and secretarial duties is included along with other commercial subjects. Finally, we say intensive because the rapidity of any student's progress depends on the student's application and earnestness.

Won't you visit our modern business training center?

YOUNG WOMEN!

OUR SCHOOL is unable to keep up with the demand made by our customers for OUR GRADUATES.

This condition is brought about by constantly increasing sales and by the realization on the part of Accounting Officials that one properly trained COMPTOMETER OPERATOR can do more figure work than 3 or 4 clerks working mentally.

The Comptometer School Course will fit you for a very desirable position in 4 to 6 weeks. Call or phone and talk the matter over with Miss Graves, Head of SCHOOLS.

The Solution of the Shoe Question

TOP NOTCH
BEACON FALLS
SUMMER FOOTWEAR

Service Shoe

Save shoe money. Beat the high cost of living. Instead of expensive leather shoes wear good looking, fine fitting Top Notch Service Shoes, at less than half the price of leather footwear.

These money saving shoes are made of an extra quality, rich brown duck, with neat trimmings of fine black leather. They are not at all like ordinary canvas shoes with rubber soles. These are real shoes. They have regular heels and extension soles that look just like leather soles but made of fine brown rubber, to match the upper part of the shoe.

Top Notch Service Shoes are comfortable from the first moment you put them on. They require no painful "breaking in." The pliable duck and a fine cork insole provide ventilation and add to your comfort. The springy brown rubber soles and heels take the jar off the spine, eliminate fatigue and make walking easier. They protect the feet in wet weather.

You can wear Top Notch Service Shoes with pride in their good looks. For business men, workers in shops, stores and factories, outdoor workers and particularly for boys, who wear out shoes fast—they are fine, economical shoes.

Gym-Bal Shoe

Young men and boys want a real athletic looking white or brown canvas shoe for summer. The Gym-Bal is just the shoe—good looking, durable and low in price. It is made of strong, extra quality duck with neat leather trimmings, and an ankle patch of leather on the inside of each shoe, to prevent the canvas from wearing at this vital point.

The corrugated, non-slip sole of this shoe is dark red rubber, full of life and spring and speed. The rubber is so good that the sole will outlast two ordinary rubber soles. It is a great shoe for general wear and for all kinds of sports, indoors and out.

The great durability of the "Gym-Bal" and its good looks have made it the most popular shoe in the Top Notch line. Wear them at less than half the price of leather shoes. If you have a boy you'll find them the most satisfactory and economical shoes you ever put on his feet.

See these Top Notch shoes of fine duck at any of the stores listed below. Let the Top Notch Cross on the sole be your guide in buying rubber soled footwear and rubbers that look better, fit better and wear better than the ordinary kind.

NEWS OF THE RELIGIOUS WORLD

Summer Conference Attendance Grows Among All Churches

By the Rev. Frederick L. Gratiot

PROGRAMS of a number of summer religious conferences have been announced. Nearly every denomination has inaugurated summer schools both for clergy and laity, at which church workers are trained for their tasks.

Garrett Biblical institute is conducting a summer school for rural pastors. The theological seminary of the University of Chicago has its summer quarter, which is attended by theological students as well as ordained ministers.

Shorter conferences have been arranged for the laity, who as a rule arrange their vacations so as to permit them to attend. One of the most popular of these is the missionary education conference held at Lake Geneva from July 23 to Aug. 2. It is interdenominational, being held at the Y. M. C. A. camp, under the auspices of the interchurch world movement. For the Methodists there is the camp meeting at Desplaines, which opens on July 7 and continues through the 18th. The Racine conference at Racine, Wis., is held by the Episcopal church from July 6 to 16.

"The Lake Geneva conference is for the purpose of bringing together for recreation and training in leadership those who earnestly desire to fit themselves for positions of greater usefulness," reads the announcement of the missionary education conference of the interchurch world movement. Methods of missionary education for church and Sunday school will be discussed by experts.

The program for the Des Plaines camp meeting of the Methodist church places emphasis upon evangelism, rather than upon religious education or missions. There will be an evangelical motion picture story, called "The Streams of Life," taken from the life of John Maynard. This will be shown Thursday and Saturday of the first week. Dr. Ita Kahn, native Chinese medical missionary will speak to the W. F. M. S. on Women's day. General Superintendent Nicholson will preach at the first Sunday morning service and General Superintendent Homer C. Stuntz of Omaha the second Sunday.

There will be missionary conferences under the direction of Dr. A. F. Clark, district superintendent northern district, and addresses will be given at different times by Dr. Norman E. Richardson, head of the department of religious education of Northwestern university, and other speakers. Dr. J. S. Ladd Thomas will have charge of the evangelistic services the second week. Dr. F. D. Bovard, the new secretary of the board of Sunday schools, who succeeded General Superintendent Edgar Blake, will speak. Dr. Clark is president of the camp meeting committee.

The Rev. Johnston Myers, D. D., celebrates today his twenty-fifth anniversary as pastor of Immanuel Baptist church, Michigan avenue and Twenty-fourth street. There will be special services today and a reception for Dr. and Mrs. Myers on Tuesday evening.

Immanuel church is one of the oldest churches in Chicago, and one of the first in the Baptist denomination. It has constantly adapted itself to the changing conditions that beset a city church, so that it now serves its constituency effectively.

The history of the church will be reviewed at the services today and proper testimonies will be made to Dr. Myers.

Three Chicagoans were ordained last week by Archbishop Glennon at St. Louis. They are graduates of the divinity school of the St. Louis university. They are the Rev. Terence Kane, S. J., the Rev. Charles P. Sullivan, S. J., and the Rev. Joseph Georgen, S. J.

At "the Racine conference for church workers" held by the Episcopal church there will be daily classes in mission study, religious education, and social service. There will be the daily Bible class for the whole conference under the direction of the Rev. Davis L. Ferris of Rochester, N. Y. Father Harvey Officer of the order of the Holy Cross will be chaplain of the conference and in charge of services.

Among the members of the faculty are Bishop Irving P. Johnson of Colorado, Bishop James Wise of Kansas, the Rev. L. N. Caley of Philadelphia, and the Very Rev. Charles Lathrop of Milwaukee. Dean Lutkin of Northwestern University Music school will have charge of the music. The Rev. Charles H. Young, rector of Christ church, Chicago, is dean of the faculty of the conference. The Rt. Rev. W. W. Webb, bishop of Milwaukee, is president of the executive board.

The Rev. William B. Stoskopf, rector of the Church of Ascension, La Salle and Elm streets, was elected president of the Round Table, the association of the clergy of the Episcopal church, at its annual business meeting last week. The Rev. Charles V. L. Street, priest in charge of the Cathedral of SS. Peter and Paul, was elected secretary.

The forty-ninth annual convention of the Roman Catholic Total Abstinence union of Illinois will meet this afternoon at 2 p. m. at the K. of C. hall, 165 West Madison street. John F. Cunneen is president of the union, and the Rev. W. J. Kinsella is spiritual director.

Three Chicagoans were ordained last week by Archbishop Glennon at St. Louis. They are graduates of the divinity school of the St. Louis university. They are the Rev. Terence Kane, S. J., the Rev. Charles P. Sullivan, S. J., and the Rev. Joseph Georgen, S. J.

Gasoline Famine Panic Exploded by U.S. Reports

National Reserves Now Show 626,000,000 Gallons

BY J. L. JENKINS.

UNCLE SAM'S highly disturbing gasoline famine is purely mental. Supplies, both on hand and accumulating, are increasing and the motor world can now emerge safely from the cloud of gloom perpetrated by the premature prophets who for months have been drawing word pictures of a gasless universe.

In the latest report by the United States bureau of mines it is shown that reserve stocks on hand at the refineries in March totaled over 626,000,000 gallons, that Mexico is almost doubling its shipments of the modern elixir of speed life each year, and that new refining methods are resulting in a 10 per cent increase in production from oil.

The gasoline panic, a specter which has swept the country and has caused no little amount of financial loss and anxiety in automotive circles generally, has been purely psychological, in the opinion of the federal trade commission. The failure in certain of the north Texas fields, the government investigators believe, upset some oil operators and made an immediate shortage seem possible.

Midwest refiners, the commission reports, are getting a 35 per cent gasoline yield from crude oil, although plants elsewhere are registering but 12 to 22 per cent. Installation costs and lack of labor facilities are given as reasons for the delay in general changes in refining processes which eventually will mean a 60 per cent increase in the American gasoline supply.

David White of the United States geological survey further dispels the gloom following an investigation of the Texas oil fields.

"Shale oil deposits are a possible source of oil in amounts far greater than all the available natural petroleum in this hemisphere," he declares in his report. "They form an enduring asset, sufficient to sustain an enormous ultimate load for an indefinite period when sufficient machinery for this industry has been developed."

Despite the facts and figures, government agencies still advise strict economy in the use of gas. Motor vehicles are the heaviest consumers. In 1919 they burned 3,167,854,400 gallons of the total 3,808,390,649 gallons total. Other avid gas consumers include airplanes, motor boats, railroad motor cars, farm machinery, stationary engines, paint and varnish manufacturers, the cleaning industry, gasoline stoves, and rubber manufacturers.

Cross Country Run.

The Chicago Motor club will hold the first of a series of cross country runs today.

The run will be to Round Lake, Ill., and over 200 cars are expected to be in line when the motorcade leaves Logan Square, the meeting place, at 9 o'clock this morning. A service car will travel with the party to take care of tire or motor trouble.

GASOLINE ALLEY—MERELY A GENTLE HINT

MY FUNNIEST MOTORING EXPERIENCE

Every one who has taken the road in a motor car has some story to tell. What is your best one? The Tribune will pay $1 for every letter published in "My Funniest Motoring Experience." Write as briefly as possible, on one side of the paper only, and address Funniest Motoring Experience, The Sunday Tribune, Chicago.

High and to the Right.

After driving about for hours one rainy night, trying vainly to find the road from Warren to Freeport, Ill., and apparently arriving at the same crossroads every fifteen minutes or so, I appealed to the back seat for help.

"Bill," I said to a droll chap, who had taken little part in our direction arguments, "we've all taken a guess; let's hear from you just once and see where we land. Which way?"

"Go ahead," replied Bill calmly, removing his pipe and settling back comfortably. "I'm no automobile directory, but the next time we pass Beloit, Wis., I'm goin' to get out and go to bed!"

G. E. H.

Her Comeback.

The lights on the car coming toward us were blinding.

"Dim your lights," I yelled when we came abreast.

"Damn your own lights," returned a shrill, feminine voice, and we both went on our way.

T. M. E.

Heavy Firing.

The old bus was rambling right along for a good day's fishing, when suddenly the left rear tire blew out with a report like a naval gun. We stopped. A few feet behind us a flivver stopped too and a gentleman got out, coming toward us with a blowout patch in his hand. It was quite warm and I recognized it at once as our own trouble maker. "Glad to be of service," remarked the gentleman. "This just came flying into my car so hard I thought it must be a bullet and your party a crew of road agents. It was a great idea to make these things of rubber instead of lead!"

R. F. W.

One Sure Way.

Half way up a Hinsdale hill we overhauled a heavy motor truck whose engine stopped just as we came laboring up. The truck slid back about a foot and our own woman driver immediately killed our engine. We started to slide back too, and instead of remembering the brakes we all jumped out and pushed the car the remainder of the way up the hill.

D. S.

No Emergency.

When my friend, the boss of our town street department, put his inspection truck up for repairs recently, it nearly cost him his life. He substituted a horse and buggy for his road trips and on the first day out started to cross some tracks just ahead of an oncoming train. When he discovered the danger he began wildly to tramp the buggy floor searching for the brakes. The old horse saved the day. He knew enough to stop before we were struck.

A. L. G.

Mileage Saving.

When you change from normal size to oversize tires it will be necessary to change the speedometer gear if you want the instrument to read absolutely accurately. The rule to follow is that the number of teeth in the large speedometer gear—that is, the one attached to the road wheel, must be twice the diameter of the tire in inches. For instance, if your car is equipped with 32x3½ inch tires the speedometer gear should have sixty-four teeth. But if you put on the oversize tire which fits the same wheel—i. e., 32x4—the large speedometer gear should be changed to a sixty-six tooth size.—Motor Life.

Elgin Course Is Groomed to Show Broken Records

PERSISTENT work on the Elgin road race course has brought the surface of the highway into a condition far superior to any road race course in the country.

Work has been going on steadily pretty much all spring, and today the surface is ideal for speed. The roughness on the north leg has been removed, so that this section is today better than the south leg, and the latter has always been ideal.

Soft spots and small depressions have been filled with gravel, the road has been graded and scraped and most persistently dragged, until it is today faster than ever. In addition, the narrow spots have been widened, some excessive crown has been removed, and next month the road will receive its first bath of oil. Then, before the race set for Aug. 21, another coating of dust layer will be spread on.

Director Charles Root is authority for the statement that absolute promises have been received for the entry of the Monroe, Frontenac, and Duesenberg teams, which will include Gaston Chevrolet, Tommy Milton, and Jimmy Murphy. In addition the entry of Cliff Durant has been received, and Ralph De Palma and Ralph Muiford have promised to be on hand to start in the 1920 Elgin, whose prizes and guaranties amount to $15,000 cash, besides the Cole trophy.

Royal Car.

The late czar's six cylinder French phaeton will soon be offered for sale in this country.

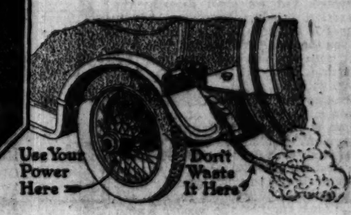
Why Be Stalled By Plugs That Foul?

Arc-O Ribbon-Fire



Use Your Power Here — Don't Waste It Here

THE RIBBON FIRE SPARK
Has Solved the Gas Problem for Cars of All Makes

The Arc-O Ribbon Fire is the first successful attempt to build a spark plug that meets the change in gas. It solves the problem that has baffled designers of the most prominent motor cars on the market.

The big, shattering Ribbon Fire spark of the Arc-O gets as much power out of the heavy, drizzly gas of today as was obtained from the finest volatile fuel before the war. For gasoline contains as much power in its present form as it ever did, but to get the power out, it needs this great Ribbon Fire that is four times as effective as the old-style plugs.

Fires Months Without Fouling

The Arc-O fires without fouling 20 times longer than any other plug we know, because its Pistol Barrel Core uses each downward explosion to dry off and blow off the particles of oil and gas that collect, carbonize and foul the ordinary plug. The Arc-O fires without fouling for months—perhaps years—even in cylinders passing oil.

Ask the nearest dealer to show you the large parallel firing surface of the Arc-O's electrodes where the spark waves up and down in a ribbon of fire. By this method no spot can overheat and burn the points or pre-ignite the gas, as with the ordinary plug. Thousands of car, truck and tractor owners are rapidly replacing old-time plugs with the Arc-O—even in brand new motors.

J. C. CROUTCUP (Nichols Auto Co., Nichols, Ia.): "I had one cylinder in my motor that would foul so badly that cleaning was necessary every forty or fifty miles. This trouble has entirely disappeared since using Arc-O Plugs."

J. F. PALMER (Consulting Engineer, Buffalo, N. Y.): "I installed Arc-O Plugs in my Pierce-Arrow and found that the average result checked 1 mile and a half increase per gallon. This figures 20% mileage increase."

PROF. DANIEL ROESCH, M.E., the national engine authority of Armour Institute of Technology of Chicago, tested a set of Arc-O Plugs for over 2,000 miles in a car that previously had run 18,000 miles without having had the cylinders rebored. Here is his report:

"Car Travel, Miles.....2,079
"Inspection, Cleaning and Adjustments .....None
"Gasoline, Average Miles per Gallon.....17.23

"On completion of the test I found the Arc-O Plugs practically as clean as when first installed."

MOTORDOM

Keep Close Watch on the Lungs of Your Gas Motor

Valve Systems Demand Expert Attention Now and Then

BY HIGH SPEED.

THE automobile engine is much like a human being in one particular, its functional well being is largely dependent on a respiratory system. By this expression we mean that part of its mechanism that has to do with breathing in of the fuel vapor and the expelling of the burned gases after combustion has taken place. The respiratory function of the engine is controlled by the valves. If the valves which permit the fuel to enter the combustion chamber do not perform their work properly, much of the power of the motor will obviously be lost. Again, it is just as important to get the burned gases out of the way after combustion, for their continued presence in the combustion chamber will contaminate the fresh fuel. Granting then the importance of the valve system, a brief study of the unit, its common failings and how to remedy them may be interesting and helpful.

To begin with, there are five definite types of valve gears. The most popular type consists of a single cam shaft, operating push rods, which directly control the valves. This is the type that is used on L-head engines, by far the commonest type of power plant. The next type is the valve in head, which means that the valves are located in the heads of the cylinders, the operation being achieved by means of vertical rods and rocker arms. These rocker arms are merely pivoted levers, operated from vertical rods, which extend up from a push rod, driven by an ordinary cam shaft. The next valve type is known as the T head, which operates on the same principle as the L head, but has two cam shafts, one for intake and the other for exhaust valves. The fourth type also has valves in the heads of the cylinders, but the cam shaft is placed on top of the cylinders instead of being in the crank case. The final type is the sleeve valve, which are simply ports in sliding sleeves which are actuated by eccentric shafts corresponding to the cam shaft of ordinary practice.

Most car owners understand something of the way in which valves are operated, but we shall describe the operation briefly. The camshaft is geared to the crankshaft, and as it revolves the cams are brought into contact with the valve lifter, which is a cylindrical bit of steel, moving up and down within a guide. As the lifter is forced upward it pushes the valve open against the resistance of a spring. When it reaches its limit of upward movement it sinks down again and the spring closes the valve. Obviously the position and size of the cams and other parts of the valve gearing must be accurately determined to keep the valve open for just the proper length of time. Also the valves must open at exactly the right instant in relation to the position of the piston.

The modern tendency in engine design is to keep the entire valve mechanism exposed to a perpetual spray of oil. In some designs pipes are provided, but in others the valve system is located inside the crank case, where it gets splash lubrication from the connecting rods. As a result of this tendency the wear and consequent noisy operation of the valve system, which used to be almost universal, has been largely eliminated. Nevertheless, the average car owner does not give his valve system the care, or rather watching, that it needs, and small things often develop into big failures.

For instance, it is not uncommon to find an excessive leakage of oil down the sides of the valves. This is caused by wear of the valve stem or stem guide, usually brought about by insufficient lubrication. Something may have prevented oil from getting to the mechanism, and the result has been excessive and rapid wear. Or the condition may be caused by the fact that the valve is pushed sideways whenever it is raised because of a bent stem, a worn tappet or stem bottom. It frequently happens that the stem will be struck at one point only, inducing excessive side thrust, wearing the valve stem guide. When the guides have been worn in this way it is possible to ream them out and fit valves with oversize stems.

One of the commonest of the valve failures is worn cams. The worn cam slaps against its follower and, worse still, it alters the lift of the valve. This has the effect of shutting off part of the fuel supply of the engine or of reducing the time for scavenging, so that all the burned gases cannot escape from the combustion chamber. The only remedy for this condition is to install a new camshaft.

CARRIES A KICK.—After a dozen fatalities had occurred at this Pennsylvania crossing on the Lincoln highway at Bucyrus, O., the chamber of commerce established its famous warning: "Caution Beats Regrets." One vehicle a minute passes over the crossing during daylight hours and none of them misses the startling sign these days.

MOTORDOM

Good Roads Plank in G. O. P. Stand Marks Motor Era

Highway Transportation Recognized as Big Modern Issue

"A NATIONAL inquiry on the coördination of rail, water, and motor transportation with adequate facilities for receiving, handling, and marketing food."

This is the exact verbiage used in the agricultural plank adopted by the Republican party in the Chicago national convention. The travel and transport bureau of the B. F. Goodrich Rubber company calls attention to the fact that for the first time in the history of national political conventions motor transportation has been recognized as a definite factor in the nation's economic fabric. This is significant because of the short period motor transport has been a unit in the distribution scheme—its birth really dating at the start of the world war.

Realizing that the future of motor transportation is dependent on good roads and that both are vital to the economic distribution of farm products and manufactured materials, the Republican party incorporated the following plank: "We favor liberal appropriations in coöperation with the states for the construction of highways, which will bring about a reduction in transportation costs, better marketing of farm products, improvement in rural postal delivery, as well as meet the needs of military defense."

It was confidently expected that a good roads plank would be incorporated in the platform after every candidate for the presidency went on record as favoring increased good roads construction.

Eyes are turned now toward the Democratic convention in San Francisco. Farmers, shippers, motorists, and good roads advocates are focusing their attention on the Democratic planks on motor transport and highway development.

While leaders of both political parties have gone on record for better roads and highways in a general way, they have not expressed their views on a national system of highways and the ways and means of financing such a project. These questions will undoubtedly get prominent discussion during the coming campaigns.

GOSSIP OF THE AUTO TRADE

LEGAL barriers against advertising a nationally known article at cut rate prices for the purpose of selling competition were raised last week when the "Fyrac" Manufacturing company of Rockford was granted a permanent injunction against the Graves Cycle and Auto Supply company of Bay City, Mich., forbidding the latter from using the Rockford firm's name in cut rate advertising.

The Louis Geyler company, Chicago Dort distributors, are out in front in a campaign for the announcement in automobile advertising of a price on cars covering the actual salesroom cost, rather than the f. o. b. price at the factory.

Studebaker employés, 7,000 of them, enjoyed a holiday yesterday in celebration of the opening of new $20,000,000 company plants at South Bend, Ind.

Another transcontinental road record was broken last week, when a Packard truck pulled into New York from Los Angeles after thirteen days and ten hours on the road. Pneumatic tires were used on the trip, which brought the truck's life mileage to 130,000.

Distributors representing the Nash Motors company in every section of the country attended a three days' conference last week in Kenosha. It was announced that distributors' contracts call for $79,000,000 worth of business in the next twelve months.

Standard Box Car.

A suggestion has been made to the heads of the large railroad systems of the country by an automobile manufacturer relative to a standardized type of freight car to be used in transporting automobiles.

The suggestion is that all automobile box cars be made seventy-five feet in length, mounted on six wheel trucks. If this could be done it would mean a reduction in the cost of the average automobile to the consumer, because of the decreased cost of transportation.

As a further suggestion, the railroad companies are asked to consider the discontinuance of the common thirty-six foot box car and substitute as a standard the forty foot cars, equipped with wide side and end doors.

Clans Gathering for Celebration on Pike's Peak

THE one hundredth anniversary of the first ascent of Pike's peak will be celebrated in Colorado Springs on July 14, when special exercises will be held at the summit and along the automobile highway that climbs eighteen miles over a serpentine route to the top, 14,109 feet above sea level.

Although Lieut. Zebulon M. Pike, the explorer, first discovered Pike's peak in 1806, he never scaled the mountain, branding the task as impossible for a human being. But Dr. Frank James, a member of the expedition of Maj. Long in 1820, essayed the feat on July 14, 1820, making the journey from Fountain creek, near Colorado Springs, to the summit. Maj. Long, in honor of James' accomplishment, named the peak James peak, but as early as 1840 trappers and plainsmen named it Pike's peak, and the name remained.

Since then 2,000,000 people have visited the summit, it is estimated, the crowds of tourists in the last twenty-five years forming the bulk. In 1878 a bridle path was built, a wagon road to the summit was built in 1880, and in 1891 the cog wheel railroad, nine miles long, was built. Burros were used also at that time.

In 1916 the present automobile road was built, at a cost of $300,000, after two years of construction work and many difficulties, especially in securing labor. This road is eighteen miles long, rises 6,695 feet in that distance, has an average grade of 7 per cent and a maximum grade of 10½ per cent, with 42 per cent of the line in curves. It is twenty feet wide, with curves as wide as fifty feet.

Walking races, burro races, and motorcycle races have been made to the top, and many noted race drivers, including Ralph Mulford, Barney Oldfield, and Hughie Hughes, took part in the automobile races in 1916. Mulford made the best time for the twelve mile course from Crystal Creek to the summit, this being 18 minutes and 26 seconds.

In September the auto hill climb contest, which was discontinued during the war period, will be resumed, as well as an airplane race around the peak from Denver.

Official Tests on Leading Cars Show That Automatic Steam Carburetor Increases Mileage, Speed and Power

THESE figures compiled by such authorities as Automotive Departments of the Chicago Motor Club, Motor News, and several Chicago newspapers.

The Automatic Steam Carburetor is an auxiliary carburetor used in conjunction with—and does not replace—your gas carburetor. It increases the power, speed and smoothness of the motor, reduces fuel consumption, eliminates carbon and keeps spark plugs clean. As a result you get every ounce of power out of your gasoline, which burns clean.

Owners—See your nearest dealer. Put the "Automatic" on your car. If it doesn't do as we say, your money will be cheerfully refunded.

HOW THE CHALMERS
HOT SPOT AND RAM'S-HORN HAVE INFLUENCED A NATION

SO definite has been the public's acceptance of Hot Spot and Ram's-horn and so highly efficient has the Chalmers become as a result of their use that these two devices now influence a nation.

1—They have made buyers of cars insist on an engine that would get out the power that nature stored away in gasoline.

2—They have caused a decided demand for less vibration in a car with the attendant results of longer life and more comfort.

3—They have caused an insistence for the elimination of frequent spark plug fouling, burned bearings, scored cylinders—eliminations which lower the cost of maintenance.

4—They have caused an emphatic demand for cool running on a hot day and quick starting on a cold day.

In other words, the acceptance by the public of Hot Spot and Ram's-horn have recast standards of judging motor cars and this influence now is felt wherever cars are built.

For Hot Spot and Ram's-horn accomplish much by transforming raw, heavy fuel into fine, smooth power and providing new virtues that buyers now seek in a motor car. Hence the growth in public belief that Chalmers is one of the few great cars of the world.

TRIBUNE TOURS

VI.—To the Indiana Lakes and Fort Wayne.

LIFE'S handicap for the discouraged tourist this season may be reduced considerably by the following delightful run to Hoosierdom's "Happy hunting ground." The route journey leads east by southeast to find one of the few really pleasant week-end routs from Chicago away from congested roads with their rutted, gravel worn surfaces and into the heart of country contentment.

No more than twelve miles of rough going will be encountered in the trip which follows the Lake George road through the industrial district to the newly concreted Ridge road, and branches from the main trunk lines at Valparaiso. In and about Hobart the main roads are badly cut up, but the remainder of the tour justifies these few miles of careful driving.

No tire ever produced has grown so rapidly in favor as have Gillette Tires. The second year sale of Gillettes was greater than the second year sale of any other brand ever placed on the market.

Gillette Tires out-sold all other makes in a like period of time because they render more service per dollar of cost than the greatest mileage at least cost. There's no other reason.

This greatest of mileage value is gained through might derived from the perfected Gillette Chilled Rubber Process.

Toughens rubber as iron is toughened when changed to steel; prevents tread and fabric separation—reduces sand blisters and blowouts—increases resistance—multiplies endurance—makes rubber heat-proof and cold-proof, resulting in the most serviceable tire for any motoring service on any machine. Cord and fabric non-skid. Put one or a full set on your car. Lower tire costs. Get rid of tire cares. If there is no Gillette dealer in your town write our General Sales Office.

Why is the large, expensive car similarly equipped? Cord tires stand the weight and cut down heavy fuel consumption.

In the first few 1,000 miles McGraw Cords save enough in cost of gas to absorb their extra cost over fabrics.

ART

Group of Mucha's Mural Paintings Typifies Excellence

By Eleanor Jewett.

IT SEEMS but a minute since I last entered the Art institute some months ago, yet I realized that time had passed when I found that the exhibitions which the galleries had haunted in March had given place to Gothic tapestries, the work of the art students, and the five beautiful mural paintings by Alphonse Mucha. These last deserve fresh mention in this column. They form part of a series of twenty mural decorations, depicting incidents in the history of the Slavic race, to be presented to the city of Prague by Charles R. Crane and the artist.

Possibly because it is the simplest in composition "Korand Addressing the Converted Patriots" is the most directly impressive of the paintings. The figure of the orator alone on the scaffolding, tense against the sky, his only companion on that aerial perch the flags of the country, is magnificent in its effect of isolated power. Below him is the crowd, a scattered handful of pale faces thrown into relief by the paler stretches of snow covered country in the background. Much more telling is this than the companion mural depicting the crowded church where another speaker is holding forth to a mass of intent auditors.

But, though one may thus choose a single scene in personal preference to the others, yet so remarkable are the five considered together that it is difficult to handle them in criticism in any but group form. Taking them as a whole, one can say frankly that they typify excellence in composition, in drawing—a point not always true when such vast subjects are considered—in color harmony, in vitality, and in sincere exposition of a tragic history.

A greater contrast could not be found for these paintings than the exhibition in gallery 46 of Indo-Persian paintings, the gift of Miss L. M. Buckingham. The manner of this kind of work is too well known to be long dwelt upon here. The paintings are miniature pictures, with much delicate delineation of incidents accented in gold and scarlet. Each figure is concisely chiseled; there is no mistaking the least detail in any of the pictures; there is no flowing of persons or beasts, or flowers, or trees, or sky together. The sky ends; the king ends; the elephant ends; the flowers end. Tiny, delicate, minute, perfect, side by side they stand, each a completed entity in grass, where every green blade is guardian to the Persian artist's passion for clean edges and undimmed finiteness of earthly things.

In Gunsaulus hall the exhibit of weaving and needlework by Ingeborg and Olga Olson makes an interesting diversion for those who may be a bit weary of the pictures in the upper halls. There are many beautiful pieces of work to be found here. To my mind the most attractive is the embroidered heavy linen in the case to the left as one enters. The panel near it is impressive with its group of eagles perched on low cliffs beside a clear, smooth running sea of blue.

There are also some attractive scarfs, a few pillows, one or two woven rugs, and a scattering of such decorative articles as panels and spreads and bags, all of which add interest to the possibilities of fine hand work with needle and loom.

Not less imposing than the results of its labors is the large loom which stands in the center of the room, accompanied by an old fashioned spinning wheel. Miss Olson demonstrates weaving on Wednesday and Saturday afternoon at the Art institute, and it seems to me that her demonstrations are well worth the attendance of all those interested in this beautiful art.

The exhibit in the east wing of the institute of the work of the students of the art school has, I know, been fully reviewed in this column before, but, because I think the modeling shown this year is better than that shown last, I want to make another brief mention of it here. There are several very good portrait busts, a charming statue of a woman in the nude, another of a man, a group of panels, each one illustrative of good work, a charming child's head in relief, and several attractive figure groups, as well as two models for fountains.

One of the fountain models would serve well as a foil to the Pan-fountain shown by Sylvia Shaw in the exhibit of last spring. A little goose boy stands on a flat rock at one end of the pool and scatters grain over the water in taunting mockery of the tempted trio of geese which thrust forward their gaping beaks from their stand at the further edge of the unruffled pond.

The work of an art school must by its very nature deal with similar subjects year by year, so we find again walls devoted to showing the progress of the pupils in the different steps of art. The first gallery of the exhibit is given up to illustrations of various lettering, draperies, designs in color on a small scale, and some drawings in charcoal.

From this one goes to charcoal drawings of heads, of nude figures, of still life. Then into color—with a room of interesting and fairly excellent portraits. Finally one goes to the end gallery, where is found work by Hazel Frazee, work as charming in fancy and finish as any that is familiar to us under her name; work by Ottmar Gaul, which, to my mind, is a bit stiff in drawing and more than a little unsympathetic—the old fairy tales and romances need such gentle treatment—and other delightful work in oils and water colors by artists whose names I do not know, as well as one lovely child's head in pencil, by Miriam Pendleton.

There also are example of bead work to be seen, and of batik. A number of the posters are of interest and the two or three hat boxes are so thrillingly enticing that were they housing a hat I fear me one would buy the hat, no matter how unbecoming, just so as to have the hat box gracing the shelf of one's closet for ever after.

The various prizes were awarded as follows:

The Bryan Lathrop scholarship, $800, to John D. Broin.

The John Quincy Adams scholarship, $425, to Ida McClelland Stout.

The American Traveling scholarship, $125, to George D. Trimmer.

The Frederick Magnus Brand memorial prizes for composition, to Miriam Story, Raymond Appel, James Robertson, Todres Geller, and Fred Wonders.

Prizes in department of decorative design, to Mildred George and Veta Quire.

Faculty honorable mention—For composition, to Haidee Kenyon, Gladys Rockmore, Nan Chapman, Thelma Paddock, Alice Harris, and Barbara Maynard.

At the Newberry library are now on exhibition sketches and portraits of Indians from the far west. An eager invitation to see them is extended to all those interested in the lives of our few remaining redskins of Fennimore Cooper fame.

The galleries of the Arts club are closed for the summer months.

Various loan collections are to be placed on view in the Art institute when the exhibition of students' work has been withdrawn.

FLOWERS FOR THE LIVING

By Guy F. Lee.

Brows that are short and brows that are tall,
Expert noodles with vision blessed;
Amateurs whom most scribes appal,
Guys with a grouch upon their chest;
Sapient showgoers and the pest
Who gives vodvilyuns a curtain call;
Quick minds and those in need of a rest—
Percy Hammond delights them all.

Hidden beauties on stage and stall,
Books and plays of a charm unguessed;
Drama (sic) that deserves a bawl,
Fiction difficult to digest;
Prose and poetry's worst and best,
Humor's surprise and Slapstick's gall—
Vibrant and clear and with biting zest
Percy Hammond shows up them all.

Webster's dictionary is his thrall,
Words jump the hoop at his behest;
Lordy, Lordy, how he can maul
Sound and fury in hokum dressed!
When of sarcastic mood possessed
Rapier eases no subtler fall—
Alone he rides Criticism's crest:
Percy Hammond can lick them all.

This to a Live One's my bequest,
I'm tickled to scratch this merited scrawl:
When it comes to a writing fest
Perce jes' natcherly floors them all!

FARM AND GARDEN

Plant Breeding by Home Growers Proves Successful

By Frank Ridgway.

IN choosing decorative plants that fit every nook and corner around the home, one is certain to be impressed with the number of improved varieties of flowers every year. Such progress has been made in improving varieties and improvements in the improved that students of the plant must keep constantly digging to keep pace with the times.

Reminiscentially an old experienced grower remarked the other day as he walked through his suburban flower garden, pointing out some of the old and new varieties: "I wonder what Darwin, the great English naturalist, would think if he could take a stroll through a garden like this today and pluck a flower like that," pointing to a giant ostrich feather aster. "He would perhaps be more favorably impressed than he was when he said, 'no little discovery of mine ever gave me so much pleasure as the making out the meaning of heterostyle flowers.'"

The improvements that have been made with flowers are mostly through selection, and the selections made are based on the priciples laid down by Darwin many years ago. The aster is considered the most improved of all the common garden annuals. The improvement has been so marked that from blossoms about the size of a half dollar, they are now the size of huge chrysanthemums in some strains such as the astermum.

Characteristics Must Be Noted.

Improvements have been made where particular attention has been given to certain characteristics. There are now incurved and outcurved, quilled and plumed varieties. Two methods, selection and crossing or hybridization, may be used to develop a new variety. Here is a simple example of selection: A single bloom on an aster plant shows a tendency to have curling petals that twist over the yellow center. This bloom is protected, the seed saved and sown the next year. Some of the plants will repeat the curled trait, some more pronouncedly than others. More blooms are selected for seed to be sown. The crop is "rogued," that is, those which do not follow the desired trait are destroyed and in the course of a few seasons a strain of asters is fixed so that every seedling produces the curly trait.

A BORDER OF PERENNIALS.

DOUBLE DAISIES.

TUFTED PANSIES.

The columbine with its long spurred blossoms is a fine example of improvement by crossing and selection of the perennial flowers. The large flowered larkspur is a good example, starting from the old fashioned and small flowered larkspur.

Most all of the garden annuals have been doubled in size, and the style of growth has been regulated by one of these two methods. Through selection the earliness and lateness have been fixed. For instance, a cosmos plant, extremely late annual, through some chance of freakishness, bloomed in July. The seed from this blossom was saved and an early strain was fixed, but it lacked size. Size was then looked after and the result is a large flowered, early blooming strain of the cosmos plant.

Amateurs Often Successful.

Up to this time most of the improvement of plants has come through the work of scientists, and the amateur or those who grow flowers around the home have left this work for the expert to do. Botanists have taken plants with various characteristics and created new species as a man would build a house of a new design from pieces of rocks of different shapes. While the scientist, no doubt, handles the "tools" with more skill in building the "house," the new species of flowers, nevertheless, the average person who grows flowers in his own garden can do much toward improving varieties.

The improvement by selection is relatively a simple problem, for after one has fixed in mind the kind of a flower he wants, the task of reaching his idea is largely a matter of time, patience, and the ability to discriminate in picking out plants for their earliness, curliness, and size.

Home growers have probably stayed out of this work because they thought it required an intricate knowledge of botany before they could even start and the technical language of the scientist was too much for them to master before they attempted such work. During the last few years many amateurs have improved their flowers from year to year. Their advice, after tearing a leaf out of the scientists' book and striking out the technical phrases, is to save the largest and best flowers for seed. Save the flowers that exhibit desired characteristics most markedly and plant the seed from these plants the following year. Continue this until within a few seasons you have secured strains of the various varieties that are most desirable.

For those who do not save seed from plants grown in their own garden, it is advisable to buy selected varieties. They produce better flowers.

Double Petunia Experiment.

Most flower lovers are familiar with the old fashioned white and purple single petunias. They are not to be compared with the huge single frilled and waved varieties nor with the small flowered budding varieties that clothe themselves with blooms in such a fashion that the leaves are almost lost. It was selection that did this.

One of the most fascinating experiments for the amateur in plant breeding and one that anybody can easily do, is raising double petunia seed. It may be done by selection, but it is a difficult matter, for the more double the flower the less likelihood of its seeding. Cross fertilization is the method to use in raising double petunia seed, and any one can do it.

Select a fine single variety of the petunia for the seed plant. Then tear apart a double petunia blossom. Inside the blossom you will find small globe shaped objects attached to the end of fine, short stems. These globes give off dust or pollen. Take the anther, the globe part with the dust on its surface, and smear it over the pistil of the single petunia. The pistil is the seed bearing organ projecting from the center of the flower and surrounded by the anthers. Before applying the double pollen or dust to the single petunia flower the anthers or globes must be picked off the stamens or stems with a pair of tweezers.

This pollenizes the single flower which should be covered with a paper sack so bees cannot get to it. Save the seed. Some of the flowers that come from these seed will be double.

Recent Daisy Improvement.

Daisies have been greatly improved during the last few years. The Shasta daisy is a general favorite, a Burbanks production. The giant glistening white daisies in their various forms, some with double rows of petals, some fringed, curled, or twisted are the most popular of the summer perennials.

The tufted pansy, the kind that blooms in the fall, is another flower that has been highly developed. In England it is a favorite, and is now making its way slowly with American gardeners, and will probably become listed among the choice fall bloomers in this country. Its advantages over the regular type of pansies is that its flowers are held high above the foliage and it is better for cutting.

Try improving the ordinary varieties of flowers in your garden, and you will find more interesting things about the plants than just the rich colored petals and green leaves.

The Simplicity of a

MAXWELL

is Due to Special Steels

A Maxwell is a simple car. Its engine, axles, clutch, transmission and gears are the utmost in simplicity, which is the goal of scientific engineering.

Special steels have made this possible. They are steels made to Maxwell's own formulae, the result of thousands of tests and years of analysis.

These steels give a Maxwell the remarkable combination of extra strength and lightness in weight.

In this way complicated construction has been avoided. Simple design has naturally followed, and to this simplicity rare strength has been added by the use of these special steels.

Strains, twists, thrusts, shocks and blows are protected against in many other cars by reinforcements, extra weight in metals used, and a design that obviously is anything but simple.

In a Maxwell this simplicity has made the car easier to built, and it therefore is better built, easier to drive, and easier to care for.

That this should win friends for Maxwell is almost too obvious to call attention to.

Nearly 400,000 persons now drive a Maxwell, which is a very definite endorsement.

CADILLAC
STANDARD OF THE WORLD

THE TRUTH THAT EMBODIES ALL TRUTH

People are still going about with their eyes eagerly alight, hunting for the honest man and the honest product.

When that search is rewarded, nothing but betrayal can break or lessen their allegiance.

It has been pathetically true from the beginning of time, that men admire honor in others even when they have smirched it in themselves.

Humanity may be a million years old in point of time, but it is as young as this morning's sun in its pursuit of the ideal.

After two thousand years of disappointment and disillusion, the eternal verities and the eternal values still prevail.

The elemental truths are still true; the man whose word is good is still the secret hero of our inmost hearts.

We smile, perhaps, at the spectacular triumph of the trickster; but while we smile, we hate the trick by which he filched that sham success.

Even in an era of unbridled extravagance, when, on the surface, men appear to have lost all sense of proportion, that which is sound, and good, and true, is more admired, and more desired, than ever.

In such feverish times, the mediocre and the meretricious only seem to be admitted to equality with that which is worthy, because they fall heir to the overflow which excellence is unable to supply.

The process of discrimination between the sham and the solid, the superficial and the substantial, goes on, just as before, without interruption.

That which is unworthy carries its own punishment, and its own penalty—its true character is inevitably disclosed in due time, even though a temporary prosperity comes to it from the caprice of the unthinking.

When 'the tumult and the shouting' dies down, the strong man, the strong institution, the true artist, and the true workman, in any and every vocation, is more solidly entrenched than ever.

Even though it be surrounded, and seemingly obscured by sham and pretense, nothing in this world is discovered so surely as solid merit.

Nothing stands out so strikingly, by way of contrast, as genuineness and genius.

No special and painstaking effort of hand or heart, or brain or brawn, that goes to the building of something superior, is ever wasted.

Cheapness and compromise, substitution and surrender—these, in the long run, are the real sources of waste.

The unceasing search of the mass of mankind for that which is good and enduring—this is the only law of supply and demand with which the superior craftsman need concern himself.

Let him dedicate his life to the satisfaction of this restless hunger of the human heart, and he can, if he will, remove himself beyond the reach of rivalry.

This is the truth that embodies all truth; this is the truth that makes men free.

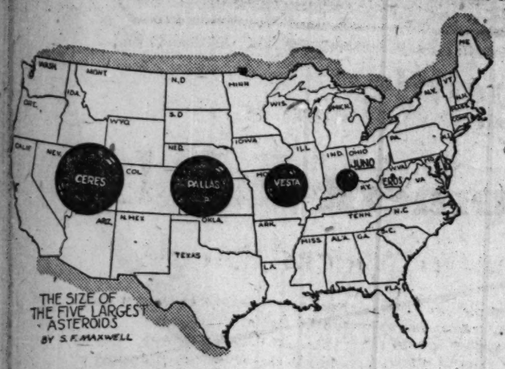
ASTRONOMY

IF A PLANET HIT THE EARTH.

WHAT would happen if the earth were to hit another body in space? Would it mean the destruction of our planet or injury to its inhabitants? Many people ask that question of astronomers, and there seems to be a real apprehension that danger to the earth exists from this source.

Science can give a complete answer. Our knowledge of the wanderers of space and their movements enables us to say that danger from flying meteors or asteroids is almost negligible.

Space is really very sparsely peopled, if judged by terrestrial standards. The distances between the planets are measured by the millions of miles, and between them there is only an empty expanse of vacuum. If they did not travel so rapidly, going miles per second where we go miles per hour, space would seem of appalling dimensions.



As it is, the chance of two large bodies hitting each other is very remote.

But supposing that the earth were actually to pass near an asteroid, one of those diminutive worlds which dot the solar system here and there. The earth, being larger and more powerful, would overtake it, and while it was yet a million miles away, would violently drag it out of its course. As the two bodies rushed together the asteroid would be pulled more and more until, losing all control of itself, it would sweep on upon us in a wild, erratic orbit.

But as the planet plunged toward the earth a strange thing would happen. About 8,000 miles above the surface it would enter a zone wherein no large solid can exist. Within this zone gravity exerts a very curious effect. It not only draws but tears and rends. No body that cannot hold together by its own cohesive force can exist in this zone, and this means that its size can never be larger than that of a small house.

Earth would begin picking off the loose rocks from the planetule as it fell, then widen the existing cracks in its surface, and then, while the watchers on earth were following it with bated breath, the little world would collapse with a flash of fire and become a plunging mass of meteorites.

But, you argue, wouldn't this flying swarm do as much, or more, damage to the inhabitants of the earth than a single large rock, whose effect might be localized? The answer is "No," and here is where the true value of our air is seen. A person walking along hardly notices the air, but in riding rapidly or traveling against a high wind its presence is very much in evidence. A body hitting what to us are yielding gases, when going at the speed of a meteor, finds that it had run into what was in effect almost a stone wall. The air will not yield to bodies of high velocity, and so every flying stone which is unlucky enough to get into it is immediately burned to powder. The flash of a shooting star indicates that some little wanderer has collided with the earth, and the effect is unfortunate for the little fellow. So it would be with the falling shower that would result if a planetoid hit the earth. There would be a brilliant flash of "falling stars," and perhaps a heavy rumble like distant cannonading, but the surface of the earth would never be touched.

"But suppose," you say, "we could get an asteroid safely transported to the earth's surface, and set up here. What would it do?" It would immediately collapse into a pile of stones. The highest mountains on earth are only five miles high, and they can only exist because they are buttressed up by massive plateaux. No mountain can push its head higher than this, no matter how it try. If it does, the gravity of the earth pulls it down again. A body ten miles in diameter on earth would be considered by gravity as a mountain, and would be flattened out accordingly.

J. W.: You will not be able to see Venus in July. There are no morning stars now. Jupiter has nine moons. Four of them are larger than our moon, and five are very small, only a few miles in diameter.

Oldfield Tires Win Again

At Uniontown, Pa., Saturday, Oldfield Tires won for Tommy Milton in his Deusenberg.

First Place—At an average speed of ninety-five miles an hour for two hundred and twenty-five miles!

Just as Oldfields won for Gaston Chevrolet in the 500-mile classic at Indianapolis, where for the first time in the history of the speedway the winner went through without a single tire change!

For years tire manufacturers have offered the verdict of the speedway as the best reason why you should use their tires.

Oldfield Tires at Indianapolis and again at Uniontown have established a record that settles all argument.

Murphy Door-Bed Co.,
22 W. Monroe St.,
Chicago, Ill.

Gentlemen:— Attention Mr. Johnson:

We are sending you by mail, under separate cover, blue prints of our plan #906 which provides for a Murphy Door-Bed. This plan was drawn for a family requiring three sleeping rooms regularly and desiring one spare bed-room. This plan was drawn in order to plan a house sufficiently large to provide four sleeping rooms on the second floor, that the cost of construction, owing to the increased size, exceeded our customers appreciation and our effort to overcome this difficulty and yet provide a spare bed-room resulted in the working out of Plan #906, above referred to.

This plan, as you will notice, provides a library or music-room on the first floor and contains a Murphy Door-Bed, thereby providing a room which can be used as a spare bed-room at anytime and yet is available for the use of the family at all times. The fact that this house, arranged in this way, can be built for about $1500 less than the four bed-room plan above referred to, will no doubt interest you. It's the reason of our mailing you blue print with this letter of explanation.

The house that is being built has been changed from frame construction to brick-veneer for the first story and stucco on the second story.

We take pleasure in stating that our experience with Murphy Door-Beds has been entirely satisfactory and we wish you the success which your product merits.

Yours very truly,
CITY AND SUBURBAN BUILDING COMPANY
GEN. MGR.

ALFALFA or FRUIT

Better than average crops of alfalfa and apples are reported from Redlands Mesa, Delta County, Colo., despite the late season. Irrigation water is plentiful and crops are all in splendid condition.

A tract on Redlands in alfalfa and fruit, or alfalfa only, makes a splendid and profitable summer home and can be left without danger during nongrowing season.

Alfalfa never winter kills nor has any dried out, and is always a profitable crop. The mesa is delightful for hunting, fishing, and beautiful territory is at one's door. An inspection trip is a revelation.

8C CAR FARE! 10C "L" FARE

...Do you want to escape the high cost of transportation?

If you do come down to Harris & Rodgers and purchase an automobile.

The owners of public transportation in their plea for higher fares blame the automobile for the shrinkage in their business.

The time has arrived when you can ride as cheaply in an automobile as you can in any public carry-all.

It is no longer necessary to be a strap-hanger or a germ inhaler. You can ride in comfort and breathe fresh air, make better time and go wherever you desire, whether in the city or country.

Are you still riding in the old fashioned way? The modern, efficient, safe, and comfortable way is in an automobile.

JULY 4TH!

CHICAGO STILL HELPS LONDON STORE GROW UP

Yankee Architect Plans for Selfridge.

BY AL CHASE.

Chicago still plays an important part in the development of London's first Yankee department store—opened by Harry G. Selfridge of Chicago in 1909. Ernest R. Graham of the architectural firm of Graham, Anderson, Probst & White of this city, who designed the original five story Selfridge store in Oxford street, has left for London to supervise the big addition now being built adjoining the present store on the west.

Although Selfridge's store at present makes no pretense of competing with Harrods' or Whiteley's in point of number of departments or size, when completed, the new addition will place it pretty well near the front in the list of big stores of the world.

Longer Than Field's.

For instance, it will cover the entire block bounded by Oxford, Duke, Orchard, and Somerset streets. Its Oxford street frontage will be 504 feet. Field's store has a frontage of only 324 feet on State street. The English block, of course, isn't as deep as the Chicago one, and Selfridge's store will be only six stories high; one story more is to be added to the original structure.

But will have a feature which will make it stand out in smoky old London, a city of medium height buildings. The London authorities, after long, weary months of negotiation, have granted a permit for a 350 foot tower. This will rise from the center of the Oxford street frontage, and will be visible from all parts of London.

Beauty First.

"Mr. Selfridge told us he wanted the most beautiful tower money could buy," said Architect Peirce Anderson. "At the base of the tower will be magnificent arches, with a sort of hall of fame in the top part, where statues of the great merchants of the world will be grouped. Mr. Selfridge believes the calling of a 'tradesman,' looked down upon in England, is a noble one, and his philosophy regarding his vocation and the relation of commerce to beauty is being exemplified in his store. He is trying to make it as beautiful and fine as he possibly can.

"We warned him that his tower base was extravagant and would use up valuable selling space, but he said he wanted it just as he had dreamed of it—as beautiful as money could make it."

Will Spend Millions.

Several millions of dollars will be spent before the store is complete and about two years' time taken. The foundations alone are costing around $680,000.

Another London prejudice at last has been overcome—the belief that large spaces in department stores are dangerous. The new part of Selfridge's will have bigger salesrooms instead of the chopped up, medium sized spaces for selling now common in England.

Mr. Selfridge's idea has been to put the London department store on a higher level of merchandising than it was when he first entered the British field. London already had department stores more complete so far as variety of departments was concerned than anything in Chicago or New York. But London didn't have a department store that lined up with Mr. Selfridge's ideals.

Trained in Chicago.

In Marshall Field's Mr. Selfridge got his training as a great merchant. He worked his way up to a partnership. Then when Schlesinger & Mayer went out of business he bought their complete stock. His venture wasn't a roaring success, however, and he sold out to Carson, Pirie, Scott & Co., who moved over from State and Washington, and a little later Mr. Selfridge invaded London, where after a stiff fight he won success and overcame most of the prejudice which faced him when he opened his Oxford street store.

One of the most picturesque additions to the rapidly growing colony of north shore country homes is the big farmhouse being built by William H. Colvin of W. H. Colvin & Co., stock brokers, about five miles west of Evanston, a little north of the Glen View club grounds. It was designed by Architect Ernest A. Mayo and will be finished the latter part of July.

The house grounds cover five acres, on which are a teahouse and a swimming pool, with an elaborate bath house, and an old fashioned bowling green. The house is designed in the old English manor style, with thatched roof, gables, battlements, prominent chimneys, dog trot, and office adjoining. It is semi-fireproof, of hollow tile and metal lath and stucco. The entrance and trimming are in Batavia stone. There are about twenty-two rooms.

Architects Plan Bureau to Help Chicago Home Builders

"Build Better Homes" is the slogan back of a new nation wide movement to help the prospective house owner do away with architectural difficulties, which has just reached Chicago. The Illinois Society of Architects made up of 475 members, of whom 325 are Chicagoans, has passed resolutions calling for cooperation with the Illinois chapter of the American Institute of Architects in the "Build Better Homes" movement.

It originated with the Minnesota chapter of the American institute where an architects' small house service bureau is in operation, giving architectural service to any one at a nominal cost.

"It will mean that instead of having to pay from $400 to $500 for architect's fees, a prospective builder can get services through our bureau for a nominal $25, with complete plans and all the necessary advice," said Architect B. H. Jillson. "Instead of a man building the wrong house on the right lot, we'll show him how to put up the right kind of a house, even if it's the wrong kind of a lot. Too many people are building any old kind of a house, just so it's a house, when they might just as well put up a building that's right all the way through."

Final steps in establishing the local bureau will be taken during the next two weeks.

The Blue Island Chamber of Commerce has launched a comprehensive program, involving a wide variety of improvements. Among these are better housing, water supply, street car service, additional play parks, a new Rock Island depot, the best educational opportunities, community spirit, more paving and a good road from the west, the patronizing of home industries, the installation of a day nursery, and the erection of a good hotel.

Other suggestions encouraged by the chamber are the installation of a city court, improved fire department and system of taxation, a community house, Americanization, daylight saving, relief from the smoke nuisance, and the option of modern street corner signs.

The Coal Shortage Threatens Every Home and Business

Exorbitant prices for the available supply of coal adds to the dilemma.

No need to talk to you, Mr. Coal User, Manufacturers, Real Estate Owners, Fuel Consumers in general, you know the situation. Many plants are operating on short supplies. Your coal orders for present and future use are taken "conditionally." Soft coal has been cheap coal. Result—wasteful burning methods. Now the price is up—waste must be stopped—laws prohibit smoke—accounting demands greater burning efficiency.

Conservation does not need to be "preached" to you—but what can you do? Conserve still further—get every degree of heat and power out of every pound of coal. How?

Saves from 25% to 35% on Coal Bills.
Produces More Live Steam Per Ton of Coal.
Maintains Uniform Temperature.
Reduces Firing Periods and Ash.
